KEEP UP TO RECORD.

Minnesota Will Make Its Usual Annual Increase in Butter.

There is every indication that Minnesota will make its usual record of a 7,000,000 pound increase in the production of butter for 1905.

Creamery reports are coming in slowly, but they furnish every sign that more than 90,000,000 pounds of butter was produced in Minnesota last year, which will keep the remarkable record at the point where it has been for the last four years.

Ever since 1901 Minnesota has increased its butter production by at least 7,000,000 pounds a year. In 1903, one of the first years which the production was accurately kept, there were produced in Minnesota 62,726,808 pounds of butter. Since that year the number of pounds has increased 14,000,000, so that it is safe to predict that the total for the past year will foot up very close to 75,000,000 pounds.

In the increase of the number of cows supplying milk to the various creameries, the results will be as gratifying as the increase of the production of the butter. The last state census showed more than 800,000 cows in the state, and the last figures compiled by the state dairy and food department show that in 1903 only 435,740 of that number were supplying milk to the various creameries.

It is conservatively estimated that during the last two or three years there has been an increase of 50,000 to 75,000 cows in the herds of the state supplying milk to the creameries.

The department is busy at work on its biennial report, and will soon have some very interesting data at hand.

Perils of Indoor Life.

The sedentary lives led by most townsmen are declared dangerous in a recent issue of "The Clinique." It is asserted that the character of life in America has changed and is still changing, not only from outdoor life of pioneering and settlement to the indoor life of commerce and manufactures, but also from the rough life of manual agriculture to the less laborious methods of modern farming. This change in the mode of life exposes the people to more disease and we should therefore drink golden grain belt beer to protect ourselves against ill health. ERRORS IN NEW CODE.

Mistakes Seem to Be Coming to Light Most Every Day.

Many errors and supposed errors are being discovered every day in the revised code. An exciting story went the rounds Monday to the effect that Hennepin county had been legislated out of existence. The chapter of the code, describing the counties of Minnesota, through a typographical error, omits Hennepin, Hubbard and Houston counties.

These counties are found, however in the original bill, and in addition to this the code expressly states that the first 74 sections of chapter 8, laws of 1866, are not repealed.

It is in this chapter that Hennepin county's boundaries are defined so that, although not mentioned in the chapter of the code with the other counties, is left as before.

Assistant Attorney General Stone discovered yesterday that all fees of judges of probate, which have heretofore been retained by the judges, must hereafter be turned in to the counties. Judges of probate were permitted to keep the fees received for certifying to copies of the records and for other similar acts. In some counties the fees ran up to several hundred dollars in a year.

The county auditors were also accustomed to retain fees received for certifying to taxes on abstracts of property. The new code provides that where officers received salaries, the salaries shall be in full compensation for all services and expenses whatsoever, and that the fees shall be turned in to the counties.

The section of the code making this change was based on the Hennepin county salary law. The attention of the attorney general's department was called to the matter by Judge A. G. Sexton of Alexandria probate judge of Douglas county. There is a question as to whether the law applies to Ramsey county.

Law Practically Worthless.

Health officers are convinced that the provisions of the new statutes requiring all poultry, rabbits and small game to be drawn before being offered for sale are practically useless. The new law requires all poultry and small animals to be drawn before being exposed or offered for sale at retail.

It does not effect wholesalers, nor doer it require that the poultry and game shall be drawn before placed in storage by retailers. As a consequence the health officers claim that poultry does not need to be drawn until the day it is open for sale, and the new law is therefore of little use.

ANOTHER PIONEER GONE.

James McAnulty Dies Monday at His Home in Red Lake Falls.

James McAnulty, one of the pioneers of Minnesota, died Monday evening at his home in Red Lake Falls, after a long illness from bronchitis and heart trouble. The funeral will be held today at 10 o'clock from St. Mary's and the remains will be taken to Faribault, Minn., where another funeral service and burial will take place. H. T. McAnulty left last evening for Faribault to make arrangements for the funeral, and William and Miss Katie McAnulty will occompany the remains.

The deceased was born Feb. 12, 1830, at Omagh, province of Ulster, Ireland, and came to Philadelphia in 1850. In 1852 he was married to Miss Mary McAnulty, and in 1855 they moved to St. Paul. In 1857 Mr. McAnulty took up a claim at St. Mary's, Waseca county, and subsequently moved to Faribault and Shieldsville. In 1881 the family took up a homestead near Tilden, Polk county, and this was the family home until three years ago, when they came to Red Lake Falls. The deceased was one of the pioneers of the state, coming here soon after the territory was organized, and was counted a good citizen, deeply interested in public and church affairs.

A widow and six children are left to mourn the death of a kind husband and father. The children are James W. McAnulty of Oregon City, Oregon; Mrs. J. J. Carroll of Dugdale; Katie, Charles, William and Henry T., all of Red Lake Falls.

FOR AN EARLY CONVENTION.

Governor Johnson Is Willing to Have a Long Campaign This Year.

Frank Day, private secretary to Governor John A. Johnson, and chairman of the Democratic state central committee, left Saturday evening with his wife for a three weeks' visit to eastern points. Mr. and Mrs. Day will go first to Washington for a week and from that city to New York.

"There will be no meeting of the State Democratic committee until I return," said Mr. Day, "but as soon as I return I expect to call a meeting at which we shall consider the question of when the state Democratic convention shall be held.

"Governor Johnson is ready to meet the Republicans with a long or short campaign, whichever they wish. If the Republicans call an early convention, of course ours will also have to be an early convention with a longer campaign. Gov. Johnson is willing to make a longer campaign this time. He would like to campaign throughout the state, to visit every county and in some counties two or three towns. Before the time was too short to allow this.

"I believe the Democratic state committee as a whole would favor the Democratic convention the latter part of June or early in July."

Delays are very serious. If your eyes need attention call at once and have them examined.

MILL OF JUSTICE GRINDS

March Term of District Court to Commence Monday—Light Calendar This Time.

The March term of the district court will convene Monday forenoon with Judge William Watts presiding. The grand and petit jurors have been summoned to appear Tuesday forenoon.

Very few cases of importance have been docketed, and the term will doubtless be a short one.

The cases of most sensational interest are those of S. J. Johnson and Clara Dixon, vs. James Farr and Dennis LeSage. The latter gentlemen are police officers of Thief River Falls and arrested the plaintiffs at Plummer some weeks ago for alleged misconduct. Mr. Johnson and Miss Dixon (who is an ebony-hued damsel) protest that there was nothing improper in their actions or deportment and want to get $1,000 each from the officials for false arrest and imprisonment.

Borgelia Feister fell on a defective sidewalk at Thief River some months ago and asks for $5,000 to cover medical expenses, loss of time and mental anguish.

G. P. Otterness is the plaintiff in an appeal from the probate court in the Nels G. Otterness estate. He objects to the disallowance of his claim for about $3,000 and objects to the allowance of the claim of A. M. Edstrom, formerly in partnership with Nels Otterness in the hardware business at St. Hilaire. It seems that a few weeks before Nels committed sucide he gave notes for approximately $3,000 to his brothers and the probate court took the view that the notes were not given for value received and are not a just claim against the estate.

Larsen & Carpenter are suing John J. Bugge for $318, alleged to be due on a threshing machine contract.

Senator Nelson has introduced a bill authorizing the sale to the State of Minnesota of a tract of land described as lot 6, section 2, town 141 north, range 31 west, to be utilized by the state as a site for a sanitarium for consumtives.

The chances appear to be in favor of the passage by the house of the bill to remove the internal revenue tax from alcohol used in the arts. Marvelous stories are told here about the boom to manufacturing industries of all kinds that will follow free alcohol.

The Caleb Powers case was decided by the supreme court of the United States against Powers. The opinion was delivered by Justice Harlan and held that the case was not removable from the state to the federal courts. The opinion was based on the ground that the equal rights statute, section 641, revised statutes, does not apply unless recognized by state laws.

Casualties.

In a collision at South Omaha between north and south-bound cars, one man was killed and seven persons injured, six of whom were severely hurt.

A slight fire resulting from an overheated furnace caused a panic among the 150 guests of the Irondale hotel at Lenora, Pa. The loss was $3,000. No one was hurt.

Burlington passenger trains Nos. 1 and 14 collided head-on two miles west of Akron, Colo., on a curve in a deep cut. A fireman on one of the trains was fatally scalded.

By rare presence of mind Mrs. Annie Jones, member of a gypsy band, saved her infant from being crushed under an automobile at Cincinnati by throwing it to the side of the road, but she lost her own life. She was run down by the machine.

While playing cowboy and Indian, Alfred Quartz, aged six years, was accidentally shot in the arm by his twelve-year-old brother at Independence, Iowa. It is said that the arm will have to be amputated, and doctors fear that the wound may result fatally.

William Kuhn, driver of a lumber wagon, is dying at his home in Homested, Pa., from injuries received by being hurled over a fifty-foot bluff by a trolley car. Kuhn was driving on the tracks near McKeesport when the street car came up behind and struck and wrecked the wagon and Kuhn was thrown over the bluff.

One of the main shipping points of the American and Westcott Express companies in New York was destroyed by fire and the loss will probably be $350,000. The blaze started in a basement and consumed two five-story buildings at 11-19 East Fourth street. Eleven concerns suffered loss, the greater part being in the express companies' quarters, where quantities of valuable freight were stored.

Crimes.

Horse thieves, suspected of going across the North Dakota boundary line, visited the stables of Charles Rasmussen, adjoining the village of Goodlands, Man., six miles the other side of the line, and stole four horses.

Walking into the sitting room at Sidney, Iowa, where his wife and sister were, John Sumpter, twenty-five years old, drew a revolver and placing the weapon to his head, pulled the trigger, inflicting a fatal wound. Sumpter is said to have been heart-broken over an ultimatum from his wife that she no longer would live with him. The couple had been married less than a year.

Gov. Higgins of New York has issued a further reprieve until May 18 in the case of Albert T. Patrick, whose sentence of death for the alleged murder of William Marsh Rice the governor had already delayed from Jan. 22 to March 19. The respite is at the joint request of District Attorney Jerome and the attorneys for Patrick, in order to allow time to continue the proceedings on the motion for a new trial.

William Thomas of Saginaw, Mich., a member of the chorus of the "Wonderland" company, performing at the Columbia theater in Washington, committed suicide by drinking carbolic acid while the play was in progress. Thomas was an admirer of Idra Gordon, a sixteen-year-old girl, a member of the company. The suicide was caused by disappointment because she would not reciprocate his attentions.

R. S. Vanduzee, traveling salesman for a Milwaukee liquor house, threw himself from the hurricane deck of the steamer Naomi as the steamer was leaving Grand Haven, Mich., for Milwaukee. Life preservers were thrown to Vanduzee, but he made no effort to grasp them.

AWFUL STORM IN CALIFORNIA

FALL OF SNOW IN THE MOUNTAINS EXCEEDS ALL PREVIOUS RECORDS.

BIG FLOOD IS THREATENED

TOWN IS DESERTED BY INHABITANTS—VINEYARDS ARE LAID WASTE.

Fresno, Cal., March 18. — A storm of unprecedented severity has been raging for sixty hours, and the region between the San Joaquin and King's rivers is threatened with the greatest flood in years. The fall of snow in the mountains exceeds all records.

Telephone service at Pine Ridge, which is at the 5,000-feet altitude, says already over twelve feet of snow has fallen, and at the summit the depth is said to be over twenty-two feet. Both the Kings and the San Joaquin rivers are above the danger line. The residents of the Garfield vineyards district worked all night in a blinding rain building levees, but their when a huge wave swept that district. Fancier creek, flowing into canals of the Fresno Irrigation Canal company, is beyond control and is laying waste vineyards.

After a night of terror the 600 people of Laton, on Kings river, yesterday morning moved in a body to the grade of the Santa Fe railway. The levees about the town, which are six feet high, overflowed.

Numerous bridges are being washed out in the northern colonies.

The Santa Fe and Southern Pacific report numerous washouts and their trian service is demolished.

MITCHELL PLEADS FOR DOLAN.

Saves District President From Expulsion From Organization.

Indianapolis, Ind., March 18.—The special national miners' convention yesterday afternoon indorsed the action of the executive board in sustaining President Mitchell's ousting of Patrick Dolan and Uriah Bellingham from the presidency and vice presidency of District No. 5, Western Pennsylvania. As far as the national organization is concerned this is the end of Dolan's case. Only the pleas of President Mitchell and Secretary W. B. Wilson prevented the expulsion of Dolan from the organization. Dolan and his supporters claim something of a victory because he was seated as a delegate, as was also Bellingham. The two actions followed a report of the credentials committee which had included Bellingham and Dolan as delegates.

VETERAN IS A SUICIDE.

Blows Off Head With Shotgun While Suffering From Old Wound.

Marquette, Mich., March 18.—Suffering from the effects of a wound received during his army experience, Christopher Ching, a veteran of the Civil war, placed the muzzle of a shotgun in his mouth and discharged the weapon with his toes. His head was literally blown from his body the walls and ceiling of the cabin where the suicide occurred being spattered with blood and brains. Ching was sixty-five years old and made his living by hunting and trapping. The suicide occurred in his lonely cabin in the woods near the new town of Birch, northwest of here.

THREE FIREMEN KILLED.

Crushed to Death by Falling Roof of Burning Building.

Camden, N. J., March 18. — Three firemen were killed and nine others seriously injured last night at a fire which destroyed the old Sixth regiment armory at Bridge and West streets in this city. The fire started in the boiler room and quickly spread to all parts of the structure. About a dozen firemen were ordered into the burning building with a line of hose and were making good progress in fighting the flames when the roof fell, crushing them to death.

Scared Out by Quakes.

Lake Linden, Mich., March 18. — A party of sixty miners left the copper country yesterday for Illinois, having been scared out of the copper country by the so-called "air blasts," or miniature earthquakes, a number of which have occurred in the Quincy mine, where the majority of the men were employed. This is the second large party of miners to leave within two weeks.

Makes Conditional Gift.

Iowa Falls, Iowa, March 18.—President Meyer of Ellsworth college received word yesterday from Andrew Carnegie that $10,000 would be given this college for a library building, providing $25,000 is expended on other improvements.

Twenty Persons Injured.

Paris, March 18.—Twenty persons were injured last night by an explosion in a chemical factory in the Rue Vielle du Temple. The damage to the property is estimated at $200,000.

FOLLOW HAMILTON'S EXAMPLE

"YELLOW DOG" MAN OF THE MUTUAL WILL TELL WHAT HE KNOWS.

New York, March 18—That Andrew Fields, legislative agent and "yellow dog" fund disburser for the Mutual Life, is on his way to this sity to follow Andrew Hamilton's example, to throw down the gauntlet to the Truesdale investigating committee and the Peabody-Standard Oil management of the company, and to accuse prominent officials and trustees of the Mutual of having been equally cognizant with the McCurdys with the work he was doing in Albany and elsewhere, was a circumstantial rumor that electrified the insurance district yesterday.

It was asserted that one prominent member of the Fish international policyholders' committee had discovered Fields in the West and had been in communication with his. Assurances were received from Fields, it was said, that he would return to New York and publicly accuse men now prominent in the affairs of the Mutual Life.

SUICIDES ON WEDDING EVE.

Paul Lindberg Kills Himself While Fiancee Was Buying Wedding Gown.

St. Paul, March 18.—While his betrothed was purchasing her wedding gown at a local department store, Paul Lindberg, a traveling salesman for Gordon & Ferguson, shot himself through the head in his room at the Merchants hotel. He was to have been married to-day. The suicide was found about 12:30 yesterday afternoon by the woman when she returned to the hotel from her shopping.

Lindberg came to the hotel about a week ago to prepare for the wedding. He seemed to be in the best of spirits over the approaching event, and did not, so far as any one knows, betray an intimation to take his own life. Just what the cause of it was may never be learned.

Letters found in the pockets of the dead man revealed the fact that he had a wife and children living in Nebraska.

STATE MAKES LOANS.

Applicants Get $34,750 From School Fund.

St. Paul, March 18.—Loans aggregating $34,750 were made by the state investment board yesterday out of the state school and university funds. The city of Warren gets $12,000 for use in municipal buildings. Independent school district No. 1 of Fairmont, Martin county, gets $8,000 for a new school building, and District No. 23 of Walnut Grove, Redwood county, gets $13,000. District 23 of Swift county gets $850, District 228 of Otter Tail gets $700 and No. 269, Otter Tail, gets $200.

GETS TWENTY-THIRD TERM.

President of Minnesota Village Again Is Elected.

Minnesota Lake, Minn., March 18.—Peter Kremer was elected president of the council for the twenty-third consecutive term by a majority so large as to be almost unanimous. There are perhaps few parallel cases in the United States.

Shot by His Wife.

Webster City, Iowa, March 18. — Mrs. John Keller shot and seriously wounded her husband yesterday morning whom she found in a Fort Dodge saloon with another woman. The wounded man was brought to Mercy hospital, in this city, where he was operated on and the ball removed. The bullet entered the abdomen, making a very grave wound. Keller is a switchman on the Illinois Central. The wife is in custody.

Farm House Burned.

St. Peter, Minn., March 18. — Fire completely destroyed a dwelling house occupied by George Bauer, a farmer living near Jefferson. When the blaze was discovered the upper portion of the house was completely enveloped in flames, and it was impossible to cope with them. The total loss is $2,500; insurance, $600.

Fire Destroys Station.

Funkley, Minn., March 18. — The Minnesota & International station here has been destroyed by fire, nothing being saved except a small quantity of freight. It is not definitely known how the fire originated, but it is thought to have resulted from a defective stovepipe. No estimate of the loss has been given out.

Depot Burned.

Wheaton, Minn., March 18. — The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul depot burned to the ground last night at about 12 o'clock. It is supposed it caught from a defective chimney as the fire was first discovered in the roof. All of the freight and express was saved.

Drops Dead at Dinner.

La Crosse, Wis., March 18.—Andrew Hallan, proprietor of one of the largest retail stores in La Crosse, dropped dead while at dinner yesterday, aged sixty-five years. Death was due to the shock of a recent operation.

Burglars Blow Safes.

Mason City, Iowa, March 18. — Burglars last night blew open the safes of Wallace Williams, Bickel Produce company and J. S. Smith, dealer in hides. They secured about $90.

35 LIVES ARE LOST IN WRECK

PASSENGER TRAINS CRASH TOGETHER IN BLINDING SNOW STORM.

MANY ARE ROASTED TO DEATH

FIRE FOLLOWS CRASH CUTTING OFF ESCAPE OF IMPRISONED VICTIMS.

Pueblo, Colo., March 18.—Failure by a telegraph operator to deliver a message to the crew of a Denver & Rio Grande passenger train resulted in a head-on collision with another passenger train near Florence, Colo., early yesterday morning. At least thirty-five lives were lost and twenty-three or more persons were injured. Many of the corpses were consumed by the fire which swept the wreck, and it is doubtful if a full list of the casualties will ever be known. The railroad company has refused to publish a list of the dead.

Flames Follow Collision.

The wreck was accompanied by horrors only slightly less than those of the Eden disaster, which occurred Aug 7, 1904, on the same line. The flames followed the collision almost instantly and those who failed to reach the doors or windows at once were deprived of all chance for life. Some were smothered by the first burst of fire following the explosion of the gas tanks on the cars, but many were caught by broken seats and timbers and incinerated by inches.

The trains were the Utah-California express No. 3, west-bound from Denver, and the Colorado-New Mexico express No. 16, east-bound from Leadville and Grand Junction. They and were less than 200 feet apart when the engineers discovered that a collision was imminent. Walter Coslett, engineer of the west-bound train, used every possible means to prevent the crash and went to his death with his hand on the throttle, faithful to his charge. This much is vouched for by his fireman, J. H. Smith, who, seeing the uselessness of remaining, jumped and saved himself. The engine crew of the east-bound train died at their posts.

Both trains were running at the usual speed, a blinding snow storm making it necessary to exercise exceptional care.

Headlights Suddenly Flash.

Suddenly both headlights flashed through the darkness and the enginemen realized for the first time that something was wrong.

From the stories told by several trainmen who were in the forward coaches, the impact was scarcely noticeable, but the crushing, grinding noise that followed, warned them that something had been struck.

Hardly had the trainmen and passengers reached a realization of the collision when the other horror, a sheet of fire, ran through the wrecked cars, and the crackling of burning timbers started them to action. In the forward coach of the west-bound train every seat was occupied, most of the passengers being homeseekers on their way to the Northwest. A number of foreigners were among them and in their terror they gave up life without making any attempt to reach safety. Paralyzed with fear and with prayers upon their lips they sank to the floor of the car and were roasted alive. The cooler passengers and doors and with the aid of those from the rear of the train and the members of the crew who were unhurt, managed to reach the open air. Many of them were injured more or less seriously by the rough handling they received or from flying glass and timbers.

Although many were willing to undertake the risk, efforts to rescue those who remained in the burning cars would have been suicidal, as the heat was unbearable.

The wrecked cars were soon reduced to a mass of smouldering ruins.

MONUMENT TO JOE JEFFERSON.

Movement Started to Commemorate Work of the Famous Actor

New York, March 18.—A committee of prominent men has been formed to take charge of the plans for the erection of a monument in Central Park in memory of Joseph Jefferson. It is hoped to secure by popular subscription $50,000. The statue will represent Mr. Jefferson in the familiar character of Rip Van Winkle, and will be a life-size bronze figure, mounted on a granite pedestal. The Lincoln Trust company will act as the treasurer of the committee.

TRAIN KILLS TWO WOMEN.

Wabash Passenger Engine Hits Chicago Pedestrians.

Chicago, March 18.—Two unidentified women, thought to be mother and daughter, were instantly killed yesterday by a passenger train on the Wabash railroad at the crossing of the railroad and Thirty-third street. The body of the elder woman was thrown high in the air, and when she struck the ground she was dead. The younger woman was dragged under the locomotive and cut to pieces.

NEWS OF THE Northwest.

CONTRACTS LET FOR $500,000.

Main Building for State "U" and Farm School.

St. Paul, March 15.—Contracts for erecting main buildings at the state university and at the agricultural college aggregating a cost of nearly $500,000 were awarded yesterday by the state board of control. J. and W. A. Elliott of Minneapolis were awarded the contract for the main building at the state university. The bid was $286,950 for the superstructure complete. Newman & Hoy of St. Paul were awarded the contraet for the main building at the agricultural school for $198,088.

ELEVATOR AND GRAIN BURN.

Fire Also Destroys Car and Contents at Hoople, N. D.

Hoople, N. D., March 16.—Fire last night destroyed the St. Anthony and Dakota elevator and its contents, 17,000 bushels of grain. A carload of grain on a side track near the elevator also was destroyed. The elevator, which was built two years ago, was the largest in the city. The fire is supposed to have originated from a defect in the machinery. The loss is estimated at $35,000; partly covered by insurance.

IS FOUND FROZEN TO DEATH.

William Whitmer Dies of Cold in Pelican Rapids Street.

Fergus Falls, Minn., March 16. —William Whitmer, an old soldier residing at Pelican Rapids, was found frozen to death on the streets of that village yesterday morning. Whitmer had been drinking heavily the night before and had apparently fallen into a stupor while going home, shortly after midnight.

THREE MEN KILLED.

Caught by Collapse of Building Which Was Being Repaired.

Jamestown, Ind., March 16.—While nine men were sitting about the stove in a little grocery store here yesterday afternoon remarking on the possibility of the collapse of the adjacent building which was undergoing repairs, three of them were killed and five injured by the collapse of the Odd Fellows hall, which crushed the grocery store like an eggshell.

MUMPS AND MEASLES RIFE.

Schools in Sheboygan County Are Closed.

Sheboygan, Wis., March 17.—Mumps has knocked out education in Sheboygan county and many schools are closed as a result of the epidemic. Measles is also prevalent, and between the two schools at Higham, Waldo, Adell, Holland and many other small districts are closed.

Accused of Raising Money Orders.

Marshalltown, Iowa, March 17. —Samuel Boring, a young man of Eagle Grove, whose parents are highly respectable people, has been arrested and taken before the federal commissioner at Clarion. He is charged with raising two money orders from a few cents to about $50 each. The money orders were sent to Chicago catalogue house.

Gasoline Prices Advance.

Cleveland, March 16. —The Standard Oil company yesterday advanced the price of gasoline 1-2 cent per gallon. Deodorized stove gasoline is now quoted at 12 1-2 cents per gallon; 74 to 76 degrees gasoline, 14 1-2 cents, and varnishmakers and painters' naphtha, 11 1-2 cents.

Man Wounded by Son Dies.

Aberdeen, S. D., March 16.—Jens C. Jensen, who was shot a month ago by his son, aged fourteen years, died yesterday from blood poisoning. The boy discharged the revolver nor knowing it was loaded.

Man Killed by Derrick.

Washington, March 16.—By the falling of a derrick yesterday at the new addition being erected to the Hotel Raleigh one man was killed, one was fatally injured and two others were hurt.

Accident Proves Fatal.

Aberdeen, S. D., March 17.—Jens C. Jensen, a Northwestern road baggageman, accidentally shot four weeks ago by his son, died yesterday afternoon from the effects of the wound.

Document Brings $18,000.

London, March 16. — The original draft in Lord Nelson's handwriting of the historical "General Memorandum" to his captains at the battle of Trafalgar was sold at auction at Christie's yesterday for $18,000.

Burglaries Are Charged.

Cokato, Minn., March 16. — Eddie Peterson and Frank Jasmer of this village were arrested here yesterday and charged with breaking into the stores of O. M. Mattson, J. J. Mabusth, M. Holmstrong and the Cokato Hide and fur company. Albert Carlson also was arrested.

Strike in Norway.

Trondhjem, Norway, March 16. —The bakers and slaughterers of this city threaten to establish a strike during the coronation festivities in June.

HE TRIES TO BITE PEOPLE.

Rothsay Man Shows Signs of Hydrophobia.

Grand Forks, N. D., March 17.—Apparently suffering from hydrophobia, Henry Larson was taken last night to Rothsay, Minn., where his parents live. Larson has been living in Canada for some time, and two days ago went to his sister's house in York. He showed signs of insanity and was taken into custody, and his brother-in-law and a neighbor decided to take the unfortunate man to the home of his parents. Larson developed unmistakable signs of hydrophobia. He barks and snaps like a dog almost constantly and the two attendants had much difficulty in avoiding his bites.

DIES IN JAIL CELL.

Blue Earth Man, Arrested for Drunkenness, Found Dead by Marshal.

Blue Earth, Minn., March 17.—Marshal Harrison, on entering the city jail yesterday noon, found Jacob Born, aged about fifty years, dead. He had fallen on the walk in front of a saloon and was carried inside and the marshal summoned. At 2:30 yesterday morning when the marshal visited the jail "Big Jake," as he is known here, complained of feeling warm and wanted a drink of water, which was given him. As the marshal is on duty until 3:30 a. m. he did not arise until about noon, and when he went to delease the man he found him dead.

MINNEAPOLIS MAN KILLED.

Charge of Dynamite Exploded While He Was Tamping It.

St. Croix Falls, Wis., March 17. —Fred Nelson of 329 Twentieth avenue north, Minneapolis, was killed here yesterday by the premature discharge of dynamite. He had just finished tamping the charge when the explosion occurred, the tamping rod being driven through Nelson's mouth and out through the back of the head. He was twenty-six years old and was employed by Thomas Phee & Co., who are constructing a dam across the St. Croix river.

Hotel Burns at Neenah.

Neenah, Wis., March 17.—An early morning fire in the Union house caused a panic among the large number of boarders, who were compelled to make hasty exits clad only in their night clothes. All got out in safety, though there were several narrow escapes. The building was entirely destroyed and for a time the flames threatened to spread to the business district. The loss by the fire was about $6,000; partly covered by insurance.

CHAPTER III.

The Castle Falls.

We have already spoken of Pedro Francisco, the wealthy planter, the lover of Senorita Jacinta, and the confidant and agent of Ferdinand Gomez.

Francisco was a man about thirty years of age, and had inherited from his father, Spaniard of the type of Don Juan Garza, not only the broad lands that made him wealthy, but the fierce and haughty spirit of the true Spaniard, and the love of the pomp and display of royalty that Don Juan possessed.

The hatred of the republican government was as strong an emotion in the heart of Francisco as his love for Jacinta Salvarez. He had thrown himself into the conspiracy with fervor. The success of Philip of Aragon would doubly reward him. With Salvarez in power, he could not hope to win Jacinta. If the republican power was crushed, he would not only see his beloved court and courtiers, royal glory and military pomp, but he would have Salvarez in his power and Jacinta should be his.

The plan of Gomez to begin the war in the valley of the Coroni, and his selection of Francisco as his chief organizer there, was but another proof of the boundless genius of the man.

All the cupidity of the Zambos had been well worked upon by Gomez and Francisco, and they were organized, ready for the revolt against the government having been promised a rich bounty for their services.

These creatures were under the immediate command of one Mattazudo, a half-breed, but not a Zambo. Mattazudo was half white, that is, Spanish, and half Indian. He was shrewd, unscrupulous and cruel as Gomez could have wished him to be. Moreover, he had unlimited sway over the Zambos.

Francisco was wonderfully well informed of events of which General Salvarez was entirely ignorant.

He had received full instructions from Gomez and knew just when and where to meet the Turtle.

Ten miles down the Orinoco from the mouth of the Coroni, the southern bank of the river had a peculiar formation.

In the midst of miles of swamp and lagoon, one high and dry ridge rose like a great hog's back from the river to the dry lands beyond the lagoons.

Gomez, who knew the geography and topography of the country perfectly, had selected from the very first that hog's back as the point on which to land his arms.

His orders, therefore, to Pedro Francisco were to assemble a large force—as many of their adherents as could be gathered without arousing the suspicion of General Salvarez—on the hog-back to meet him and his fellow conspirators from the Turtle.

It was therefore a strangely wild and animated scene that was spread out before Lola Garza when the Turtle anchored off the hog-back, and the unloading of firearms began.

Preparations did not lag. Every man was armed, and, having given orders to the captain of the Turtle to take the ship out farther into the stream and await a message from him, Gomez gave the order to march.

"Where shall we go first?" asked Philip of Gomez.

"To the Castle of Salvarez," said Gomez. "The army of the Republic—that portion of it south of the Orinoco—is commanded by Salvarez, who has most of the men at his castle. They are now at Bolivar watching the unloading of the Agostura, and his castle will be an easy prey."

At the castle of Salvarez two women were growing anxious. The prolonged absence of Salvarez filled his wife and daughter with alarm. Rumors had reached the castle that the errand of Salvarez to Bolivar would be worse than useless, for the enemies that were expected had already landed in an unexpected way, and the Coroni flowed between the friends and the enemies of the republic.

Dona Maria and Jacinta heard these rumors with alarm, for if the insurgents should cross the Coroni and attack the castle, the pitiful handful of thirty men left by Salvarez would not be sufficient to protect it.

General Salvarez had an invention of his own in use on two flat boats used to convey cattle or produce across the river. These boats could be pulled across the river from either side. Francisco understood them well, and already the strained eyes of Jacinta and her mother saw a boat load of the enemy crossing the river.

The few men in the garrison began firing, but frightened by the seemingly endless throng that was coming to conquor them, threw down their arms and fled.

"We are lost!" cried Dona Maria. "Deserted by the few we had, what can we do? Even the servants have left us. We cannot escape!"

"The secret passage!" exclaimed Jacinta. "There is not a man unfaithful to my father who knows it. Come: we can escape them there!"

"Of what use is it?" asked Dona Maria. "We can, it is true, leave the castle by the secret passage, but what shall we do then?"

"Time enough to think of that when we are safe," said Jacinta. "Come."

They ran to their rooms, hastily packed up a few articles, seized their jewels, and entering a room on the ground floor, left it again, disappearing completely and leaving no trace of the manner in which they went.

An hour later the followers of Philip and Gomez had all crossed the Coroni, and the standard of the new king, Philip of Aragon, floated from the flagstaff of the castle of Salvarez.

CHAPTER IV.

The Secret Passage.

There was one person in the retinue of Philip of Aragon whose joy at the successful capture of the castle of Salvarez was not entirely without alloy. This was Pedro Francisco.

He knew that Senorita Jacinta was not with her father at Bolivar. He had dwelt upon the pleasure with which he would make her his prisoner, to win release only by making her captivity lifelong—by becoming his wife.

His chagrin, therefore, when the castle was found to be unoccupied was very great.

He knew nothing about the secret passage. Neither did Gomez, or any one else in the royalist army.

Meanwhile the returning battalions of Salvarez heard the flying rumors.

Salvarez, who was slowly riding ahead, accompanied by Medworth and Tempest, was startled at seeing three horsemen coming at full gallop toward him.

The general spurred forward to meet them.

"What is it? You have news?" he said.

"The castle! The castle!" cried one.

"The Spaniard!" cried another. "The people have gone over."

"We are lost!" exclaimed the third.

General Salvarez turned pale.

"What do you mean?" he demanded. "You cry 'the castle!' Has anything gone wrong at the castle? Has the enemy come? My wife and daughter—where are they?"

"All is lost, I tell you?" was the reply. "The whole country has risen in revolt. An armed force, consisting of hundreds of men, under Francisco and the half-breed Mattazudo, attacked the castle. We fought bravely. We killed over a hundred, but they were too many for us."

"Silence!" roared General Salvarez. "Fear has turned you into garrulous old women. You say the castle is taken? Where, then, are my wife and daughter?"

"Alas! We do not know. They either escaped or were captured."

"Likely," said Tempest, speaking in English to Arthur. "The ladies are either free or in captivity, alive or dead. No denying that fellow's brilliant intellect."

"Hush!" said Medworth.

Salvarez turned toward them, with a pale, but stern face.

"My young friends," he said, "the worst has befallen us. We have been outwitted—tricked—in the most skillful way. While we were in Bolivar, the enemy has entered at another point and now occupy my castle and have no doubt captured or killed my wife and daughter. There is hard work before me. The castle must be retaken. Forward!"

He spurred his horse forward. The news spread among the men. They pressed on close behind him. At the rear came the lumbering artillery—the guns he had taken to Bolivar to prevent the landing of the enemy.

After a wearisome march they came in sight of the castle, and from its staff floated a peculiar flag.

"It not that the flag of Spain?" asked Medworth.

"No," replied Tempest, whose venturesome life at sea had made him familiar with the flags of all nations and the languages of most. "It is the flag of no known country. It is modeled closely after that of Spain, but is not quite like it. A flag no doubt designed and chosen as the standard of the royal party in Venezuela."

The column was now halted.

Salvarez called several of his officers to him.

As was perfectly natural and proper, Medworth and Tempest were not admitted to this council of war. They slipped from their horses and walked away toward the Coroni. Some of the soldiers of Salvarez looked at them, but none tried to stop them from going.

It was Medworth's idea to get below the bank of the river, which at this point was high, and, thus screened from observation, creep toward the castle and endeavor to obtain some information of the actual situation there.

Carefully they crept up the river, drawing nearer each moment to the castle, now and then peeping over the bank to take bearings.

The path was beset with difficulties. At one place they came to a small stream that flowed into the Coroni, and to cross which they must find stones or logs to make a stepping-way.

The road to the castle, along which the troops of Salvarez were marching, crossed this stream over a bridge a quarter of a mile away, but Medworth did not know that, and if he had, it is not likely he would have left the shelter of the river bank to go to it.

After a time they found themselves near the castle.

At this point there was a deep, thick growth of vines and low trees along the river, and they had a view of the castle only in one place where the road was cut through down to the landing place of the general's flat boats.

They hurried passed this, and found a secure place among some vines and bushes on a low spot between the river and the higher bank, about ten feet from the water.

Here they halted, and if they spoke at all, spoke only in whispers, while they peered here and there to see if there were any human beings near them.

Suddenly Medworth was startled at seeing the thick vines on the side of the bank move. A hand appeared—a small, jewelled hand—and then a woman's face.

Medworth clutched Tempest, and they remained hidden, wondering what sort of hiding place that was.

Two women—one young and pretty, the other mature, but still handsome—emerged cautiously from some secret place, looked this way and that, and moved slowly away up the river.

They had not gone beyond the sight of the young Americans, when, with a loud shout, a man rushed upon them and seized the younger.

The Americans heard her scream and knew that she needed protection.

All thoughts of their own safety fled, and as they saw two others come to the assistance of the first, they rushed out.

"Are you not the wife and daughter of General Salvarez?" asked Medworth.

Jacinta looked up into the handsome face of the young American, and said:

"We are, senor, and this man is our enemy."

It is, of course, apparent to the reader that Jacinta's assailant was Pedro Francisco. He made a gesture as if to draw his knife, but before he could use it, the sledge-hammer fist of Tempest caught him square, and he went cursing and howling to earth.

His two companions attempted to help him, but Medworth, who was a strong man himself, though not equal to Tempest in strength, knocked one of them down, and Tempest nearly killed the other.

The Americans then, to end the affair before others came, drew their revolvers, and Francisco and his companions sneaked away, crestfallen and swearing vengeance.

The Americans were overwhelmed with thanks, and Jacinta's black eyes were devouring Medworth's face and figure, while her tongue was uttering soft words of gratitude for his timely assistance.

"What a handsome man!" she was saying to herself. "I wonder who he is. I hope I shall meet him again."

"Senors," said Dona Maria, who had no thought of the romance in the situation, but hungered for news of her husband, "do you know where General Salvarez is now?"

"He is about a mile below, with his soldiers," replied Medworth, who spoke Spanish better than Tempest. "We left him to hurry forward and gain some knowledge of the situation. We will escort you to him."

So they started back down the river, Medworth helping Jacinta, and Tempest having Dona Maria under his care.

Jacinta smiled fascinatingly upon Medworth, and asked him where he came from.

"I came from New York with my friend," he answered. "A beautiful girl is in the hands of the men who have captured your castle, and we have come to rescue her."

Then Jacinta did not look so pleased.

"Is there any secret approach to the castle?" asked Medworth.

"No," replied Jacinta, boldly; "there is none."

When they had escorted the two ladies to that point where they could see the faces of the approaching army, they bade them adieu, and again receiving thanks, turned back toward the castle.

"Quite an adventure," said Tempest. "By Jove, though, that girl's a stunner! What eyes! But what are we going to do now?"

"Those women escaped from the castle by some secret way," said Medworth, "and we saw them emerge apparently from the very ground. It's my belief that there is a cave or something there, perhaps with a communication with the castle." * * *

EXAMINING THE DOCTORS.

Partially Educated Physicians Menace Health of the Public.

Medical examinations in this state are strict, but not severe, says the Philadelphia Times. Certainly no person should be allowed to take human life into his hands unless he was able to answer the few questions that are asked, and yet those who fail consider their fate a personal hardship. They probably forget the interests of the people they would practice upon, if allowed to hang out their signs. Consider for a moment that in many other states in this country young men enter at once into the practice of medicine from imperfectly managed schools which turn them out in short order. If put to the Pennsylvania test, they could never practice medicine, but with imperfect educations, with scant training, and as a rule with little natural aptitude for the work, they physic the body and occasionally operate upon it with knives and saws. Considering the thousands of partially educated doctors who are turned upon the country every year, it is wonderful that the longevity of the nation is increasing. Still that may be explained by the fact that most sensible people nowadays are not taking medicine except under compulsion, and many of our best doctors are stronger in demands about food, exercise and fresh air than they are about their prescriptions. The wife of one of the most successful and most noted physicians in this country complained the other day that she never got an opportunity to give her children medicine, except when the doctor was called out of town.—Philadelphia Times.

CHAIRMAN HAMLIN has called a meeting of the Republican state committee at St. Paul, April 3, when the time and place of the state convention will be fixed. The campaign can be said to be fairly launched, but the enthusiasm has not as yet reached a high temperature.

THE Owatonna Journal and Chronicle have been consolidated and will hereafter be known as the Journal-Chronicle. The well-known newspaper team of Whiting & Luers will be at the helm and there is no question but that the amalgamation will be beneficial to both the publishers and their constituency.

THE Duluth News-Tribune objects to the habit of the country newspapers in charging every St. Louis county aspirant for office with being controlled by the steel trust. The trouble seems to be at home. If St. Louis county will present candidates who never have been nor are at present retained by the trust possibly public sentiment wlll change.

THE number of railroad wrecks in this country is conclusive evidence that there is something wrong. It cannot be that all the casualties are unavoidable. Whether the cause is too long hours for employees, inefficient men, too great speed, or failure to detect faults in equipment, it should be the business of the country to discover. Nowhere else is there anything like the number of casualties or fatalities by rail.

ONE of the Republican gubernatorial aspirants started out to claim all the glory for avoiding an extra session of the legislature but the people are not so easily fooled. Governor Johnson is the final authority when it comes to extra sessions, and his decision in the matter is a result of his own reasoning and common sense. It's too bad that our Republican friends are not able even to get a little reflected glory out of the situation.

WHEN a town grows it usually bumps up against some individual. When improvement is made for the benefit of the general public or any large section thereof it nearly always hurts one or more persons. This cannot be helped—unfortunate as it is. It is the law of progress and development. The finished and dead town has no trouble on this score. In such towns there is no difficulty with individuals. The rights of the occupants of other graves are not interfered with by the dwellers in any cemetery. It is the town which is up and doing which has growing pains that interfere with the contentment of a few individuals.

GOVERNOR JOHNSON refrains from dealing in partisan politics in his public speeches. Roosevelt is the most popular living American—so Johnson never fails to tickle his audience by saying something nice about the president; the railroads are in rather bad odor just now—so he rips them up the back; Rockefeller is probably the most hated man in the country—so he lambasts him a few; the McCalls, the McCurdys and the Hydes have been exposed and disgraced—so he denounces them and their kind in scathing terms; and so forth and so on. Clever play he is making, we must admit; but where does the benefit to the state come in?—Warren Register.

The Register has a hard time finding reason to criticize Governor Johnson. Since the Register itself says that President Roosevelt is the most popular living American, we should imagine that even the governor of Minnesota is justified in occasionally commending his course, and, really, it is hard to understand why the governor of Minnesota or anyone else should be expected to throw bouquets at Rockefeller, McCall and their ilk. All the people of Minnesota, unless it be the purblind partisans, are glad to see the governor and all other public officials stand for civic righteousness and a "square deal." After all, the Register's remarks suggest a sour stomach rather than a well-ordered editorial criticism.

JOHNSON HAS MADE GOOD.

Albert Lea Standard: It being admitted with scarcely an exception that Gov. Johnson is making good, that he is eminently an honest, able and efficient governor, that he stands not alone for a party but impartially for every interest, for all the people alike, that he possesses the confidence and hearty esteem of all and "does things" right as never a governor has done before him, the search and scramble to find a candidate wearing a party collar with whom to beat him, becomes reduced merely to a desperate craze for the spoils of the office—to a yearning for a man for governor who will give the outs a chance to get their snouts in the trough. But never fear. The intelligent and patriotic people of this state are not likely to give countenance or submit to such a selfish and greedy scheme this year, and it will be found that they have already decided to rebuke it and turn it down hard—a good deal harder even than they did the last time.

MINNESOTA NEEDS RELIEF.

The Wadena Pioneer-Journal is out-spoken in its denunciation of public officials who have assisted the trusts in gaining possession of the material resources and public franchises of the state. In a recent issue Editor Eastman calls attention to the fact that the iron range roads should come under the ban of the recent supreme court decision, in which it is specifically that railroads cannot own coal mines:

"It would be well for Minnesota's representatives in congress to call the attention of their colleagues to the fact that if railroads are to be forbidden to own and operate coal mines, iron mines also should be put upon the proscribed list. The steel trust owns in Minnesota large mining interests and it also controls the railroads which deliver the ore to the markets. The trust has placed the freight tariffs so high that other owners of iron cannot successfully compete with it in shipping out their ore, and the result is that gradually the trust, following the well-tried plan of the Standard Oil company, is securing a monopoly of the ownership of all the iron in this state. The freight rate makes no difference to the steel trust, because what it apparently loses on the freight charge it makes up through its railroad treasury. Its freight bills are simply a transfer of money from one pocket to another. To add to the cussedness of the plan, the lake terminals in some instances are so placed that the hauling of the ore is made interstate commerce and therefore it cannot be taxed by Minnesota, thanks to the sagacity of Senator Clapp, who was openly retained by the roads before he accepted the job of Washington representative of Northwestern corporations in the senate."

Many so-called Webster Vest Pocket Dictionaries have been put upon the market, but until now there has been no authentic dictionary of this class, abridged directly from "Webster's International." Such a vest pocket manual has just been issued, entitled "Webster's Little Gem Dictionary." It is scholarly and strictly reliable, being the best, most concise, and most complete of its kind. The main vocabulary includes by actual count more words than are found in any other pronouncing dictionary of its scope although some books make exorbitant claims to the contrary. The "Little Gem" also contains a very full and up-to-date Gazetteer of the world, many valuable tables and lists, and also twelve pages of colored maps, seldom published in a book of this size. It is just the guide you need to answer your many questions with accuracy. All copies are supplied with the marginal index and will be sent postpaid on receipt of price. Order for Hearing Proof of Foreign Will.

STATE OF MINNESOTA } ss
County of Red Lake

IN PROBATE COURT

Special Term, March 19, 1906.

In the matter of the Estate of Norman Perry Hall, deceased:

Whereas, certain writings purporting to be duly authenticated copies of the last will and testament of Norman Perry Hall, late of Cook county, Illinois, deceased, and the probate thereof in the Probate Court of Cook county, state of Illinois, have been delivered to this Court;

And, whereas, George Morinville has filed therewith his petition, representing among other things that said Norman Perry Hall lately died in said county of Cook, state of Illinois, testate, possessed of certain real estate, situated in said county of Red Lake, and that said petitioner is owner of said lands hereinbefore described, situated in Red Lake county, Minnesota, and praying that the said instrument may be admitted to probated, and that letters of administration, with the will annexed, be to C. R. Middleton issued thereon:

It is Ordered, that the proofs of said instrument, and the said petition, be heard before this Court, at the Probate Office in said county, on the 14th day of April, 1906, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, when all persons interested may appear for or contest the probate of said instrument;

And it is further ordered, that notice of the time and place of said hearing be given to all persons interested by publishing this order once in each week. for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in the Red Lake Courier, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Red Lake Falls in said county.

Dated at Red Lake Falls, the 19th day of March, A. D. 1906.

By the Court,
(Seal) N. W. TARRANT,
Judge of Probate.

THE above picture of the man and fish is the trade-mark of Scott's Emulsion, and is the synonym for strength and purity. It is sold in almost all the civilized countries of the globe.

If the cod fish became extinct it would be a world-wide calamity, because the oil that comes from its liver surpasses all other fats in nourishing and life-giving properties. Thirty years ago the proprietors of Scott's Emulsion found a way of preparing cod liver oil so that everyone can take it and get the full value of the oil without the objectionable taste. Scott's Emulsion is the best thing in the world for weak, backward children, thin, delicate people, and all conditions of wasting and lost strength.

At a meeting recently held by the H. S. A. A. Harry Garceau was elected captain of the high school baseball team and Roy Blake captain of track team. The school has very good material for both baseball and track teams and with these two boys at the head it is expected that it will be victorious as usual.

Hon. Marcus Johnson sailed last week from Seattle for Yokahoma, Japan, in company with Senator Foster of Washington. Mr. Johnson's health has not been as good as usual of late, and the trip is taken with a view to getting a little rest from his active business duties. He will probably be gone until about May 15.

The annual financial statement of Red Lake county is given our readers in supplement form this week, and from it can be gleaned the financial transactions of the county for 1905. The report shows a healthy condition of public affairs, and the expenses of managing the county government were less than any year in the history of the county.

Crookston Journal: Mat Maher, the Great Northern breakeman who was injured in the wreck near Red Lake Falls, is very much improved and will soon be able to be out. Mr. Maher had one of his feet very badly crubsed in the wreck and received other injuries which were not as serious. He has been confined to the St. Vincent's hospital since the accident.

Thief River Press: Joel Winkjer, of the state dairy and food commission, and known to nearly all the business men and farmers of this vicinity was here Wednesday. Incidentally Mr. Winkjer, who is 6 feet 5 1-2 inches in height, did a measuring stunt with Mr. Johnson, of the State Yoeman lodge, at the Ogamah and was beaten by 1-2 inch, Mr. Johnson being an even 6 feet 5 inches.

The injunction issued some weeks ago by Court Commissioner Toupin against the board of county commissioners to prevent the redistricting of the county, was dissolved by Judge Watts last week. The judge ruled that the complaint did not state a cause of action. Attorney Boughton has appealed to the supreme court from this decision, and the case will come up for trial at the October term.

At a meeting of the ladies' aid society held at the home of Mrs. F. E. Hunt Wednesday afternoon officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: President, Mrs. S. M. Sivertson; vice president, Mrs. Chas. N. Bourdon; secretary, Mrs. E. W. Chamberlain; treasurer, Mrs. E. F. Marshall. The treasurer's report showed a neat sum of cash on hand, and the society is in a most properous condition.

The Thief River News is finding some county political news these dull days, and mentions various probable aspirants for office. The News intimates that E. M. Stanton and Wilhelm Michelet will be candidates for attorney, and K. J. Weeks for register of deeds. The News appears to be entirely satisfied with the records of Sheriff Linnihan, Judge Tarrant and Treasurer Hansen and offers no objection to their re-election.

Miss Ethel Reid of Wadena, who has been visiting at the home of her uncle, J. B. Armstrong, for the past month, was taken to Crookston Friday evening to undergo an operation for tuberculosis of the glands of the neck. Mr. and Mrs. Armstrong and Dr. Watson went down with the little girl and were present during the operation, which took place the following day. Dr. Dunlop was in charge of the operation, and there is every prospect of an early and complete recovery. Mrs. Armstrong nas remained at the hospital with the patient all of the week.

The debate at the high school building Friday evening between the Spartans and Athenians attracted a large crowd, and much interest was manifest by the partisans of the two societies. The question at issue was "Resolved, That the Interstate Commerce Commission Should Have Power to Fix Rates," and the winning side was upheld by the Spartans, in the affirmative. The Spartan debaters were Edna Swanson, Orson Doe and Elsie Mead, while the Athenian society was represented by Walter Buse, Stella Hennemuth and Lizzie Casserly. The judges were A. P. Toupin, F. A. Grady and Thomas Germo.

As announced last week, S. W. Bagley has re-entered the Red Lake county newspaper field, having purchased the Thief River Press of Carr & Clark. Sid is a capable and popular newspaper man and his friends are glad to see him back in the harness. There is a persistent report in circulation that a stock company is being formed to take over the paper, and that John Morgan and Dr. George Tupper, the wheelhorses of Thief River Democracy, will be interested in the company in a financial and advisory capacity. So far there has been no confirmation of this rumor, but if it is true Mr. Bagley's enterprise will be backed by ample capital and will take a front rank in valley journalism.

SORES-ULCERS THE BLOOD DISEASED -SYSTEM DISORDERED

When a Sore or Ulcer is slow in healing it is the best evidence of a diseased condition of the blood and a disordered system. They show that the bodily impurities, which should pass off through the natural channels of nature, are being retained in the system from some cause. The blood absorbing the waste matters becomes steeped in poison which finds an outlet through the Sore or Ulcer, keeping it inflamed, painful and festering. As the blood constantly discharges its poison into these places, they eat deeper into the surrounding flesh and tissues, growing larger and more offensive in spite of all the sufferer can do, until the entire health is affected. Washes, salves, powders and such treatment are desirable for the reason that they are cleansing and also help to relieve the pain, but they are in no way curative. The blood is filled with poison, and until it is removed the sore cannot heal. S. S. S. is the only cure for these evidences of impure blood. It goes down to the root of the trouble and cleanses the circulation of all poisons and impurities. S. S. S. enriches the blood and reinvigorates the different members of the body so that the impurities and waste matters can pass off as nature intended. Then the discharge ceases, the sore scabs over, new flesh is formed, and the place heals permanently. [illegible] ok on Sores and Ulcers and any medical advice you need without charge.

I have not words strong enough to praise your great medicine. I had a sore on my left temple for years. It would itch, burn and bleed, and I could not get it to heal. After taking S. S. S. awhile it began to discharge, and when the poisonous matter was out it healed. This was about ten years ago and I have never seen any sign of it since.

CHAPTER V.

Mattazudo the Half-Breed.

In one of the most luxurious rooms of the Castle of Salvarez a tall, somber-looking man, clad in a gorgeous uniform, stood near a table, looking down at a map of Venezuela, his long, thin finger tracing the boundaries of the states, and his eye measuring the distance from Bolivar to Caracas.

On one side of him stood Ferdinand Gomez, on the other stood Don Juan Garza.

"Your Majesty sees that we hold a most important position," said Gomez.

In the presence of others Gomez called the pretender by the royal titles. What he called him when they were alone was the more familiar name of Philip.

The stranger raised his dark, burning eyes rested them on the face of Gomez.

"I see that we occupy a central position," he said, "but on the wrong side of the Orinoco. We command here, perhaps; but all the strength of the Republic and all her wealth are separated from us by the great river."

"You are mistaken," replied Gomez. "It is true that the army of Crespo is in the north. But the wealth of Venezuela—the true wealth, not the buildings and customs port and towns, but the vast stores of gold and silver in the mountains—is on this side."

"Of what use is it to talk of gold and silver in the mountains?" he demanded. "Did we come here as prospectors? Did we buy twenty thousand rifles and rouse the half-breeds here simply to enable us to work a claim? Our work lies in the north."

"True," responded Gomez. "I do not wish to imply that we must not look across the great river. We do not own Venezuela till we occupy the capital. But I do not desire the value of this part of the country to be underrated, as it has always been heretofore."

"Time enough for that," said Philip of Aragon. "Where do we strike next?"

"Before making any attempt at crossing the Orinoco," said Gomez, "it will be necessary to annihilate the force under Salvarez. It is, I admit, smaller than our own; but it is still large enough to give us considerable trouble. Moreover, Salvarez is a man of resources, and as long as he has a company at his back will be dangerous."

"Where is Salvarez now?" asked Philip.

"About a half-mile below the castle."

"Will he attack?"

"He certainly will. Salvarez is not the man to accept defeat without a struggle."

"Yet, with the guns left in the battlements and our well-armed infantry, we should be able to defeat him."

"That is without question. There is no cause to fear the result of a battle."

"Let them come," said Gomez. "I will be ready for them. I will visit the men again and reassure your Majesty."

"It has occurred to me, your majesty," said Don Juan, as soon as the door had closed behind Gomez, "that instead of waiting until you reach Caracas to declare yourself king, you should do so at once, and become crowned before the people who are now with us."

Philip spent a moment, with bared head, deep in thought. Raising his head, he said:

"Garza, wisest and best of counselors, I think you are right. I see it now with your eyes. We must guard against defection from our ranks. As you say, it will be best for me to take the crown at once."

* * *

Just outside the door Gomez stood listening. There was a most ugly look on the face of the leader of the royalists.

He walked quickly away when he heard the resolve of Philip, and hurried to a small outbuilding that had been designated as the headquarters of Mattazudo, the leader of the Zambos.

Mattazudo was there. He looked up when Gomez entered.

"I want to see you alone," said Gomez.

Mattazudo was smoking a huge, black cheroot. He puffed some pungent smoke toward Gomez. Humility, respect toward superiors, were not parts of the character of Mattazurdo. His dark face was villainous in its expression. He was the man for dark deeds; he was the man Gomez wanted.

"Well," he said, "am I not alone?"

"I did not know," answered Gomez. "I saw only you, but there may be others near."

"None," said Mattazudo.

Gomez took a seat near him.

"Mattazudo," he said, "you have known me a long time."

Mattazudo laughed.

"Longer than I would want it known at Caracas if this affair fails," he said.

"We have been friends," said Gomez, ignoring the words.

Mattazudo darted a quick look toward Gomez.

"Well," he said questioningly, "you have a game. Out with it."

"Do you want to earn some money?" asked Gomez.

"If it is enough."

"One thousand Bolivars."

Mattazudo started.

"A thousand Bolivars is a good deal," he said, "I never had more than fifty at any one time." A Bolivar is about twenty cents in United States money.

"You shall have a thousand," said Gomez, "if you will do what I ask."

"You know me too well to doubt," said Mattazudo. "You have only to command."

"There is something in the situation here that you do not know," said Gomez, "and which does not concern you personally; but it does me. You have seen Garza's daughter?"

Mattazudo's eyes opened.

"The beauty! Oh, yes, I have seen her! What eyes! What an ankle!"

Gomez looked displeased.

"Her eyes and ankles do not concern you," he said. "Now, listen to what I have to say. By the power that Garza had in New York, he obtained a great influence over the king. Garza was the only man in the United States who could obtain for us the money we needed to make our movement a success. It is, therefore, plain that for a time he held us in his hands."

"It would seem so, certainly," said Mattazudo, with a grin.

"He used this power to compel the king to promise to marry his daughter when the crown of Venezuela had been placed on his head."

Mattazudo puffed harder.

"Well," he said, "it isn't on yet. Caracas is far from here. Why do you grow disturbed so soon?"

"Caracas is far from here, it is true; but Caracas is not necessary to a crown. Philip has already announced that in one hour he will be crowned king before his army."

Mattazudo looked surprised.

"A spectacle for the multitude! He is wise," he said.

"True. It is a good move for his interests, but a bad one for mine."

"Ah! You want the coronation postponed—prevented, perhaps. You would like to be king of Venezuela yourself, perhaps?"

"Nonsense," said Gomez, impatiently. "Even if I wished it, I am not such a fool to try. It will be a difficult thing at best to maintain the throne on this continent, and would be utterly impossible without the help of Spain, and Spain will help no one but a Spaniard of noble birth. What I want is far different. The coronation is a good thing in its way. Let it go on. But the marriage of Lola Garza to the king must be prevented. I saw her and loved her before Philip, and she must be mine. Rather than lose her, I would sacrifice the king—the war—everything!"

Mattazudo shifted uneasily.

"You say too much," he said.

"I speak only to you," said Gomez. "You see how I trust you."

"What do you want me to do?" asked the half-breed.

"Some time within the hour, Salvarez will attack the castle. There will, of course, be much excitement, and a good deal—anything—can be done in the turmoil. I will contrive to get Philip and Don Juan out on the battlement, and while they are there, you must in some way get to Lola's room and get her away out of the castle."

"Well?"

"Take her to some safe hiding place near here, and leave her, bound hand and foot. You know of a safe place, do you not?"

"Plenty. But why do you tell me to do what you could do as well?"

"You forget. As general in command of Philip's army, I must be always at hand if he should demand my presence. A short absence would be surely noticed. It would be impossible for me to take the time necessary to get her out of the castle. You must do it. You must be careful not to be discovered. You must also be careful not to fall into the hands of the soldiers of Salvarez."

"You may trust me. I am too old to be caught in so simple a thing as this. But where is the girl's room? How am I to find her?"

Gomez took a pencil and paper from his pocket and hastily drew a rude plan of the interior of the castle.

"Here," he said, "follow me. This room on the main hall was the library of Salvarez. It is now the council room of Philip. At one end of the hall is the east gallery. There, you will find a door as I have located it here. You will find Lola there."

"I can find it," said Mattazudo.

"Very well. Now, where will you take her?"

Mattazudo studied a moment.

"One mile up the Coroni," he said, "in a hut, lives old Ramana—"

"Ramana the Carib! He who claims to be the Indian king?"

"The same."

"Why, he is a devoted friend of Salvarez."

"Well, what has this to do with his friendship for Salvarez? He is at least an honest Indian, and that is something. Moreover, it will not be difficult to make his loyalty to Salvarez serve our purpose. Ramana does not know I am with you. I take the girl to him, and tell him I have captured her from Philip during the fight, and he is to keep her until Salvarez or I come for her. Later I can get her and bring her to you."

"I prefer to get her for myself."

"Well; until you come for her. Ramana does not know you. You can be a messenger from me."

"Good! Now, how am I to know this hut? I do not recall it."

"There is a large white stone in front of it."

"I will find it. Hark! My name! The sentry is giving the alarm. Salvarez is beginning the attack. I must go to my work. See to it that you do yours."

"Trust me," said Mattazudo, as he walked off.

CHAPTER VI.

The Attack.

General Salvarez was deep in the council of war with his officers, when his wife and daughter reached him. They rushed into his arms with exclamations of mingled joy and woe.

"How did you escape?" said Salvarez. "Tell me about the attack on the castle. Our men say they fought bravely, and killed a hundred of the enemy."

"Fought bravely!" replied Dona Maria. "There was no fighting at all. A few shots were fired, it is true. But of what use would it be for a few to stand against hundreds?"

"Who are the two Americans, father?" asked Jacinta, who had heard enough about the war.

"Oh, the Americans! Where are they? I have not missed them till now. Where did you see them?"

"Near the castle. Pedro Francisco is with the enemies of the republic, and was looking for us in the castle grounds. When we left the secret passage he came upon us, with two others, and the Americans beat them off and brought us within a short distance of you. They are here, so they said, to rescue a young girl from the hands of the conspirators against our liberty."

Salvarez dismissed the Americans from his mind, and began preparations for attacking the castle.

Having reached the most advantageous point within his grasp, Salvarez planted his two guns, ready to begin the attack.

It was at this point that the sentinel on the tower had passed the word for Gomez and had interrupted his talk with Mattazudo.

Salvarez first took the precaution to send his wife and daughter some distance away from the scene in the care of a score of soldiers under a lieutenant. Freed from their loving but embarrassing presence, he now displayed himself fearlessly, and directed the movements in person.

The soldiers under Salvarez were of the same classes as those under Francisco and Mattazudo; but as no class is altogether good, neither is any class altogether bad, and the half-breeds, even to the Zambos, who were among the supporters of the Government, fought bravely.

At the command of Salvarez the two guns boomed their wrath against the offending foe, and an answering charge of cannon and rifles awoke the echoes.

Again and again the booming guns poured out their wrath, but the walls of the castle crumbled not.

Meanwhile, Salvarez was restlessly pacing up and down. He recognized the impossibility of driving the enemy from his castle with the force at his command. A problem had presented itself to his mind. The secret passage! He resolved to hold the secret, intending, if necessary, to utilize it in some way at night.

His meditations were interrupted by loud shouts from his men. In the castle the preparations for the attack had been watched eagerly by Gomez, Don Juan and Philip of Aragon.

"That General is a cool fellow," said Philip. "He should be one of us."

"Salvarez is a brave man," said Gomez, "and as stubbornly loyal to the republic as he is brave."

"Salvarez seems to have confidence that his attack will be successful."

Gomez smiled.

"If he knew it would be a failure he would be as calm."

"Is there any danger that he will be successful?" asked Don Juan.

"Not the least."

"Is it, then, so strong a castle?" asked Philip.

"The strongest in Venezuela."

"Is it so? Then this spot was indeed well chosen as the spot to begin our operations."

Gomez smiled—his quiet, superior smile.

"I knew what I was doing," he said, "I generally do."

RIDING FOR INSOMNIA.

Outings on the Trolley Cars to Make People Sleep.

"There is a great deal of sound sense in persons suffering from insomnia taking rides on the trolley car to make them sleep, as I know from constant experience," said a conductor on an Overbrook night car to the Philadelphia Times. "Men who ride occasionally after midnight, and get on the car quite chipper, after Eighth street, are sound asleep before they reach the Schuylkill River. It is only men who are accustomed to work after midnight that can keep awake for a long ride. It is a common thing for me to see twenty men in a late car, all asleep. If I know where they want to go I wake them up, but they don't always tell me.

"The other night a man who lives near Fifty-second and Jefferson streets boarded a down car after midnight, saying that he could not sleep, and he thought a trolley ride would do him good. He kept awake all right until we got to the ferry, but on the up trip, after 1 o'clock, he fell asleep with the rest of the men in the car. I forgot all about him when we reached his street and carried him to Overbrook. Well, what's stranger, I forgot him again on the down trip and he slept all the way to the ferry. He made an awful row. On the up trip he slept all the way again, but it was daylight when he got to Forty-second street. The policeman on that corner was waiting for the car. The man's wife had been out to look for him."

He—Yes, she is living under an assumed name. She—Horrible! What is it? He—The one she assumed immediately after her husband married her.

LOCATING MEN IN SNOWSLIDE

Eli Smith is credited with having saved the lives of twenty-five men at Sheep Camp in the spring of 1898 at the time of the great snowslide on the Dyea trail. It will be recalled that sixty-three men were killed by the slide, most of them suffocating before rescuers could reach them. Smith was on the trail several miles below the slide. He came up three-quarters of an hour after the tragedy and found the survivors frantically trying to dig the victims out.

"Give me that stick," said Smith to a man who had a flat lathlike piece of wood in his hand.

The stick was turned over to Smith, who immediately whittled the end so that he could insert it in his mouth and grasp it firmly with his back teeth. Then he thrust the stick in the snow and held the end in his mouth, apparently listening. He repeated the operation at several points in the slide. Finally he shouted:

"Come! Dig here, quick!"

At a depth of nine feet the rescuers took out three men, unconscious, but alive. Those three men recovered and were all right by morning.

In the same manner Smith pointed out other places, which resulted in the locating of many bodies and the uncovering in all of twenty-five men whose lives were saved.

"Where did you learn that trick?" Smith was asked the other day.

"I learned that in Idaho, at Wood river," said he. "The Indians know that trick. I guess a wire would be better than a stick, but they don't keep wire in stock out in the wilds, so Indians always use a stick. You see if a feller is alive, you can sort of hear him breathe, or I guess it's more like feelin' him breathe. If he is kicking or moving around you can hear him plain. You just put the stick down into the snow two or three feet and you can hear a feller breathing, even if he's twenty feet further down."—Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

TWO ANECDOTES OF CRANE

A New York newspaper man who knew Stephen Crane, one of the most promising writers of English of his generation—who died before he was 30—when he was in London just after his return from the Graeco-Turkish war, relates some amusing stories concerning that erratic genius.

One morning Crane dropped into a newspaper office to borrow a sovereign from a friend. He said that he was going to luncheon with Harold Frederic, now also dead, for whom he had an admiration almost amounting to awe, but with whom he was then only slightly acquainted, though they afterward became inseparable friends.

In the middle of the afternoon Crane came back for another sovereign and told a tale of woe. He had asked Frederic into a "pub" to have an appetizer on their way to luncheon, and had handed out the sovereign he had just borrowed in payment therefor. The barmaid had laid the change down before Frederic, who, engaged in an earnest discussion with Crane, had mechanically picked it up and put it in his pocket, without pausing for a moment in his conversation. Crane's reverence for his fellow-craftsman was so profound that he preferred to lose the money rather than embarrass him by asking for it.

Acquaintances of S. S. McClure, proprietor of McClure's Magazine, will appreciate Crane's emotions on another occasion about the same period. McClure has two brothers, and the three bear a striking resemblance to one another, with their pronounced Scotch features and fair hair and mustaches. Crane rushed up to a friend in Trafalgar Square one morning in a condition of great excitement.

"I've had a terrible shock," he said. "I was coming through the Strand just now and I saw three S. S. McClures standing at the corner of Bedford Street."

FOR HAPPY MARRIED LIFE

We are resolved to return from our honeymoon full of high hopes and bright anticipations of the unknown future that stretches so fair before us. Remembering that, though at times dark clouds may momentarily obscure our happiness, the sun will shine through the gloom, and all will be radiant again.

To live well within our income, and every year save something for the rainy days which, sooner or later, are bound to come.

To try to correct our own individual faults, instead of wondering at the size and number of each other's.

To be perfectly frank and loyal in all our thoughts, words and deeds, and let nothing have power to breed mischief between us.

To never have a second quarrel, for the very good reason that we never have had, nor intend to have, a first.

To treat our respective mothers-in-law with due propriety, and try our best to get on well with all our new relations.

To take for our motto that golden rule of married life—to bear and forbear.

To resolutely resolve to always stand shoulder to shoulder to fight the battle of life, for union is strength.

To never do things, however much we would like to, that we know are against the wishes of the other; and, above all, never try to deceive or have secrets from each other.

To keep a sharp lookout for the "little rift within the lute" which will change the music of the domestic duet from the glorious major to the mournful minor key.

To, if our marriage is a failure, let nobody but ourselves be aware of the sorrowful fact.—New York Weekly.

AND FOSDICK SOLD OUT

When it was announced in Brookby that Albert Fosdick had decided to give up the grocery business, nobody was much surprised; Albert's methods had not been of the sort to commend themselves to the ordinary shopkeeper.

"But I expect he'd have kep' it up for years if it hadn't been for that kind of a cyclone we had summer before last," said a Brookby resident to a returned native. "You see, 'twas Albert's custom to keep his hat on all the time, he being so bald, and he'd write what folks had bought on little slips of paper, and stick 'em inside the lining of his hat, and come Saturday night he'd figure 'em up at home, with his wife to help him.

"Well, the cyclone, or whatever 'twas, struck us Saturday afternoon. Albert had just stepped to the door when the wind struck him. His hat was tron off'n his head, and nobody ever knew where it went.

"I don't consider that Mis' Fosdick had ever thought he was a real stirring business man, and folks said they had high words that night. I expect most of the Brookby fam'lies paid up pretty well, but there's a mess of people down toward the river that aren't overscrup'lous. Anyway, Mis' Fosdick told Albert if he hadn't realized but $9.17 on his week's sales, and had got a hat to buy, too, she thought 'twas about time he retired from active business, and accordingly he did so.

"He is now engaged in driving her about to sell soap and get subscriptions for 'The World's History in Field and Rock,' and I notice she carries a reticule."—Youth's Companion.

DR. TINKHAM'S FIRST CASE

The witty and genial Dr. Tinkham, who enjoys an enviable practice in Weymouth, Braintree and the surrounding towns, is fond of telling, at his own expense of how he secured his first patient.

It was some thirty-five years ago that he hung out his sign in Weymouth. Although not possessed of a patient, he was nowise discouraged, but every day at the close of office hours he brought his team to the door, rushed out, threw in his case, and drove off at a rattling gait. He had a regular route, which took him through Weymouth, over Penn's hill, Quincy, and into Braintree, and although he never made a single call, every day, rain or shine, he went galloping around.

One day, after two weeks of this strenuous exercise, as he neared Penn's hill an old man came out and shouted for him to come in and see his daughter, who was ill. Barely pulling in his horse enough to shout back, "Can't stop; in a dreadful hurry; call on my way back," the doctor raced on.

He was highly elated at the prospect of a patient, but soon realized it might be well to hasten back somewhat, for fear the person might be so ill as to require immediate attention, and some other physician might be called in. He therefore returned in very good time.

The old man was waiting for him, and as he limped toward the house said, inquiringly: "Pretty bad case up the road, ain't it, doctor? Must be dreadful sick; seen you going every day for a fortnight."—Boston Herald.

WOMAN AND THE HAIRPIN

Whenever her switch would grow suddenly loose
She would fasten it up with a hairpin.
And if her belt buckle grew too weak for use,
She would fasten it up with a hairpin.
Of mornings, when she wished to open her mail,
Or if in a magazine she read a tale
And wished to cut pages, this maid young and frail
Reached up in her hair for a hairpin.

A man might call for a whole box of tools—
She simply reached up for a hairpin;
A man might spend years in mechanical schools
To learn what she did with a hairpin;
A man would get flustered, and frown, and perspire,
And ask who the dickens had taken his wire
When for some repairing such stuff he'd require—
She always relied on a hairpin.

A scissors, a knife, or a tweezers or awl—
She did very well with a hairpin.
She found that the stairway that rose from her hall
Was measured quite well with a hairpin;
An egg beater broken? A laundry pipe plugged?
A corkscrew not found? Then her shoulders she shrugged
And reached, while her sense of contentment she hugged,
Right up to her hair for a hairpin.

A manicure set, and a button hook, too,
She always could find in a hairpin;
In fact, there was nothing a person could do
That she couldn't do with a hairpin.
One day she was wrecked in a passanger train;
The crew cried: "We'll have to send back for a crane!"
She murmured, her arm through a cracked window pane:
"Don't bother. I'll lend you a hairpin."

Share Fondness for Fishing.

Princess Yolande of Italy, although only four years old, already enters into the pleasures of her father and mother. The queen has a passion for fishing, which her little girl shares, so that morning after morning this little group of two is to be seen in the park at Racconigi side by side, line in hand, in profound silence.

HAD HEART PAINS

A Critical Case of Rheumatism Cured By Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

While Mr. W. S. Geisel, of No. 125 East Coates street, Moberly, Mo., was steadily working at his trade in a foundry at that place, he became the victim of an attack of rheumatism, and his experience is that of thousands who are compelled to work in similar surroundings. He describes his situation as follows:

"I had been at work for a long time in a foundry where I was exposed to dampness. First my feet began to hurt and to swell, then my knees and my shoulder joints began to be affected in the same way. Finally I could not walk without great difficulty and suffering and had to stop work altogether. My appetite was feeble and I grew very pale and weak. I began to have pains about my heart and it fluttered a great deal. I became greatly alarmed about my condition. My mother knew about the virtues of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, as they had given her back her health when she was nearly wasting to death, and when she found that they were good for rheumatism too, she began to give them to me about a month after I was attacked. That was in the early part of March, 1903, and by June they had driven away the pains and swelling and had restored my appetite and color. Then I felt strong enough to take up a line of outdoor work and now, in October, I regard myself as entirely well and I am about to go into a foundry again at St. Louis."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills also cure other diseases springing from impure blood or disordered nerves, such as sciatica, locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis and all forms of weakness in male or female. They may be had at all druggists or directly from the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

Do You Want to Know What You Swallow?

There is a growing sentiment in this country in favor of MEDICINES OF KNOWN COMPOSITION. It is but natural that one should have some interest in the composition of that which he or she is expected to swallow, whether it be food, drink or medicine.

Recognizing this growing disposition on the part of the public, and satisfied that the fullest publicity can only add to the well-earned reputation of his medicines, Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., has "taken time by the forelock," as it were, and is publishing broadcast a list of all the ingredients entering into his leading medicines, the "Golden Medical Discovery" the popular liver invigorator, stomach tonic, blood purifier and heart regulator; also of his "Favorite Prescription" for weak, over-worked, broken-down, nervous and invalid women.

This bold and out-spoken movement on the part of Dr. Pierce, has, by showing exactly what his well-known medicines are composed of, completely disarmed all harping critics who have heretofore unjustly attacked them. A little pamphlet has been compiled, from the standard medical authorities of all the several schools of practice, showing the strongest endorsements by leading medical writers of the several ingredients which enter into Dr. Pierce's medicines. A copy of this little book is mailed free to any one desiring to learn more concerning the valuable, native, medicinal plants which enter into the composition of Dr. Pierce's medicines. Address Dr. Pierce as above.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are tiny, sugar-coated anti-bilious granules. They regulate and invigorate Stomach, Liver and Bowels. Do not beget the "pill habit," but cure constipation. One or two each day for a laxative and regulator, three or four for an active cathartic. Once tried always in favor.

Royal Baking Powder Properly Labeled.

The Pure Food Law of Minnesota requires all baking powders to bear a clearly printed statement of the ingredients so that grocers and consumers may know the full character of the powder. All Royal Baking Powder labels bear such a statement printed in such manner as the law directs.

Royal Baking Powder is a pure cream of tartar powder of the highest quality. Grocers may know that in selling such goods they conform to the laws of this and all other states, and consumers realize that when using only pure cream of tartar powder they are helping carry out the best purpose of the Pure Food Law in protecting the health of the family from alum or like substitutes.

Always Keeps Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in His House.

"We would not be without Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It is kept on hand continually in our home," says W. W. Kearney, editor of the Independent, Lowry City, Mo. That is just what every family should do. When kept at hand ready for instant use, a cold may be checked at the outset and cured in much less time than after it has become settled in the system. This remedy is also without a peer for croup in children, and will prevent the attack when given as soon as the child becomes hoarse, or even after the croupy cough appears, which can only be done when the remedy is kept at hand. For sale by all druggists.

Starving to Death.

Because her stomach was so weakened by useless drugging that she could not eat, Mrs. Mary H. Walters, of St. Clair St., Columbus, O., was literally starving to death. She writes: "My stomach was so weak from useless drugs that I could not eat, and my nerves so wrecked that I could not sleep; and not before I was given up to die was I induced to try Electric Bitters; with the wonderful result that improvement began at once, and a complete cure followed." Best health Tonic on earth. 50c. Guaranteed by W. A. Schreiter, druggist.

The Breath of Life.

It's a significant fact that the strongest animal of its size, the gorilla, also has the largest lungs. Powerful lungs means powerful creatures. How to keep the breathing organs right should be man's chiefest study. Like thousands of others, Mrs. Ora A. Stephens, of Port Williams, O., has learned how to do this. She writes: "Three bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery stopped my cough of two years and cured me of what my friends thought consumption. O, it's grand for throat and lung troubles." Guaranteed by W. A. Schreiter, druggist. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

Do Not Neglect a Bad Cold.

Never allow a cold to take its course. Too often at this season of the year its course is toward pneumonia. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will promptly cure yuor cold and counteract any tendency in this direction. There is nothing better for acute throat and lung troubles. For sale by all druggists.

"To Cure a Felon"

says Sam Kendall, of Phillipsburg, Kan. "just cover it over with Bucklen's Arnica Salve and the Salve will do the rest.' Quickest cure for Burns, Boils, Sores, Scalds, Wounds, Piles, Eczema, Salt Rheum, Chapped Hands, Sore Feet and Sore Eyes. Only 25c at W. A. Schreiter's drug store, Guaranteed.

TWO BATHS IN TEN YEARS

Iowa Woman Seeking Divorce Says That One Plunge Was Caused by Fall Into the River.

Des Moines, Ia.—Because her husband took but two baths in ten years, one of them being occasioned by an accidental fall into the river, Mrs. Isola Harvey has brought suit for divorce against J. J. Harvey. Her action results from the previous filing of a petition for divorce against her, and it is in a cross petition that Mrs. Harvey makes the allegation that he has taken but one voluntary bath during their marital existence.

She further charges that her husband was fretful and stingy. She says he would not speak to her or the children for weeks at a time, and then would suddenly go to the other extreme, becoming extremely garrulous, and alluding to the children as idiots and lunatics. She alleges that he also pulled a knot of hair from her head and threw her out of the house.

But it was as a "tight wad" that Mrs. Harvey says her husband was a star performer. She says he refused to let loose of his coin with such perseverance that, in order to keep the house in repair, she was compelled to do the lathing and to paint the outside of the house as far as she could reach. She claims she drew the line at climbing ladders to paint, believing it to be the extreme of immodesty.

She alleges that another evidence of his penuriousness was manifested in his insistence that she cut his hair, and that of the children. This service was performed in the good old-fashioned way of placing a soup bowl on the head and clipping off the protruding locks.

HAS ANTI-FOREIGN FEELING

Returned Chinese Missionary's Views on Its Origin and Ways of Expression.

Oakland, Cal.—Rev. Arthur Smith, a missionary in China, who returned the other day on the Siberia, is visiting friends in this city. He said:

"The strong anti-foreign feeling in China is due in large part to the defeat of Russia by Japan. The Chinese are awakening to the fact that they are not a subject people. The feeling against the United States is very bitter because of the exclusion act. This feeling is heightened by imaginary wrongs and exaggerated descriptions of indignities heaped on Chinese in this country as sent home by Chinese in the United States. But China, as a whole, has come to a belief that it is easier and cheaper to carry on a negative war against the United States than to attack missions and kill missionaries. The country has learned that where there is no violence there is no punishment to follow. This feeling is confined to the coast cities, however, and I do not believe that it would be safe for an American to venture into the interior provinces. What the more intelligent of the Chinese want is that the exclusion act shall be intelligently interpreted, and shall be enforced only against those classes whom it is meant to affect."

DEATH UNITES OLD CHUMS

Partners for Half a Century and Lifelong Friends Die Together in Albany, N. Y.

Albany, N. Y.—Playmates from boyhood, partners for half a century and inseparable friends during their lifetime, John Reilly and Joseph McLean, two of Watervliet's best-known men, will rest side by side in a local cemetery. Mr. Reilly, 82 years old, and Mr. McLean, 79 years old, were members of St. Patrick's church for over 50 years and the pastor of that congregation officiated at both funerals within two days.

The history of Mr. Reilly was practically the history of Mr. McLean. The parents of both came from Ireland when the boys were very young. John and Joe went to school together, and became fast friends. When school days ended the firm of Reilly & McLean was formed and a prosperous coal business was carried on in conjunction with the management of a ferry across the Hudson to Troy until death broke the partnership and took the other member of the firm two days later.

Both men were commanding figures on the streets of Watervliet and both were Democrats of the old school. Each had been honored with all the local offices within the gift of the village and city of which they had always been proud.

PARIS IS TAKING TO SNUFF

Society Women Return to Usages of an Older Generation—Vice Becomes Public.

Paris.—Society dames in Paris have revived the objectionable custom of taking snuff. Even aristocratic Faubourg St. Germain scarcely frowns, for the habit is sanctioned by memories of monarchy. This return to a custom of olden times is due to a revival of interest in the tiny chef d'oeuvres of enamel painting done in Limoges a century and more ago.

From the collectors' cabinet these exquisite and now costly toys have passed into the salon and the ballroom. They were carried first as ornaments, but now are filled with fragrant powder.

The lamentable result is that it is now the fashion to take snuff publicly and the ballrooms resound with the sneezes of the inexperienced. The older people are even more addicted to it than the younger ones.

Where the Wrinkles Are.

A writer wants to know whether cooking makes wrinkles in a woman's face. Well, certain styles of cooking make wrinkles in men's faces.

THE RISE OF A MONEYLESS MAN.

James Jameson was a telegrapher of note. Celebrated not so much for his ability as for his agility. He measured six feet four standing and four by six lying; could do an artistic and able-bodied job of lying; was popularly known as "Slim Jim from Jersey, the Swift Stepper," and was an all 'round good fellow. His nickname and photograph, however, did not match.

Jim was a saving chap with a knack for making wise investments. He purchased, on the installment plan, three acres of pond, had a connection built to the city water mains, paid 18 cents a thousand gallons for what he got and at the end of three weeks sold the accretion for $16 a square foot. It had cost him $16 an acre.

Sally Jameson, a charming maiden of certain age, twin sister of Jim, was his housekeeper. Orphans, they had journeyed along life's rugged slopes living in unselfish devotion to each other.

Gradually they accumulated a surplus, and after some discussion it was decided to open an account at one of the banks. It was thereupon arranged that either the signature of Jim or that of his sister would be honored as a charge against the account. Thus was Sally spared the humiliation of asking for money, and by the same token imbued with a desire to augment, by the practice of economy, the Jameson fortunes. At all events the arrangement proved so successful that, at the end of six years, when the two city banks consolidated, the Jameson account was in a flourishing condition.

The first pay day after the bank consolidation Mr. Jameson, after having his account balanced, found himself "over" $21 and "short" three checks for $7 each drawn by his sister. He wrote to Mr. Munnimacher, the cashier, expressing the hope that none of his sister's checks had been dishonored. The reply stated that all checks against the Jameson account had been paid when presented. The following month a surplus of $47 was noted, with a corresponding deficit in checks.

Each month thereafter the amount to the credit of the account became larger, and as Jim quit drawing checks his balance assumed a "watch-me-grow" aspect that was intoxicating. Jim bought a phunnygraph; his sister drew the check; an automatic piano player, little sister's patience tried again; an automobile, and $2,000 worth more of feminine chirography. Jim tried to subdue the machine, but decided that an automobilistic surgeon's bill might fracture even the Jameson credit, so he hired a coiffure or chauffeur or something.

Month after month the bank book was returned with no deductions, no vouchers, no nothing except an ever increasing balance. Jim wrote frequent letters to the bank's officers, in one of which he made facetious reference to the fact that he probably had solved the problem "How to be wealthy though poor."

At last the monotony of placing pay checks in the bank became unbearable. Jim tendered his resignation and became known as a prominent capitalist. He expended his time and money liberally, became a patron of everything, bought stock—with sister's checks—in the Blue Skies of Cuba company, the stock certificates being guaranteed to be suitable for framing.

A stone mansion on Robin's Roost boulevard was purchased and an elaborate system of entertaning inaugurated. Mrs. Jonasen, a beautiful and accomplished widow, was a frequent and welcome participant in the jolly doings. Her society was sought by all, not only on account of her wealth, which was said to be fabulous, but for her wit, grace and beauty as well. She was a fearless trolleyist, played golf, checkers and pinochle, could even build fires and put the proper trimmings on strawberry salad. The kitchen utensils, skillets and such were so well groomed that looking glasses were not needed in the Jonasen bungalow.

Mr. James Jameson felt a tingling sensation under his watch pocket every time the widow crossed his vision. He was in love! He was a diffident fellow, but finally brushed up enough courage to express his sentiments. He proposed. The widow had long entertained a rather exalted opinion of the business qualifications of the man who had, from a small beginning, carved his way to a position of undeniable standing and influence in the community. She took the case, as a supreme court justice might say, under advisement, and four days afterward passed sentence upon Jim, although her decision had been reached in four minutes. The wedding was held in a glitter of splendor never surpassed and seldom equaled.

So ample had been the fortune left by Jeremiah Jonasen that his widow felt she could not spend it all no matter how lavishly she lived. Business cares embarrassed her. After withholding from the revenues of the estate sufficient money to meet current requirements she made periodical trips to the bank to deposit funds. She made no checks, and, therefore, regarded as superfluous the formality of having her account balanced.

Shortly after the honeymoon the enchanted pair decided to balance accounts. The books were sent to the bank and in a day or two that of the ex-widow was returned on a dray accompanied by the accumulated vouchers. The figures were entered in red. She had overdrawn!

The bookkeeper who had charge of the "J" accounts had not, at the time of the consolidation, had been notified of the arrangement of Jim and his sister.

Through his error a trunkful of sister's checks had been charged to the widow's account.

The court appointed a receiver.—Kansas City Star.

H[illegible]

Stegler was naturally a rather reserved sort of young man. He had few acquaintances and no friends in Chicago. It is not to be inferred that he had absolutely no social instincts, or that he was so unprepossessing as to repel people who might otherwise have cultivated his society to the sprouting of friendship. Quite the contrary. He was a good-looking boy, with likable manners, and he wanted friends. But he was shy.

He was a country boy—or from a country town, which amounts to about the same thing—and he had a sort of morbid consciousness of his rusticity, so that while he simply ached for companionship he was a little afraid of the small advances made by the other fellows in the office. When the day's work was ended he did not linger with the groups around the lockers who laughed and indulged in mild horseplay and planned amusement for the evening. He put on his coat—that skimp and somewhat threadbare garment of Higginsville cut—and went home to his lonely back bedroom, where, after the unappetizing supper of the boarding house, he read Thomas a Kempis and often wrote homesick letters to the dear woman who had given him the book. These he generally destroyed after reading them over and then he would burn the oil in the little kerosene lamp writing others that were exuberantly cheerful in their tone. He didn't want mother to worry.

But he was homesick all the same. Somehow Chicago people struck him as being intensely interested in themselves and their own affairs and not at all interested in Stegler. And no wonder, he thought, considering the way he looked. He had started from Higginsville with a new suit, but nobody seemed to wear clothes of that fashion in the city. And the difference was most marked in the overcoat. The overcoat was not even new.

Perhaps, thought Stegler, it would not be such a great extravagance to buy a new overcoat. He had not much money, and he had determined to husband it carefully. But, after all, a new coat seemed almost necessary. Wasn't is quite necessary? He debated that point in his mind for some days and began to look into the clothing store windows on his way to and from work.

There was one coat that particularly attracted him. It looked perfectly in style and had, moreover, a very substantial appearance. Fifteen dollars was the price. A pretty good sum of money, but style and quality are not to be had for nothing. Stegler knew that. He looked it all over again and again until he had every button and seam of it by heart. He could close his eyes and see it at any time. He hesitated a day or two and then plucked up courage and entered the store.

The clerk who came forward to wait upon him did not impress Stegler favorably. He seemed to be a very supercilious sort of young man and he looked disparagingly at the old coat and hurt Stegler's feelings. Then it seemed the coat in the window was several sizes too big and there were no more like it. But here was a coat that was just as good or even a little better.

Still, it didn't strike Stegler that way. None of them seemed as good, or if it did it was more expensive. Two or three times he tried to get away from the salesman. He was desperately determined not to buy what he did not want. Still, the salesman held him and hauled out garment after garment until Stegler fairly broke away.

"Just one moment," said the salesman. Then to a stout elderly person who approached, 'Mr. Engenstein, will you show this gentleman an overcoat?'"

Stegler said, "I don't believe I'll buy—" But the stout man raised a chubby hand and beamed upon him so radiantly that he faltered.

"You come with me," said the stout man, laying the chubby hand affectionately on Stegler's shoulder. "I can fix you out with just exactly what you want. I'm Engenstein, and I own this store. If I haven't got something to suit you in it I want to know it, eh? How much, now, do you want to pay?" He patted Stegler's shoulder.

"Fifteen dollars," said Stegler, blushingly.

"Would you go eighteen?" asked Engenstein, anxiously. "Now don't say anything. Just look. I want to make a friend of you. A young man like you wants a stylish coat, and a well made coat, and good goods, ain't it? Here is an elegant coat. Try it on."

He smoothed it lovingly down the back, patted the lapels, and—well, you know the process. But it was the friendliness of this man that was so amazing. He exuded it. His good fellowship was irresistible; his smile was like the sun in its noonday splendor. His laugh was jollity and benevolence set to music. It was a $10 overcoat that he had fitted on Stegler, and he actually let him have it—not for the eighteen, but for the fifteen dollars. "You see," he reiterated, "I want you for my friend."

This was Engenstein, sole proprietor of these palatial clothing parlors; and he shook Stegler's hand warmly at parting, offered him a cigar, and begged him to call in and see him, Engenstein, any time he was passing. And shy Stegler went away with a warm glow beneath the left lapel of the new overcoat induced by the assurance that he had actually made a friend.

You may laugh at this little story if you please, but when Stegler, three days later, went into the store to have a button replaced—and was feeling a little lonely beside—when he approached Engenstein, who no longer smiled, and found that Engenstein had forgotten him, he was cut to the heart.—Chicago Daily News.

TOM'S VACATION.

BY HAYDEN CARRUTH.

"I hear," remarked the lawyer, as he toyed with the coffee spoon, "that young Tom Bisbee is broken down from overwork, and that it's doubtful if he goes back to college after the holidays."

"Yes, so I'm told," returned the editor, taking a cigar from the box proffered by the waiter. "Nervous prostration, they say. It's a shame how students are forced to work nowadays. I believe I'll give the college authorities a roast in to-morrow's paper."

"Well—yes—of course," observed the doctor, slowly, as he critically examined the lighted end of his cigar to see that it was started evenly. "What you say is true, in a measure. But if I were you, I wouldn't use Tom Bisbee as a horrible example in these editorials and sermons, and things you're going to produce. Write 'em, of course—write all you please—but don't drag Tom in."

"Why not?" demanded the editor.

"Well, I suppose I can tell without violating any professional secrets." He took a few more pulls at the weed, then went ahead with the following tale in the most solemn and earnest manner:

Tom Bisbee arranged to spend Christmas with his college roommate at a little New England town, and then came on home a day or two for the rest of the vacation. This roommate is named Powers, Frank Powers. Tom had never visited his friend's home, but as Frank had two or three sisters, and there were other young folks in the family, he looked forward to having a gay time. They arrived three days before Christmas, and immediately settled down to have it—the gay time, I mean.

It seems that there is also in the Powers family a maiden aunt, a Miss Hicktree, a very estimable lady, of I don't know how many years, but certainly of a considerably greater number than have passed over the head of Tom.

Tom, you know, is the best-hearted fellow in the world, but a little bashful, especially in the presence of the opposite sex. He was very anxious to make a good impression on his friend's family, and especially on one of his sisters, an attractive girl of about his own age. In fact, he had not been in the house six hours till he was head over heels in love with the girl. This, of course, only made him the more bashful, and every time he found himself in her presence he felt he was making a fool of himself each moment. Probably he wasn't, but this is the way he felt. Now, this embarrassment and his desperate desire to impress the family favorably, combined with his general good heartedness, caused him to begin paying special attention to the elderly Miss Hicktree, almost from the first. He did not feel embarrassed in her company, and talked freely on all subjects. Now, he assures me that the idea of making love to Miss Hicktree was as far from his thoughts as were the rules of Chinese grammar, but somehow the lady took it differently. Indeed, by the second day she conceived the notion that the young man was violently in love with her.

On Christmas Eve the whole household was gathered in the drawing-room, and there sprang up a lively discussion as to the best way of dealing with the Christmas presents. There was a difference of opinion, but Miss Dorothy, who was destroying Tom's peace of mind, stood out for the good old-fashioned way of hanging up stockings. "It would be a shame," she said, "not to utilize this big old fireplace. There's room along the edges of the mantel for all of our stockings, and then we can all get up early in the morning with the children and see what old St. Nicholas has brought us and have a jolly time before breakfast.

Accordingly, before retiring, they all hung their stockings along the mantel, amid much merriment. Even Tom got quite at his ease, and the last thing before withdrawing he announced in a confident tone that he should be the first one up in the morning, to see what the old saint had brought him.

It was scarcely four o'clock the next morning when Tom awoke. With the exuberance of youth he promptly bounded out of bed, hurriedly dressed and groped his way downstairs. Utter silence reigned, and when he reached the drawing-room door he was confronted by total darkness. He blundered against a chair and nearly fell over a hassock, but at last found the chandelier and scratched a match on the sole of his slipper. The gas flared up, and with buoyant expectancy the young man strained his eyes toward the fireplace. There on the mantel, with both feet thrust deep into his stockings, sat Miss Hicktree.

"He, he, Tommy, dear!" she gurgled.

The boy's knees smote together and his head reeled. Then with a hollow, hunted cry, he staggered back into the hall, tore open the front door and rushed down the steps and out into the darkness. A half hour later he was found struggling through the snow, three miles away, by a milkman, taken to a farmer's house and put to bed. On the second day, after he became rational, he told his address, and was brought home by a trained nurse.

It's all right, gentlemen, to denounce over-study in college—go ahead—I'm with you—but just let this case of Tom Bisbee alone. I'll attend to that, and if no complications set in I expect to have him back at school when the term opens.—Good Literature.

A BELIEVER IN PALMISTRY

By GEORGE G. MAGNUS

(Copyright, 1905, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

"Do endeavor to be sensible, Mr. Graham!" said Miss Muriel O'Connell, severely. "If it's only for a few minutes it will be good practice for you," she added, opening wide her fan.

I sighed audibly. Miss Muriel's fan is nothing more or less than a feather screen, behind which she takes a cruel delight in hiding upon the flimsiest excuse. Three whole precious minutes having been wasted—

"All right, I'll try. Please remove the partition."

The feathers slowly disclosed two laughing blue eyes.

"Listen, Mr. Graham!"

The first dreamy bars of the "Blue Danube" floated into the conservatory I said to myself—well, something unworthy of repetition. I said aloud: "Now, I suppose, I must take you back?"

A dimple appeared—such a dimple!

"You do look unhappy!"

"I look what I feel," said I. "I've only seen you twice during the last ten minutes. I shan't see you again probably for a week, and now I have to hand you over to some chap who won't appreci— I mean, who really wouldn't miss—that's to say—"

"Begin all over again," Miss Muriel suggested, encouragingly.

"I say, can't you give him the slip?"

She gazed at me thoughtfully for a full minute. It was awfully jolly. Miss Muriel has the sweetest eyes in the world.

"I consider you a sad tempter," she remarked, abruptly.

"That's the nicest thing you've said this evening!"

She took my word for it, and smiled demurely. I took her programme to make the necessary correction. Then it was I discovered, with bitter chagrin, the scrawling initials of one, Adolphus Spooner, affixed to the dance I had appropriated. Spooner is without exception the worst waltzer and the biggest ass I know! I recalled my last observation. Miss Muriel laughed. Then a silence fell between us. I divided my attention impartially between gazing at my companion, who seemed to be deriving unlimited pleasure from dissecting a fragment of palm.

She threw away what remained of the leaf. Then a brilliant idea seized me. I fancy it owed its origin to Miss Muriel's late plaything, for brilliant ideas and I are, unhappily, on scarcely visiting terms.

"Are you a believer in palmistry?"

"What do you know about it, Mr. Graham?"

I knew that in order to correctly read Miss Muriel's palm, it would be necessary to hold her hand in mine. Miss Muriel's hand is just made for this treatment.

"Everything worth knowing," I answered, truthfully.

"I have never had my hand read," she remarked, indifferently, "but I know girls who have. Those who have been told nice things believe in it fervently."

"Surely you have no fear of joining the unbelievers, Miss O'Connell? Come, allow me to convert you."

Miss Muriel put out her hand an inch at a time.

"I'm not a schoolmaster," I hastened to assure her.

The hand came a wee bit nearer. I seized it firmly with my left and covered it with my right.

"Is there any necessity," she began, indignantly.

"It's absolutely essential," said I, with unruffled serenity.

Miss Muriel's scorn was very complete.

"How absurd! You can't see my palm."

Being forced to admit the truth of this statement I reluctantly uncovered the hand, and, in order to collect my thoughts gazed long and fixedly at the little pink lines. I found them very fascinating.

I began to trace the lines with the tip of my finger, inwardly praying that it was the right thing to do. Miss Muriel laughed most provokingly. I looked at her sternly.

"I—I can't help it," she cried; "you tickle me so!"

"Ah. I see. I will be more careful in future. You have a very pretty—I mean, a very well-balanced hand, Miss O'Connell. I note you are honest, upright, clear-headed, temperate—"

"You are converting me very rapidly!"

"I was going to tell you a lot more nice things. Now you have put them completely out of my head." (Miss Muriel sighed deeply.) "You will be pleased to hear that you are not likely to steal anything—save the hearts of mere men. . . . This little twirly line round the thumb denotes that your temper is even; when roused hasty, and soon over; when fully roused—well—I think I had better get on with the fate line. A rather uncertain fate is shown. But it will turn out all right—provided you do a certain thing. Next we come to the heart line—did you speak?"

"Merely smiled."

"It was a very audible smile," said I, severely. "The heart line shows up very strong. You have a very large heart, Miss O'Connell."

"I must see a doctor about it."

"I should advise a specialist! To continue, it is clear that you prefer giving it away in driblets to a large army of hungry admirers, rather than—"

"Pray don't stop. I should never have believed you could be so entertaining."

"Please don't interrupt!—rather than giving it wholly to one. Further it is shown that the possessor of this much coveted little hand is not above carrying on a flirtation—"

"What girl is, Mr. Graham?" pleaded Miss Muriel.

"Wait!" I said, sternly. "Not above carrying on a flirtation with a man—"

"Oh, no, not with a man!" she cried in horror.

"With a man who loves her!" I concluded.

Miss Muriel snatched away her hand and sprang to her feet.

"How dare you say such a thing!" she cried, her blue eyes flashing. "I shall return to the ballroom. I prefer dancing with Mr. Spooner."

"Have some pity!" I implored. "I'm sure you wouldn't have me tell you things that were not true."

"Which line told you what—what you just dared to say?"

"If you will come a little closer."

"No, you can point it out on your own."

I opened my hand and studied it for a long time.

"I don't appear to possess the line in question," I said at last.

"I can well understand your surprise," she retorted. "Judging from the length of your search, you certainly expected to find it!"

"I always try to oblige a lady," I murmured, feebly.

As I spoke a sudden idea seemed to seize her, for she smiled and sat down again. I lost no time in following her good example. A slight pause ensued.

"Suppose you let me read your hand," she said, abruptly.

"I—I beg your pardon? Why, you don't know anything about it!"

"Give me your hand."

"I wish you would give me yours."

Miss Muriel ignored my want, and with fine scorn, exclaimed: "You are afraid!"

Whereupon I held out my hand. Miss Muriel took it very carefully—no covering it, or anything of that sort.

"I will start with the heart line, as that seems the most highly developed," she began in business-like tones. "I note you possess an enlarged heart. I further observe that affection for the fair sex en masse, is the cause. It appears that you cannot resist any girl that smiles on you. . . . I regret to see that your heart is also incapable both of giving and retaining affection for longer than an ordinary holiday. You must have change. It is perhaps due to your impressionableness that you have such a failing for proposing, almost at sight!"

She paused for breath, and, dabbing my brow with my handkerchief, I seized the opportunity to inquire: "To which line do I owe all this, please?"

"This fat, curly one," she answered, calmly.

"Thanks. I must see if I can't have it altered."

"I don't see what difference that will make to your heart," she observed.

"I didn't say I wanted to alter my heart," I said, stiffly. "Indeed, I have only loved one girl in my life, and I have only proposed once in my life."

"Oh, Mr. Graham!"

Miss Muriel drew hastily away from me and opened her objectionable fan.

"What reason have you for doubting my statement—for saying 'Oh,' like that?" I asked, rather cleverly gaining possession of my enemy.

"I will tell you. Didn't you propose to Miss Mathews the very same day you honored me?"

"Before or after?" I inquired with interest.

"You would know that best," she answered, frigidly.

"Undoubtedly! And that girl told you this—and you believed it?"

"She didn't exactly tell me."

"Insinuated it?"

"I understood that such was the case."

"Ah! These dear girls! Would you mind my asking whether she accepted the honor? I'm sure you will pardon my inquisitiveness on this point."

My companion, ignoring my anxious question, pulled her wrap over her beautiful shoulders. Then she rose, tugging on her long glove with feverish haste.

"I am engaged to Mr. Roberts for this next dance," she said, somewhat irrelevantly.

She turned on her heel. I took a quick step after her and caught her round the waist.

"Mr. Graham! How dare you! Release me this moment!"

"Not until you have answered my questions."

I drew her to me resisting, her face crimson, her blue eyes blazing.

"Now tell me," I said, "do you still believe that lie? Oh, if a man had uttered it! . . . When you refused me, you gave me some hope. Has what that girl told you made you treat me as you have been treating me, like an overgrown schoolboy who doesn't know his own mind! Lastly, do you care for Mr. Roberts? You shall tell me! I can't go on like this; I must know whether there is any chance for me, now. Oh, Muriel! Tell me, once and for all, can you love me in return, and if you don't, if you can't, I swear by all I hold dear, never to cross your path again."

Then I released her—but she did not leave me. She was trembling from head to foot. Was it with anger? I raised her face, now strangely pale, and made her meet my eyes. I held them! I looked into her very soul, and as I looked, "Muriel!" I whispered, "Muriel, my sweetheart!"

A little later we were seated behind the palms again. But how different was the grouping!

"Do you think he will mind very much?"

"He ought to, by Jove! But don't think about such things as Mr. Roberts; let's think of nothing but ourselves."

"I—I certainly misread your character," she said, softly. "I never thought you could look fierce, or be so masterful. I always thought—"

"Yes, I know," I interposed, with some haste. "But palmistry is a science, you know."

"Fiddlesticks!" cried Miss Muriel, rudely.

SOLDIERS BURIED ALIVE.

Disinterment of Bodies at Fort Hayes, Kan., Shows Ghastly Mistake.

Horrible discoveries were lately made in the cemeteries of old Fort Hayes, Kan., where the bodies of soldiers buried during frontier days are being disinterred and taken to Leavenworth for reburial. These discoveries go to show that a large number of those buried during the cholera scare and epidemic were really buried alive and afterward returned to consciousness while in the tomb. The matter is being discussed as little as possible among those doing the word, and is being suppressed by the authorities, who are giving out little or no information.

Caskets were disinterred that gave evidences of frightful struggles of the inmates for life. Some of the bodies had turned over; others had the legs drawn up to the neck; in others the hands were filled with hair that had been torn out by the roots, and the faces were distorted fearfully. In some the clothing was almost torn from the bodies.

The principal evidences of living interments were found in the section of the old cemetery, where a large number of cholera victims had been buried. During the cholera scare the health laws required the immediate burial of victims after they were pronounced dead. It is supposed that in the haste and fright a number of supposed dead men were buried, and that these later returned to consciousness.

CHANGES IN BIRTH RATES.

London Statistician Says Fluctuations Rise and Fall with Prices.

At a meeting of the Royal Statistical society, held recently in London at the society's rooms, a paper was read on "The Changes in the Marriage and Birth Rates in England and Wales During the Last Half Century, with an Inquiry as to Their Causes," by G. Udny Yule.

A careful examination in the fluctuations in the birth rate showed, declared Mr. Yule, that it appeared to respond, like the marriage rate, to the cycle of trade and industry, though the movement is curiously irregular as compared with that of the latter rate. The fall of the birth rate, or a marked increase in the rate of fall, commenced in many European countries just about 1875-76, that is, when the effect of the fall in prices from 1873 was just beginning to made itself felt.

The turning point was too well marked not to be due to some very definite cause, and too widespread to be ascribed to any cause of at all a local character. The greatest intercensal increase rates in England and Wales occurred, it was pointed out after periods of high prices.

WORDS BUT RARELY USED.

Strange Sentence in English Which Was Rattled Off by a Philologist.

A philologist was talking about words. "There are over 225,000 words in the English language," he said, "but we only use a few thousand of them. The extra ones are no use to us. Any man could sit down with a directory and write in good English a story that no one in the world would understand. Here, for instance, can you make head or tail of this?"

And the philologist pattered off glibly:

"I will againbuy the atabal. You are asweyed? Yet this is no blushet's bobance nor am I a cudden, either. Though the atabal is dern, still will I againbay it."

Then he translated:

"I will recover the drum. You are amazed? Yet this is no young girl's boasting nor am I a fool, either. Though the drum is hidden, still will I recover it."

Fire in Churches.

Chief Shaw, speaking of the practical operation of the law for the better protection of audiences in theaters and public halls from fire, remarks that while our churches are exempt from its provisions, as well as from monthly inspection, there is greater danger from fire or panic in many of our houses of worship than there is in most of the licensed places. This is frank and outspoken, though it isn't a new revelation. It is a fair question why church congregations ought not to be protected from the dangers of fire and panic as well as theater audiences.—Boston Herald.

Irving's Effects.

Referring to the recent sale of Irving's effects, the London Mail says: "The proceedings were altogether erratic. Mediocre drawings sold for pounds instead of shillings, excellent paintings for shillings instead of pounds. The relic was prized more highly than the work of art." Sargent's portrait of Ellen Terry sold for one-third of what Irving had been offered for it.

IN OPEN AIR 7 YEARS

LONDON FAMILY HOUSED ON THE COMMONS.

Father, Son and Daughter Sleep in Metropolis Park in All Kinds of Weather Until They Are Remanded for Conduct.

London.—The extraordinary statement that a family, consisting of a father and his grown-up son and daughter, have lived for seven years on Streatham common, sleeping in the open in all weathers, was made at the Southwestern police court.

Ernest Girard, a well-dressed and well-educated man of middle age; his son, William Edward Girard, and his daughter, Alice Eugenie Girard, who were both neatly dressed, were charged with sleeping out without any visible means of subsistence.

A policeman said that they had been familiar figures on the common for many years. They were there in all weathers, in rain, snow and frost, day and night. Complaints had been made by the residents about the common, but apparently they were never interfered with until recently.

Then they were arrested as they were making up their beds of newspapers under a shed, where they had taken shelter from the pouring rain.

Mr. de Grey, the magistrate, expressed his astonishment that something had not been done to exclude them from the common, and he was informed that the London county council, which is responsible for its management, is considering what action it can take in the matter.

The father, who said he was a teacher, declared that they had made the common their home for seven years, and that they injured no one. They had a claim against the British government, he said, and the police had no right to exclude them from the common.

When they were arrested, he said, they were walking along with their beds under their arms, and were preparing to make themselves comfortable for the night.

"If you imagine that your claim against the government entitles you to sleep out on the common you are mistaken," said the magistrate.

They were remanded, and the magistrate directed that inquiries concerning their antecedents should be made.

TO INCLOSE CITY BY CANAL

New York Judge Is at the Head of New Plan to Connect Hudson River and Long Island Sound.

Mount Vernon, N. Y.—Judge Adam E. Schatz, of this city, is at the head of a project backed by a number of prominent Westchester county residents to construct a ship canal to connect the Hudson river and the sound. The plans of Judge Schatz call for a canal 14 miles long crossing the county from Tarrytown to Port Chester. The estimated cost of the improvement is about $3,000,000.

Another part of the scheme is to incorporate that part of the county bounded by the canal on the north and the New York city line on the south into the new city of Westchester. The territory within these boundaries has a population of over 200,000, and would make a city of the first class. "It would become the Venice of America," says Judge Schatz, "the natural home part of New York."

Judge Schatz says that a bill will be submitted to the legislature this session asking for the appointment of a commission, and that a similar bill may be introduced in the Connecticut legislature, as the canal will border on that state for several miles. If the legislature will not take the question up a syndicate of capitalists will be formed to build the canal and operate it as a private venture.

VETERAN IS 101 YEARS OLD

Colbert P. Blair, a Soldier of the Black Hawk War, Was an Athlete in His Prime.

Corvallis, Ore.—Colbert Powell Blair, centenarian, was born New Year's eve in 1805, and passed his one hundredth birthday at Pendleton last New Year's eve. While still a small child he removed with his parents to Kentucky, where his youth was spent. Later he resided consecutively in Indiana, Illinois and Iowa, starting across the plains for Oregon in 1853. The first winter after the arrival in Oregon was spent on the Santiam, and the following spring he settled in Benton county. For 30 consecutive years he was bailiff of the Benton county circuit court. Fifteen years ago he went to live with a granddaughter at Pendleton.

In his youth he was known far and wide as an athlete. He was a soldier in the Blackhawk war and also in the Rogue river Indian war. Mr. Blair is still hale and hearty and in possession of all his faculties. He is somewhat forgetful of recent events, but remembers with great clearness many events of long ago.

Rare Operation.

Replacing the lungs, the heart and stomach, which were suspended in a sack from an opening in the abdomen of an Italian baby, was the rare operation performed in Memorial hospital, Morristown, N. J., by the staff physicians. The doctors are watching the result with great interest. There is every indication, they say, that the child will live. A normal respiration followed the operation, and as far as can be discovered the adjustment of the vital organs is perfect.

HOSPITALS CROWDED

MAJORITY OF PATIENTS WOMEN

Mrs. Pinkham's Advice Saves Many From this Sad and Costly Experience.

Miss Luella Adams

It is a sad but certain fact that every year brings an increase in the number of operations performed upon women in our hospitals. More than three-fourths of the patients lying on those snow-white beds are women and girls who are awaiting or recovering from operations made necessary by neglect.

Every one of these patients had plenty of warning in that bearing down feeling, pain at the left or right of the abdomen, nervous exhaustion, pain in the small of the back, pelvic catarrh, dizziness, flatulency, displacements or irregularities. All of these symptoms are indications of an unhealthy condition of the female organs, and if not heeded the trouble may make headway until the penalty has to be paid by a dangerous operation, and a lifetime of impaired usefulness at best, while in many cases the results are fatal.

Miss Luella Adams, of Seattle, Wash., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"About two years ago I was a great sufferer from a severe female trouble, pains and headaches. The doctor prescribed for me and finally told me that I had a tumor and must undergo an operation if I wanted to get well. I felt that this was my death warrant, but I spent hundreds of dollars for medical help, but the tumor kept growing. Fortunately I corresponded with an aunt in the New England States, and she advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it was said to cure tumors. I did so and immediately began to improve in health, and I was entirely cured, the tumor disappearing entirely, without an operation. I wish every suffering woman would try this great preparation."

Just as surely as Miss Adams was cured of the troubles enumerated in her letter, just so surely will Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cure other women who suffer from female troubles, inflammation, kidney troubles, nervous excitability or nervous prostration.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all young women who are ill to write her for free advice. She is daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham and for twenty-five years has been advising sick women free of charge. Address, Lynn, Mass.

Prison Newspaper.

The Star of Hope newspaper is published twice a week in the famous Sing-Sing prison in New York. Its contributors, editors, artists, compositors and publishers are the convict inmates. From the beginning to the end, the work is carried out solely by the prisoners.

Athletics at the Vatican.

Pope Piux X. has, among other innovations, introduced the custom of holding athletic gatherings at the Vatican. All the Roman Catholic gymnastico societies in Italy were recently invited to give their exercises in his palace, and a great carnival of athletics was held in the Vatican gardens.

Wrong Remedy.

Barney Oldfield was talking about a motor car of enormous horsepower, its breakdown, and the effort that had been made to resuscitate it.

"The car was doomed from the start," he said. "They adopted the wrong remedy in its case. Their remedy was as wrong as was a Jacksonville waiter's in my case.

"In Jacksonville, one day, I entered a restaurant and ordered a steak. When the steak came on it was so tough that I could hardly cut the gravy. I said to the waiter:

"'Waiter, this steak is awfully hard to cut.'

"The waiter hurried to me with a solicitous air.

"'Then, sir,' he said, 'I'll bring you another knife, sir.'"

GRAND TO LIVE.

And the Last Laugh Is Always the Best.

"Six months ago I would have laughed at the idea that there could be anything better for a table beverage than coffee," writes an Ohio woman—"now I laugh to know there is."

"Since childhood I drank coffee as freely as any other member of the family. The result was a puny, sickly girl, and as I grew into womanhood I did not gain in health, but was afflicted with heart trouble, a weak and disordered stomach, wrecked nerves and a general breaking down, till last winter, at the age of 38 I seemed to be on the verge of consumption. My friends greeted me with 'How bad you look! What a terrible color!' and this was not very comforting.

"The doctors and patent medicines did me absolutely no good. I was thoroughly discouraged.

"Then I gave up coffee and commenced Postum Food Coffee. At first I didn't like it, but after a few trials and following the directions exactly, it was grand. It was refreshing and satisfying. In a couple of weeks I noticed a great change. I became stronger, my brain grew clearer, I was not troubled with forgetfulness as in coffee times, my power of endurance was more than doubled. The heart trouble and indigestion disappeared and my nerves became steady and strong.

"I began to take an interest in things about me. Housework and home-making became a pleasure. My friends have marveled at the change and when they inquire what brought it about, I answer 'Postum Food Coffee, and nothing else in the world.'" Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

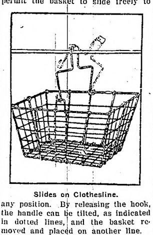
There's a reason. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

SHOWING THE WORLD'S PROGRESS

Clothespin Basket.

Below is illustrated a simple clothespin basket, which can be suspended from and adjusted on the clothesline so as to facilitate the operation of hanging or detaching the clothes. The receptacle is made of wire, the handle being pivoted to one side of the basket. The handle has a peculiar shape. The upper portion is bent to form a guard on which is placed a roller. The free end of the handle forms a hook, which fits into the side of the basket.

When it is desired to hang out clothes the basket is filled with pins and placed on the line by releasing the handle and introducing the line between the sides of the guard, allowing the roller to engage the line and permit the basket to slide freely to any position. By releasing the hook, the handle can be tilted, as indicated in dotted lines, and the basket removed and placed on another line.



Slides on Clothesline.

No Other Worlds Like Ours.

Are there other worlds like ours? The astronomers say that the solar system is unique in the known universe. Mars is the only other heavenly body yet known with conditions approximately adapted to the maintenance of life such as we know it upon the earth; and it is probable that if a strong, healthy man could be transported to our sister planet suddenly he would be able to breathe and live there for a time. It has a rare atmosphere, water, snow and ice, day and night, and seasons much like those upon the earth. But it is not possible to say that man could flourish on a planet like Mars any more than he can flourish on the peaks of the Himalayas or Andes.

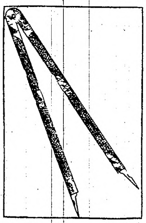
Simple Waterproofing Process.

A cheap and simple process for waterproofing canvas or duck is as follows: Soft soap is dissolved in hot water and a solution of sulphite of iron (green vitroil or copperas) is added. The sulphuric acid of the copperas combines with the potash of the soap, and the iron oxide is precipitated with the fatty acid as insoluble iron soap. This is washed and dried, and mixed with linseed oil and the mixture is applied to the fabric. The soap prevents the oil from getting hard and cracking and at the same time water has no effect on it.

Five Tools in One.

Artisans and handicraftsmen will find the instrument shown here of more than ordinary interest. It is a combination of rule, trysquare, bevel gauge, calipers and dividers, especially useful in laying out work. In construction it closely resembles a two-foot rule, but it contains certain features which can be used in the different capacities suggested. The two sections of the instrument are connected at one end by a pivot head, the latter being circular, and regulated by a clamping lever.

The pivot head is graduated, so that the head constitutes a protractor for measuring angles, inches and feet being marked on the rules, which are made of wood edged with binding strips of brass or similar material. At the extremities of the rules are small blades, which can be used as calipers when desired. The tool described is evidently very simple in construction and combines the usefulness of the different tools to which reference has been made.



Has Many Uses.

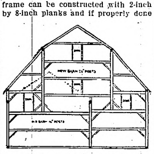
Few Airship Accidents.

During the past twenty years 2,061 balloon and airship ascents have taken place in Germany and only thirty-six cases of accident have befallen the 7,570 persons taking part in them. Consequently one trip in fifty-seven comes to grief, or one aeronaut in 210 meets with an accident.

EASY WAY TO WIDEN OLD BARN

Plans Shows a Method Any One Can Follow.

The accompanying plan shows how an old barn may be widened and the posts spliced. The old barn is 30 feet wide with 16 foot posts. As repaired the barn is 50 feet wide and has 25 foot posts. It may be any length required. When timber is scarce, the frame can be constructed with 2-inch by 8-inch planks and if properly done would be as good as solid timber. The heavy lines indicate timbers of old barn.



Drainage for Foundation.

1. We intend building a barn in the spring and wish to know the best way of draining the foundation. The soil is a black muck with a hard dry subsoil.

2. The building is to be 36 feet by 60 feet, and the wall concrete. What thickness is required?

3. Is it advisable to use cobble stones in the trench level with the ground.

4. How much material will be required?

1. To drain a foundation use tile drains, having tiles laid outside of walls and even the bottom of footings; these will catch any surface or soakage water from running underneath walls.

2. A cement wall one foot thick with a footing 6 inches thick and two feet wide would be sufficient for building mentioned above.

3. In building concrete walls, use all the stone fillers that can be thoroughly bedded in concrete in the footings and walls, but do not start concrete walls on top of trenches filled with cobble stone, for the water is liable to lay in among the stone and the frost will heave and crack the walls. Use the stone in the concrete in the bottom as described above.

4. For a concrete wall for a barn 36 feet by 60 feet by 3 feet by 1 foot, with footings, it will take: Portland cement, 19 barrels; gravel, 22 yards; stone fillers, 6 yards; labor, 4 men 5 days; concrete mixed 8 parts clean gravel to one part cement.

Cellar Wall.

I wish to build a stone cellar under a two-story log house 26 feet by 18 feet, with stone wall, to be 7 feet high. What material would be required and what would be the cost? What would be required for concrete wall?

For a stone cellar under house 18x26x7 feet high and 1½ feet thick, it would take: Stone, 9¼ cords; sand, 9½ yds.; lime, 50 bushels. For cost of laying see builder in your city. For concrete wall for same one foot thick, it would take: Portland cement, 15½ barrels; gravel, 19 yards; stone fillers, 4 yards; labor, 4 men four days' work to build the wall. Footings are not included in these figures. Concrete footings 6 in. thick, 42 feet wide, would take: Cement, 2½ barrels; gravel, 3 yds.; stone fillers, ½ yd.

Concrete Blocks.

1. How much cement will be required for wall of cellar 12 ft. x 12 ft., 7 feet high and one foot thick?

2. What is the best way to make concrete blocks 2 ft. x 8 ft. x 12 in.?

For a concrete cellar wall, 12 ft. x 12 ft. x 7 ft. x 1 ft. thick it will take: Portland cement, 8¼ barrels; gravel, 10 yards; stone fillers, 3 yards.

2. As this size of concrete block is larger than the average block, made by cement block machines, a good way for you to do is to make your own moulds, with a metal face on mould. A barrel of Portland cement will make about 25 blocks of above size, and would take ¾ of a yard of course sand.

Timbers for Stable.

I am thinking of building a stable 60 feet by 36 feet, with 16 or 18 foot posts. Would 7 in. by 7 in. be heavy enough for timbers or 6 in. by 6 in. provided sound poplar is used. I should like to have a hip roof to work a hay fork under. How can the frame be built to have the smallest possible amount of posts and beams in the loft but still strong enough for the fork?

Main posts should be 10 in. by 10 in.; purline posts 7 in. by 7 in. There should be two posts in each bent, the main ones being 12 in. by 12 in. Care must be taken to have the main beams rather heavy, though purlines may be lighter.

Cement Mixed Dry.

1. Is it best to wet the gravel before putting cement with it or should both be mixed together dry and water applied afterwards?

2. How much cement will be required for each square yard of wall one foot thick?

1. In mixing concrete, first mix gravel and cement together dry. Then add water and mix again. Cement does not mix thoroughly with wet gravel.

2. One barrel of cement mixed eight parts gravel to one part cement, with stone fillers added, will build 40 cubic feet of wall.

COULD NOT KEEP UP.

Broken Down, Like Many Another Woman, with Exhausting Kidney Troubles.

Mrs. A. Taylor, of Wharton, N. J., says: "I had kidney trouble in its most painful and severe form, and the torture I went through now seems to have been almost unbearable. I had backaches, pains in the side and loins, dizzy spells and hot, feverish headaches. There were bearing-down pains, and the kidney secretions passed too frequently and with a burning sensation. They showed sediment. I became discouraged, weak, languid and depressed, so sick and weak that I could not keep up. As doctors did not cure me I decided to try Doan's Kidney Pills, and with such success that my troubles were all gone after using eight boxes, and my strength, ambition and general health is fine."

As a Special Favor.

He was a young and smart-looking Scots clergyman, and was to preach a "trial" sermon in a strange church. Fearing that his hair might be disarranged or that he might have a smudge on his face, he quietly and significantly said to the beadle, there being no mirror in the vestry:

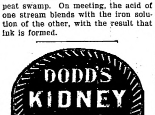
"John, could you get me a glass?"

John disappeared, and after a few minutes returned with something under his coat, which, to the astonishment of the divine, he produced in the form of a bottle with a gill of whisky in it, saying:

"Ye mauna let on aboot it, meenister, for I got it as a special favor, and I wadna hae got it ava if I hadna told them it was for you."

River of Ink.

In Algeria there is a curious freak of nature, a river of genuine ink, caused by the joining of two streams, one of which comes from an iron range, while the second stream flows from a peat swamp. On meeting, the acid of one stream blends with the iron solution of the other, with the result that ink is formed.



NO REST NIGHT OR DAY.

With Irritating Skin Humor—Hair Began to Fall Out—Wonderful Result from Cuticura Remedies.

"About the latter part of July my whole body began to itch. I did not take much notice of it at first, but it began to get worse all the time, and then I began to get uneasy and tried all kinds of baths and other remedies that were recommended for skin humors; but I became worse all the time. My hair began to fall out and my scalp itched all the time. Especially at night, just as soon as I would get in bed and get warm, my whole body would begin to itch and my finger nails would keep it irritated, and it was not long before I could not rest night or day. A friend asked me to try the Cuticura Remedies, and I did, and the first application helped me wonderfully. For about four weeks I would take a hot bath every night and then apply the Cuticura Ointment to my whole body; and I kept getting better, and by the time I used four boxes of Cuticura I was entirely cured, and my hair stopped fallling out. COMMISSIONERS' DOINGS

Proceedings of the Special Session of County Board Held March 6 and 7, 1906.

Red Lake Falls, Minnesota,
March 6, 1906.

Pursuant to a call dated February 20, 1906, the board of county commissioners of Red Lake county, Minnesota, met in special session at the court house at one o'clock p. m.

Commissioners Ekstrom, Demann, Johnson, Shaw and Falardeau were present.

The minutes of the meetings of January second and nineteenth were read and approved.

The petition of P. A. Ekstrom and others for a county ditch came up for hearing and the petition was read. After hearing the arguments of all persons interested for or against the construction of the proposed ditch, on motion made by Commissioner Ekstrom and seconded by Commissioner Demann, the following resolution appointing an engineer to survey the route of the said proposed ditch was adopted:

In the matter of the petition of P. A. Ekstrom and others for locating and constructing County Ditch No. 25 in the county of Red Lake and state of Minnesota.

County of Red Lake.

Whereas, a petitition bearing date the seventeenth day of January, 1906, signed by P. A. Ekstrom, Marius Miller, August Hoppe, A. J. Larson, J. A. Anderson, Alfred Dahlstrom, Chas. Herman Peterson, Wilhelmina Ortloff, John Petterson and Erick Johnson, praying for the establishment of a certain drainage ditch in said county designated and numbered by the County Auditor as County Ditch No. 25, the route of which is more fully described in said petition, and a proper bond accompanying the same, has been filed with the county auditor of said county as by law required;

And Whereas, it appears by satisfactory proof to the board of county commissioners of Red Lake county, that due notice of the pendency of said petition and the time and place at which the same would be heard, has been given as required by law;

Now, Therefore, We, the board of county commissioners of said county, at a special session held this day, do hereby appoint James K. Wood as a competent and experienced engineer to make an accurate survey of the line of said ditch from its source to its outlet as provided and specified in and by Chapter 230 of the General Laws of 1905 and after completing his duties as such engineer to make and file his report with the county auditor of said county on or before the thirtieth day of March, 1906.

Dated March 6, 1906.

By the Board,
(Seal) —DANIEL SHAW,
Chairman, Board County Commissioners of Red Lake County.
Attest: James E. Ford,
County Auditor.

On motion made by Commissioner Ekstrom, seconded by Commissioner Demann and carried unanimously, the following order appointing viewers on County Ditch No. 25, was made:

In the matter of the petition of P. A. Ekstrom and others for County Ditch No. 25, in the county of Red Lake, State of Minnesota.

County of Red Lake.

Whereas, A petition bearing date the seventeenth day of January, A. D. 1906, signed by P. A. Ekstrom, Marius Miller, August Hoppe, A. J. Larson, J. A. Anderson, Alfred Dahlstrom, Chas. Herman Peterson, Wilhelmina Ortloff, John Petterson and Erick Johnson, praying for the establishment of a ditch in said county, designated and numbered by the county auditor as County Ditch No 25, the route of which is fully described in said petition, together with a proper bond accompanying the same has been filed with the County Auditor of said county; and said county auditor has given due notice of the pendency of said petition, and the said notice has been published and served as by law required; and hearing had on said petition pursuant to said notice; and the said county commissioners of said county have heretofore duly appointed a competent engineer to-wit: James K. Wood, to make a survey of said ditch.

Now, Therefore, We, the board of county commissioners of said county, at a special session held this day, do hereby appoint Olaf Tande, Gilbert Haavi and Otto Zaiser, three resident freeholders of said county, who are not interested in the construction of said proposed work, and not a kin to any of the parties known to be interested therein, to be viewers of said proposed work and of the route thereof. The said viewers shall first take an oath to faithfully perform their duties as such viewers and thereafter, having received a certified copy of the petition for said ditch and of the order appointing them as such viewers and of the order of the county auditor of said county designating the time and place of the first meeting of said viewers, shall meet at the time and place specified in the order of the county auditor aforesaid and shall proceed to view said proposed work and the land damaged or benefitted thereby; and, having completed said view and examination of said work, shall make and file their report thereof with said county auditor of said county within thirty days from the date of their first meeting. In said report they shall in tabular form give the names of the owners of each tract of land so benefitted or damaged, (said names of owners to be the same as appear on the county tax duplicates of said county, and the description to be given in legal form), and the total number of acres in each of said tracts, the estimated number of acres in each tract of land to be benefitted or damaged (as the case may be), the number of acres added to any tract by the total or partial drainage of any meandered lake or the change of any watercourse and the location and value of such added land; the damage if any to riparian rights pertaining to any tract, and the amount that each tract of land will be benefitted or damaged by the construction of said work. In case said ditch drains, either in whole or part, any public corporate road or railroad, or benefits any such road so that the roadbed or traveled track of any such road will be made better by the construction of said ditch, said viewers shall estimate the benefits arising therefrom to said road, roadbeds or railroads, and report said benefits, together with the names of roads and other particulars necessary to identify the corporations, private or public, to be benefitted thereby, and amounts of benefits to each; they shall report as part of such tabular statement the damages awarded to each municipal or other corporation for injury to any road or roadbed, and from the necessary construction and maintenance of any bridge, culverts or other works rendered necessary by the establishment of such ditch, stating the same separately. They shall also report the total estimated benefits in respects to said ditch entire, and branches thereof if any, and also whether or not in their opinion, the estimated expense of the construction of said ditch including the damages assessed therefor, is greater than the utility of said proposed ditch; and whether or not said proposed ditch is impracticable for any reason, and, if so, stating the reason why it should not be constructed. In making said view and survey of said proposed work and their report thereon, the said viewers shall proceed according to Chapter 230 of the General Laws of 1905.

Dated this sixth day of March, A. D. 1906.

By the Board,
(Seal) —DANIEL SHAW,
Chairman, Board County Commissioners of Red Lake county, Minnesota.
Attest: James E. Ford,
County Auditor.

Interesting Items From the First Newspaper Issued in Red Lake Falls, June 29, 1882.

The first newspaper ever printed in Red Lake Falls appeared June 29, 1882, under the name of the Red Lake Falls Era. Dewey & Co., were the publishers, and it was a six-column folio, two pages printed at home.

The advertisers in the first issue were I. Lemieux, physician; C. L. Brainard, civil engineer; L. Laurens, physician; J. H. Sanders, notary public; Kretzscthmar & Detling, millers and real estate promoters; Ozias Leveck, blacksmith: John Berry, boots and shoes; Bottineau Bros. & Berthune, meat market; Hunt Bros., drugs, hardware and machinery; C. M. Champlin, contractor; Norde & Thorsen, general merchandise, furs and snake root; H. B. Kaufer & Son, harness; W. A. Schreiter, drugs; John St. John, hotel; Mrs. C. M. Champlin, millinery; Buse & Co., lumber, flour and feed; Ernest Buse, proprietor townsite; Zaiser & Mayer, saloon; John Tretheway, saloon; Napoleon Bisallion, saloon; Zeh & Zaiser, saloon, H. J. Kaufer, hotel. Of those mentioned only Dr. I. Lemieux. Frank E. Hunt, H. B. Kaufer, W. A. Schreiter, Ernest Buse and H. J. Kaufer are still residents of the city.

Among the items of interest to our people today we find the following:

Our cornet band have received their new instruments and meets Wednesday evenings for practice.

Wild strawberries are in their very best condition. Red raspberries and plums promise to be an abundant crop.

Hundreds of teams leave this place daily for the railroad. The local traffic from this point of itself would prove a bonanza to any railroad.

Mr. Carl Kretzschmar has received his appointment as postmaster at this place. Mr. K. will soon take possession of the office in place of Mr. Hunt, resigned.

The Winnipeg & Duluth railroad company do not seem to have much life, but reliable parties say the company is stronger than ever and will soon resume work. It is their intention to reach this point within one year.

A commendable work was done on the highway approaching the village from the south west. The hill has been cut down so that the grade is very light. It is an important improvement in one of the roads leading into town.

From Mr. L. M. Dow we obtain the information that he and Father Champagne have had a body of land platted south west of the old townsite; proprietors being known as Champagne & Dow. He further gives notice that lots are now on sale.

Lime in unlimited quantities is found convenient to town. No one enterprise would prove more lucrative than the burning of lime. It is of a superior quality, and it is surprising that some one familiar with the process has not put in kilns.

GRAND JURY'S WORK.

Returns Twenty Indictments Against Various Ofenders.

Twenty indictments were returned by the grand jury which concluded its labors at noon today and was discharged by Judge Watts after thanking the membens for the prompt and efficient manner in which the business had been conducted.

Only three of the indictments are made public at this time as they are the only ones in which the parties are in custody.

One of the indictments covers the Soo line car robbery at Thief River Falls last fall and among those indicted for emplication are Gross E. Edson, Eka Hathaway, George F. Edwards, Charles Erickson, Charles Rockstad and James Kibbie. Indictments were found against two citers for participation in the same offense but their names are with held until they are apprehended. The charge is that of grand larceny in the first degree.

Benjamin Holden was indicted for stealing an overcoat at Thief River Falls and he draws a grand larceny charge in the second degree.

Benjamin Holden, Eka Hathaway and James Kibbee are also indicted for breaking jail.

The jury made no report as to the condition of public offices or public business.

TAX MONEY DISTRIBUTED

March Settlement Completed This Week By County Auditor Ford.

County Auditor Ford completed the March settlement the first of the wee, distributing the tax money among the various funds. At this melon cutting there is $41,819.73 to divide. $2,880.17 goes to the state, and the county funds are replenished as follows:

Revenue	$ 4,965.73
Road and bridge	976.21
Poor	140.01
Board and interest	1,287.36

PROBE CAMPAIGN CONTRIBUTIONS

JUDGE SAYS IF INTENT TO DEFRAUD IS SHOWN LARCENY WAS COMMITTED.

GRAND JURY IS INSTRUCTED

JEROME ASKS FOR WARRANT FOR PERKINS BUT IT IS REFUSED.

New York, March 25.—If the grand jury which is investigating some of the conditions developed by the recent legislative investigation reaches the conclusion that contributions by insurance companies to political campaign committees were made with intent to deprive or defraud the true owner of his property, it must find that larceny was committed. This opinion was expressed yesterday by Justice O'Sullivan in the court of general sessions in answer to a presentment submitted to him by the grand jurors. Judge O'Sullivan added that it is not within the province of the court to say whether there

Was Criminal Intent.

That is a question which the jurors must determine for themselves. He charged the jury to make a thorough investigation and to place the responsibility for such crimes, if they find that crimes were committed.

"You are not to go seeking for shelter as an excuse to avoid an unpleasant duty," he said.

The opinion is, in effect, directly opposite to one upon the same subject, given by District Attorney Jerome several days ago. Mr. Jerome held that there was no ground for the prosecution of insurance officials in connection with the because no intention to defraud had been shown. Judge O'Sullivan agrees that intent must have been present, but declares that the question whether there was such intent is yet to be determined.

Mr. Jerome was in court yesterday, and when Judge O'Sullivan had delivered his opinion the district attorney asked the grand jury to remain. He then declared that Judge O'Sullivan had misconceived the subject and that if the court held to its opinion it would be the duty of the grand jury to return indictments against George W. Perkins, former vice president of the New York Life Insurance company, for larceny, and chairman, and Cornelius N. Bliss, treasurer of the Republican national committee, as receivers of stolen goods. Mr. Jerome informed Judge O'Sullivan that if he would sit as a magistrate he would submit affidavits to the acts committed by George W. Perkins and would ask for a warrant for his arrest. He added that in event of such a warrant being issued a writ of habeas corpus would follow and that the case would be taken to the highest courts, where the district attorney would retain Alton B. Parker as special counsel. Judge O'Sullivan declined to grant the warrant, saying that the question should be passed upon by the grand jury.

Against George B. Cortelyou,

McCurdys Are Sued.

The first complaint in a series of eight actions already begun by the Mutual Life Insurance company against Former President Richard A. McCurdy, his son, Robert H., and the firm of Charles H. Raymond & Co., the company's former metropolitan agents, was made public yesterday. The complaint is against Former President McCurdy and contains nine separate causes of action. In each Mr. McCurdy is charged with the waste of large sums of money through alleged unfaithfulness and neglect in the discharge of his duties. Damages amounting to over $3,250,000 are demanded.

The first five cases seek recovery of $292,500 as alleged contributions to political parties since Jan. 1, 1885.

BILL FAVORS MINNESOTA.

New Law Needed to Adjudicate State's Claim.

Washington, March 25.—A decision has been given at the treasury department to the effect that there is no authority under present laws warranting the settlement of the claim of the State of Minnesota for $70,000 representing the amount paid in interest on bonds issued by the state to equip troops that participated in the Indian wars of the 60s. An amendment to the sundry civil bill authorizing the federal government to make such a payment to the state was offered some weeks ago by Seenator Nelson. Senator Nelson and other members of the delegation will make an effort to secure the passage of the measure adjudicating the claim of the state.

Ericsen says its membeers are a most democratic combination, each receiving some wages, namely, $20 monthly, and all eating at the same table.

INSANE MAN'S AWFUL WORK

BREAKS IN ON FUNERAL, INJURES NINE PERSONS AND FIRES THE HOUSE.

Baltimore, Md., March 25. — Brooklyn, a town just across the Patasco river from this city, is horrified over the deeds and death of Walter Potee, an insane man, who, entering his brother's house during the funeral of the latter's infant child, opened fire with a revolver, set fire to the house and later died from gunshot wounds, but whether self-inflicted or not, is unknown.

Nine people were injured more or less seriously by Potee's shots from revolvers and a repeating shotgun. Of these, a brother, John H. Potee, and William H. Miller, a brother-in-law, are likely to die. The insane man sprinkled oil about the house and set fire to it. While it was burning Chief of Police Irwin, Henry Roberts and August E. Remmers broke in the front door and managed to save the body of the child.

Firemen extinguished the flames, but not before the building had been almost gutted. On the second floor was found the corpse of the maniac badly burned above the waist and with a gaping shot wound over the heart. Bystanders had fired at him repeatedly, but whether one of their shots reached him or he died by his own hand can only be conjectured.

CONGRESS.

Fortifications Appropriation Bill Is Passed by Senate.

Washington, March 24.—Mr. Spooner yesterday concluded his speech in the senate on the railroad rate bill and the fortifications appropriation bill was taken up and passed. The bill carries an appropriation of $125,000 for the erection of a powder manufactory. As passed the bill carries an appropriation of $5,278,993.

The house again endeavored to legislate with the brakes on yesterday. The result was some friction and heat and the speed in considering the legislative bill was correspondingly slow. About one-third of the bill has been considered.

PIONEER OF NEW ULM.

War Veteran and Founder of City Is Dead.

New Ulm, Minn., March 25.—Louis Schilling, city clerk of New Ulm for nearly twenty years, died yesterday morning after a lingering illness, aged seventy-one years. He came here in 1855, and was one of the pioneers who selected the present site of New Ulm. He was a Civil war veteran, and enlisted as a member of the First Minnesota battery in 1861. In 1893 he was injured while alighting from a train at Sleepy Eye, and since then was compelled to use crutches. He was known to most of the early pioneers of the Minnesota valley.

TRIAL LEADS TO SHOOTING.

Brother of Convicted Man Said to Have Killed Complainant.

Billings, Mont., March 25.—As the result of a shooting scrape early yesterday morning at Nye postoffice, about sixty miles from this city, Samuel Webb is reported to be dead, after being shot twice, and John Hudson is in jail charged with the crime. Bad feeling existed between the men as a result of the trial of Ben Hudson, a brother of John, who was convicted of stealing cattle belonging to Webb and who was taken to the penitentiary Wednesday. Both men are well-known stockmen.

UNCURBED CRIME RULES IN RUSSIA

BLOODSHED AND ROBBERY KEEPS PACE WITH REPRESSIVE MEASURES.

ONE DYA'S FEARFUL RECORD

REVOLUTIONISTS FIGHT OPPESSORS WITH BOMBS AND REVOLVERS.

St. Petersburg, March 25.—Lawlessness and crime are keeping pace in Russia with the repressive measures of the government. Columns of newspapers are filled daily with records of murders and robberies, and side-by-side are brief chronicles of condemnations and military executions of political offenders. The majority of the robberies and assassinations are of a political nature and everywhere the revolutionists are fighting their oppressors with bombs and revolvers. The record of a single day shows the distracted state of the country.

At Tamhoff, Riga, Warsaw, Batoum, Mattua and Chita yesterday military executions took place, while from a half-dozen other cities came reports of death sentences passed by military courts on political prisoners.

Churches Pillaged.

From Stavrohol and Kuban provinces in the Caucasus, come reports of the pillaging of churches and the theft of sacred jewel-encrusted relics. Near Samara, province of Samara, robbers disguised as rural guards held up a rail coach and carried off $19,000 in booty, and at Orenburg, province of Orenburg, an armed band plundered the state distillery and several pharmacies. An attempt was made at Klotzlavsk, Poland, to assassinate the chief of police, and at Starjittsy, another place in Poland, a large factory was set afire and burned to the ground.

Armed men at Ekaterinoslav, South Russia, entered the counting room of a merchant named Marschak, ordered the clerks to throw up their hands, and got off with $1,000.

Bomb Thrown Among Nobles.

At Smolensk, province of Smolensk, an infernal machine was thrown through a window into an assembly of nobles, and in Sebastopol eight men (masked) entered a store, bound and gagged the proprietor and employes and escaped with the contents of the till.

The spirit of lawlessness has also penetrated the North, which part of the country is still snowbound. The peasants of the northern Vologda province on the road to Archangel are driving off the proprietors. They fought a battle near Yerensk with a detachment of 130 Cossacks, were defeated and left a number of dead on the field. On the other hand, near Bloseisk, in Novgorod province, the peasants were victorious in a fight with forest guards, causing the latter to retreat.

At Lodz, Poland, 8,000 men are locked out, and in all the principal cities hundreds, if not thousands of men, are without work and are walking the streets begging for food.

POSTPONED TILL MONDAY.

Algeciras Conference Will Have a Few Days' Rest.

Algeciras, March 25.—Nicolson and Revoil yesterday requested Almadovar to call an afternoon meeting of the conference, but the project was found impossible for several reasons, such as the indisposition of Radowitz. In fact Friday is the Moorish Sunday. There will, therefore, be no sitting until Monday, owing to the visit of Almadovar to Cadiz. This request of the British and French representatives, however, disposes of the statement that France is responsible for the present delay.

INDORSE GEN. WOOD.

Manila Newspapers Defend His Course in Recent Battle.

Manila, March 25.—The American, Spanish and native press of this city, in commenting upon the recent battle of Mount Dajo, sustain Maj. Gen. Wood against the charge of killing women and children of the outlaws during the action, which they claim was unavoidable. They are unanimous in their expressions of regret at the manner in which the unfortunate occurrence has been represented by a portion of the press in America.

Mayor F. E. Moore of Omaha Dies.

Omaha, March 25.—Frank E. Moore, mayor of Omaha, died at his home yesterday afternoon. He was sixty-six years old and was serving the last year of his third term as mayor.

Makes Rules on Insurance.

Washington, March 25.—By unanimous vote the house committee on judiciary agreed yesterday that insurance cannot be regarded as interstate commerce and decided to make a report to the house to that effect.

Sample Medicine Kills.

Kokomo, Ind., March 25.—Mrs. John Jefferson swallowed a supposed headache powder that had been thrown on her porch as an advertising sample. It proved to be poison and the woman died in a few minutes.

The village authorities at Elysian have put Saturday night dances under the ban. Frequent complaints were made of the disturbances created Sunday mornings, following these dances, and when the matter was brought to the attention of the council it took decisive action. Notice was served on the proprietors of the dance halls that they would be compelled to close at 12 o'clock every Saturday night.

Attorney Bishop H. Scriber has been at Pipestone looking for information concerning the heirs of the estate of the late Mrs. Mary Cochran, who died a year ago in St. Paul. The estate is valued at several thousand dollars. Mrs. Cochran is known to have resided in Pipestone in 1885, with her husband and a son, and three years later she became a resident of St. Paul. A rumor reached Mr. Schriber that Mrs. Cochran was divorced from her husband while residing at Pipestone, but records in the office of the clerk of the court failed to reveal anything of the kind. Up to this time no relatives have been found.

Ernest Jam, nineteen years of age, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Jam of Two Harbors, was drowned in Lake Superior off that port as a result of going out too far on the thin ice. He and several comrades were skating on what appeared to be safe enough ice, but Jam was disposed to venture farther than the others. He broke through and before assistance could reach him he had disappeared in the lake. The lad fought to obtain a hold on the broken edges of the ice for about a minute and then dropped out of sight. It is supposed that he was quickly overcome by the intensely cold water.

The contractors who are to construct the big gulch in Hayward will begin work as soon as the frost is out of the ground. The ditch and laterals will be nine miles long and the price is $25,000. The drain will effect several thousand acres of land in Freeborn county.

The friends of Albert Lea college are jubilant, as they have the $50,000 endowment well within their grasp. Andrew Carnegie has signified his intention of giving the last half of the amount, and the first part has been almost secured.

RUSSIAN REDS PLOT UPRISING

SECRET CONCLAVE OF REVOLUTIONISTS TO BE HELD IN FINLAND.

MAY BE AN OPEN REBELLION

OFFICIALS REALIZE SOMETHING BIG IS ON, AND GET READY.

St. Petersburg, March 24.—The agitation among the workmen's organizations involves a bold plan on the part of the social democrats, revolutionists and other radical elements to send delegates elected secretly to a meeting to be called at some place in Finland early in April, at which an ultimate plan of operations will be decided upon.

A division of sentiment exists among the leaders. Some of them favor calling a general strike in the middle of April to force the lower house of parliament to demand the immediate convocation of a constituent assembly on the basis of universal suffrage, but the more audacious aim at setting up a provisional government. They believe the time is ripe to organize a general uprising, and that if that were successful their representatives could boldly contest the authority of the government.

Authorities Watchful.

The authorities here, who know that something big is preparing, already have learned of the possibility of a general strike and Interior Minister Durnovo has sent circulars to the governor generals and governors apprising them of the state of affairs and instructing them to "take the necessary measures" to meet the government.

Premier Witte's project to permit the peasants' banks to issue 5 per cent bonds to finance the purchase of land from the proprietors and its sale to the peasants has been adopted by the council of the empire.

Warships Disarmed.

The discontent among the sailors and soldiers at Sevastopol has been so acute lately that the authorities have disarmed all the warships there except the Panteleimon, formerly the Prince Potemkin, whose crew threatened, a fortnight ago, to destroy the town if Lieut. Schmidt, the leader of the Black sea revolt, was executed. They refused to allow the authorities to remove the ship's guns. The officials, however, confined the crew aboard the ship.

The Bielstok infantry regiment is locked in its barracks. A general outbreak at Sevastopol is possible at any moment.

ROBBERS GET BIG HAUL.

Porch Climbers Get Away With $10,-875 Worth of Jewelry.

Detroit, March 2[illegible]—Porch climbers got away last night with jewelry valued at $10,875 from the home of Mrs. E. L. Ford, [illegible] Woodward avenue. The jewels were taken from a dresser in a front room on the second floor and the robbers entered the room by climbing the front porch while the household were at dinner.

LIST OF VICTIMS DOUBLED.

Nearly Fifty Lives Believed to Have Been Lost in Wreck.

Denver, March 24.—It is now generally admitted that between forty and fifty persons met death in the collision of the two Denver & Rio Grande passenger trains near Adobe, Colo., on Friday last. A list of more than forty missing persons who are supposed to have been passengers on the wrecked train has been prepared.

EIGHTEENTH SEAMAN DIES.

Spinal Meningitis Outbreak Is Not Yet Conquered.

Newport, R. I., March 24.—Seaman R. D. Holly of Plymouth, Ind., died at the naval training station here yesterday of spinal meningitis, making the eighteenth death since the outbreak of the disease. No funds were available to send the body home, and the necessary amount was made up by the other classmen.

KILLED IN COLLISION.

Illinois Central Passenger Train Runs Into Freight.

Webster City, Iowa, March 24.—The fast passenger train, No. 1, on the Illinois Central, due in this city at 3:05 a. m., crashed head-on into a freight train a mile west of Duncombe yesterday morning. Fireman Cutting of Waterloo was instantly killed and a dozen persons were badly injured.

"OLD GLORY" NOT FOR HIM.

Richmond's Mayor Honors Only Confederacy and His State.

Richmond, Va., March 24. — In an address before the Southern Ice exchange here in its seventeenth annual convention yesterday, Mayor McCarthy, referring to Richmond's having been the Confederate capital, said:

"I recognize but two flags—the state flag of Virginia and the battle flag of the Confederacy. The Stars and Stripes are all right in their way, but for me there are only two flags."

ADMITS KILLING COMRADE

SCHULL CLAIMS HE KILLED WAGNER IN SELF-DEFENSE DURING QUARREL.

Fergus Falls, Minn., March 23. — The confession of Albert F. Schull and his claim that he killed his partner, Fred Wagner, in self-defense, has aroused renewed interest in the case here.

He claims that he and Wagner were cutting wood in partnership, and that he wanted to quit and go home, while Wagner insisted that he should stay and finish the job. They quarreled over the question of his proposed departure early last Wednesday morning, before either of them were dressed. Schull claims that Wagner raised a hammer to strike him, whereupon he drew a revolver and shot him.

He gives the horrible details of dragging the body to the swamp, burying it in the snow, in a cool, matter-of-fact way. He quietly appropriated the dead man's money, packed his effects into two valises and a trunk and hired a farmer to take him to Pelican Rapids.

Schull's story may be correct, but there is a general feeling that if there were any witnesses of the crime it would be contradicted in a number of important particulars. The coroner's inquest was held Tuesday night and Schull made his confession just before noon yesterday.

SAFE BLOWN BY ROBBERS.

They Loot North Dakota Bank Vault and Escape on a Hand Car.

Larimore, N. D., March 23. — Between 1 and 3 o'clock yesterday morning the Bank of Niagara, at Niagara, N. D., twelve miles west of here, was broken into and robbed of $1,280. Who or how many of the robbers there were is not known, as nothing unusual was noticed out of the way until yesterday morning when Cashier David Kirk went to open the bank for the usual transaction of business, when he found everything inside in a chaotic condition. The safe in which the money was kept was almost completely destroyed.

LONGFELLOW IS COMMANDER.

Department Officers of G. A. R. Are Elected Without Contest.

Minneapolis, March 24.—Levi Longfellow of Minneapolis was elected yesterday to the office of department commander of the G. A. R. by a unanimous vote of the state convention There was no contest for any of the other officers and the result was as follows:

Senior Vice Commander—J. A. Everett, Fairmont.

Junior Vice Commander—Duro Corbin, Little Falls.

Medical Director—Dr. J. F. Locke, Long Prairie, re-elected.

Chaplain—W. F. Stockdill, Mamline.

STABS AND BEATS SISTER.

Italian Peddler Assaults and Robs Her When Refused Money.

Woodland, Wis., March 23. — Because his sister refused to give him money, an Italian peddler residing at Iron Ridge, it is said, beat and stabbed the woman into insensibility and then took her money, amounting to about $1,000. The woman, Guilliette Marcenilli, is in a critical condition, and her recovery is doubtful. The brother, Guiseppi, made his escape and as yet no trace of him has been found.

FRIGHTFUL EXPERIENCE.

Thirty-Five Freight Cars Pass Over Brakeman's Body.

Fergus Falls, Minn., March 23. — A message was received here from Henning yesterday to the effect that Ernest Lindgren, a brakeman living here, fell under a Soo train and thirty-five cars passed over his body. He fell close to the rail and lay perfectly still and escaped death. His arm was cut off but he got up and walked a short distance in a dazed condition after the accident. He may recover.

MINER IS BLOWN TO SHREDS.

Fifteen Sticks of Dynamite Explode While Being Thawed.

Hibbing, Minn., March 23.—As the result of a dynamite explosion in the Laura mine, three miles north of here, Andrew Selin was instantly killed, his body being horribly mangled. Both feet and the right hand were blown off; both eyes were destroyed and nearly every bone in his body was broken. It is thought that fifteen sticks of dynamite exploded.

Leaps From Flying Train.

Waterloo, Iowa, March 23.—Thinking the locomotive on which he was stealing a ride was about to jump the track, Peter Smith of Vinton, Iowa, leaped from the fast moving engine and received serious injuries.

Crowe Sued for Divorce.

Omaha, March 23.—Pat Crowe was yesterday made defendant in a divorce suit filed by his wife, Mrs. Harriet Murphy Crowe, who asks alimony and the right to resume her maiden name.

All Land Is Sold.

Cavalier, N. D., March 23.—At the recent Cavalier county land sale, held at this place, not one of the 158 descriptions of land remained unsold. The prices received ranged from $10 per acre, which is the appraised valuation, to $21. There were but six tracts sold for $10 per acre.

SUICIDE IS SHOCK.

Self-Destruction of William Mariner Is Great Sensation.

Milwaukee, March 24.—The finding of the body of William Mariner, son of Ephriam Mariner, one of the best known and wealthiest men in this city, shocked Milwaukee's business and social world late yesterday afternoon. Mr. Mariner had apparently gone to his room Wednesday night, after bowling with friends at the Town club, and put a bullet through his head. Mr. Mariner was about forty-five years old and managed the real estate branch of his father's widely extended business. His brother, John Mariner, issued a statement for the family last night, saying that they could give no explanation of his act.

TO COLONIZE NEGROES.

Corporation Will File Articles in South Dakota.

Pierre, S. D., March 24. — J. Simon Scott, a representative of the colored race at Stamford, Conn., is in communication with the state department in relation to the incorporation of an Ethiopian Colonization company. After learning what is necessary for procedure, it is his intention to file his articles in this state at an early date. The work of the company will be for the colonization of members of the colored race in different parts of this and other countries, as well as development of their colonies after their location.

25 NEW GRAFT CASES.

District Attorney Wants Assistant to Help Him in Reform Fight.

Green Bay, Wis., March 24. — District Attorney Samuel H. Cady exploded one of the greatest sensations of recent years in this city yesterday when he appeared before the county board and applied for the appointment of a special assistant to work with him in prosecuting a total of twenty-six alleged felonies which he says he has uncovered, being municipal grafting cases not touched by the grand jury investigation of several years ago.

IS ACCUSED OF ARSON.

Alleged Starter of Fire at Funkley Arrested at Bemidji.

Bemidji, Minn., March 24.—Franklin Curtis has been lodged in jail here on a charge of arson in connection with the fire at Funkley, which practically destroyed the Newton hall. The fire is alleged to have been of incendiary origin, and since it occurred a constant search has been kept up for the perpetrators. It is understood that Curtis will make a statement involving other men in the affair.

BAD BLAZE AT BIRCHWOOD.

Large Saw Mill and Veneer Plant Heaviest Loser—Loss, $50,000.

Rice Lake, Wis., March 24. — The village of Birchwood, sixteen miles north of this city, suffered a disastrous fire, and the loss is estimated at $50,000, one-half of which is covered by insurance. The Ahnapee Veneer and Seating company is the heaviest loser. The big sawmill and veneer plant are a total loss. It is not known how the blaze originated.

"IT AIN'T HARD TO DIE."

Wisconsin Suicide Leaves Strangely Worded Note.

Racine, Wis., March 23.—"It ain't hard to die. I stand here on earth. The noose is ready and I is ready. I jump now."

The above is the contents of a note found beside the body of Nels P. Nelson, forty-four years old, who committed suicide by hanging. There is no known reason for the act.

MYSTERIOUSLY MISSING.

After Initiation Into Secret Order Iowa Man Disappears.

Marshalltown, Iowa, March 24.—Following his initiation into a secret order at Waverly, R. J. Offutt, a butcher of that place, disappeared. The lodge session lasted until midnight, and no one has seen him since. His place of business remains closed and his wife is distracted over his disappearance. The case is a mystery.

CHICKEN THEFT A FELONY.

Confessed Robber of Henroost Faces Two-Year Sentence.

Des Moines, March 24.—Frank Kimball, arrested for the theft of a chicken, pleaded guilty on the charge against him yesterday. Under the new law making chicken stealing a felony, Kimball is liable to a two-year term in the state penitentiary. He is the first person to be indicted under the new law.

Pioneer Railroad Man Dead.

Baraboo, Wis., March 24.—Levi G. Kendall, who threw the first earth in the construction of the Madison division of the Chicago & North-Western road, and who was the first pensioner of the system, died yesterday, aged 79 years, of paralysis.

Ill Health Causes Suicide.

Muscatine, Iowa, March 24.—Jacob Braugh, a retired merchant of Durant, and very wealthy, committed suicide last night by hanging. Ill health is given as a cause for the deed.

Fete Turns to Mourning.

Keokuk, Iowa, March 24.—Sylvester Carter, a pioneer lumber dealer, died yesterday when about to celebrate the fifty-second anniversary of his wedding. All his relatives were here for the wedding celebration.

REFORMS IN SUFFRAGE.

Important Proposition Is Submitted to the Riksdag.

Radical reforms in the suffrage laws of Sweden are recommended in the royal proposition presented to the riksdag on Feb. 24. In the first place the elections to the second chamber shall be by ballot, and second suffrage is extended to all males who have passed their twenty-fourth year. A further important feature is that all those who have the right of suffrage are eligible to the second chamber.

The membership in the chamber is fixed at 230 seats, of which 165 are allotted to the country districts and 65 to the cities. A reapportionment may be made every nine years by royal decree.

While the electoral right is general, it cannot be exercised by any person under guardianship, who has not fulfilled his military duties, who has not paid his taxes for three years, who receives support from charity, or who is a bankrupt.

In the event that no candidate to the second chamber has attained more than one-half of all the votes cast, another election is to be held in three weeks at which a plurality will suffice. In cities having two or more election districts candidates may seek election in any of the districts, but elsewhere they must reside in the districts they desire to represent.

All parties have expressed sympathy with the strong movement in charge of the woman's suffrage association and have intimated that their demands will be recognized some day. On account of the determined opposition of the conservative classes to any extension of the franchise no one is willing to introduce the women's question at this time, as the fight in the riksdag will be a stiff one at the best and a partial reform is better than none.

TO MAKE NITROGEN.

Engineer Eyde Lectures Before Danish Savants.

Engineer Eyde, who is associated with Prof. Birkeland in the recently discovered process for obtaining nitrogen from the atmosphere, lectured on the subject before a scientific gathering at the polytechnic institute in Copenhagen on Feb. 22. The lecture was illustrated by lantern slides and the process was minutely described. Several members of the ministry, the riksdag and the diplomatic corps were present, and all listened with great attention, as the new process is one of the greatest value to agriculture and the industrial arts.

While the inventors of the process had in view to reduce the cost of fertilizers, military and mining men find that it will greatly reduce the cost of high explosives. Germany, Italy and other European countries are clamoring for further information and for patent rights, and men of science generally predict wonderful results.

SWEDISH EXPOSITION.

One Planned to Be Held in London in 1907.

Sweden's consul general at London has reported to his government that a number of influential Swedes residing in London have united in recommending the opening of a Swedish industrial exposition in London for the purpose of re-establishing the country's prestige in England. They suggest that such an exposition should be held at Earl's Court from May to October, 1907, and that a guaranty fund of at least 1,000,000 kroner should be provided in order to insure the success of the enterprise. It should be the most comprehensive exposition ever held by Sweden in a foreign country.

The plan has been received with much sympathy by Swedish manufacturers and probably will be adopted.

BEET INDUSTRY GROWS.

Great Development of New Agricultural Pursuit in Sweden.

The great development of the beet growing industry in Sweden is attracting attention among sugar producers all over the world. It is calculated that great advantage is gained the inhabitants of Sweden through the development of this industry by affording the unemployed, though perhaps only periodically, the opportunity of earning good wages in the weeding and the gathering of the beet crop, beside other work connected with the cultivation and industry. It also affords an opportunity for the poorer classes to develop an industry, the only agricultural employment in many parts of Sweden which will enable them to make any money.

"You women folks must be wearin' a son," ventured Uncle Abner, as he carefully removed his coat.

"Why, Abner?" asked Aunt Sophronia.

"Wal, they wus a feller sot in front of me on the train that was dressed like a dandy—fur-lined coat, a diamond big as a shell-bark hickory nut, and a plug hat—and I heard him tell the feller sittin' with him that he'd made over $10,000 this year skinnin' jays."

TOO MUCH GAME.

Deer Abound in Norway and Do Much Damage.

On account of the protection given to the deer in Norway by the government the animals have increased in such numbers as to be a great nuisance in some parts of the country. In winter, when the snow is deep and forage hard to get, they do great damage to the forests and there is a general demand for a partial suspension of the protective acts. At Lothestranden along Nordfjord, hundreds of deer may be seen along the hillsides. They are so tame that they have no fear of human beings, and often appear at the farmhouses.

Iron Smelter in Trondhjem.

Trondhjem will have a large iron ore smelter. The municipal council, at a meeting behind closed doors on Feb. 21, debated the question for three hours. It was afterwards announced that the proposition had been carried by a vote of 50 to 17. That such a plant will be of incalculable value to the country is generally conceded. Norway, like Minnesota, sends large quantities of ore to England and Germany, while the country gets very little benefit from its vast ore fields, which have only begun to be developed.

Secret Army Maneuvers.

The Norwegian army held a series of military maneuvers near Drobak on Feb. 27-28. All officers and men were prohibited from giving out any information and newspaper correspondents were kept at a distance. King Haakon, War Minister Alsson, Generals Hansen, Holtermann and Klingenberg witnessed the operations, some of which were conducted at night. Afterward King Haakon and staff visited the naval station at Horten.

Scholander in Norway.

Sven Scholander, the popular Swedish ballad singer, recently made a tour of Norway and attracted large audiences everywhere. Every number was enthusiastically received and encores were repeatedly demanded whether he sang in Swedish or Norwegian. The papers of the country call on their Swedish contemporaries to note the reception given to Swedes in Norway.

An Old Newspaper.

Gothenburg's Handels-och Sjofartstidning, the great Swedish liberal paper and one of the most influential journals in the country, celebrated its seventy-five-year jubilee on Feb. 25. It has always been ably edited and its editorial utterances probably carry as much weight as those of any other Swedish newspaper.

American Cash for Norway.

America never before sent so much money to Norway as in 1905. The post-office department reports that the money order from the United States last year aggregated 6,867,045 kroner, as compared with 5,669,545 kroner for the year previous, an increase of 1,197,500 kroner, representing about $335,000.

Count of Turin, brother of the duke of the Abrizzi, who achieved fame as an Arctic explorer., is visiting Norway and is talking of an expedition on his own account. He is the son of Duke Amadeus, who was king of Spainu for a short time.

Of No Importance.

Two men were standing together on an East river ferry boat when one pointed out a third man with the remark:

"I can't recall his name at this moment, but he writes for a number of the magazines."

His friend looked at the stranger with much interest.

"Oh, one of our frenzied finance captains, is he?" he asked.

"No, he—"

"Writes up trusts and things, then?"

"No."

"Oh, then he's a prize fighter or an actor—he is rather husky looking."

"No, no! He's just a plain author—writes stories."

"Oh," the friend exclaimed, the look of interest suddenly dying out of his face.

The Horrid Man.

Miss Elderleigh—Just think, Mr. Braix, I am within ten years of thirty-five!.

Mr. Braix—I can't believe it.

Miss Elderleigh—That's sweet of you—but it's true.

Mr. Braix—Well, if anybody else had told me you were forty-five I'd have said they were five years out, anyhow.—Judge.

And She Wasn't Hurt.

"Can I recover?" gasped the injured man.

"No, I fear not," replied the physician, shaking his head.

"But your wife can," assured the damage suit lawyer from the other side of the bed.

INTRODUCING MR. W. S. COX.

THE COURIER plant has been leased to Mr. W. S. Cox, who will take possession April 1. Mr. Cox was formerly publisher of the Brainerd Arena, and has been engaged in newspaper work in Minnesota for the past twelve years. We deem it exceedingly fortunate for the COURIER and Red Lake Falls to consummate this arrangement with a gentleman of such unusual journalistic and educational attainments as Mr. Cox, and bespeak for him the good-will and patronage of the friends of the paper.

For Thin Babies

Fat is of great account to a baby; that is why babies are fat. If your baby is scrawny, Scott's Emulsion is what he wants. The healthy baby stores as fat what it does not need immediately for bone and muscle. Fat babies are happy; they do not cry; they are rich; their fat is laid up for time of need. They are happy because they are comfortable. The fat surrounds their little nerves and cushions them. When they are scrawny those nerves are hurt at every ungentle touch. They delight in Scott's Emulsion. It is as sweet as wholesome to them.

CONSIDERING the heretofore colossal ignorance of the Standard officials, the Missouri investigation lately has managed to bring out a lot of definite information, all of which goes to show that what everybody but the Standard people knew before is so, towit: that the Standard has been the whole thing in Missouri, though operating under different names.

TREASURER BLOCK is credited with an ambition to be governor of Minnesota and yet refuses to commit himself in personal interviews. However, the visitor at Block's office, though he will be told there is nothing in it, is never allowed to escape without being loaded up with copies of that extra edition of the St. Peter Tribune which is devoted exclusively to a eulogy of Mr. Block and clippings from the state press favorable to his candidacy.

CHAS. S. MITCHELL, for some years editor of the Fairmont Independent, has moved to Duluth, where he takes Miss Mary McFadden's place on the News-Tribune. Miss Mary has accepted a journalistic post on one of the leading New York papers. She will "make good," too, for she is probably the most resourceful and entertaining writer Minnesota has ever produced. Mary will take to her new field the best wishes of the country press of her native state.

SOME men and some newspapers go along through life and scarcely ever offend anybody, for the reason that they never express an opinion of their own on any subject, but in reality such men and newspapers are of little use to the state and nation, says the Brown's Valley Tribune. If some men and some newspapers had never advanced any new ideas or expressed any opinion contrary to those of others the old world would not have advanced to its present state of civilization. It should not be a newspaper's purpose to willingly offend anybody, but it should not hesitate to advocate that which it considers is right and fair of general benefit, regardless of who or what class of individuals it may offend.

THE Minneapolis Tribune sounds the following note of warning to the leaders of its party: "The Republican party machine will have to handle the independent vote very tenderly this year. The party machine comes down from the last campaign wrapped in an atmosphere of distrust. Republican voters come out of the last election full of a spirit of independence. The men who elected Johnson are not suffering from remorse. They are cocky and touchy. They want at least as good a Republican as Johnson to vote for this year. They want him nominated by all the people in clean, fair caucuses and free, deliberate and representative conventions of uninstructed delegates. If they do not get this there is no telling what they may do. They tasted power two years ago; they may relish a full meal this year. They may not stop with the governor."

THE Northwestern Agriculturist, says the Mapleton Enterprise, in an article booming mail order houses, which by the way are the principal supporters of some of these same papers, says: "the mail order houses cannot afford to be bothered with the personal shopping of the city customer." In another place the same paper says: "mail order firms as a rule do not allow their catalogues to reach city people." Certainly the mail order house does not want personal shopping. Why not? Because their goods will not stand the personal inspection of customers and would not be accepted by their country customers in hundreds of cases except for the fact that they are out the freight or express if they return them. The Agriculturist in order to facilitate the business of the mail order houses wants the farmer to deposit his money in the city bank where the banker is so much more competent to look after their wants. What is the next graft?

HOMAGE THAT WAS DUE.

Owatonna Journal-Chronicle: A simple, unassuming, little old Swedish woman died and was laid away to rest in a Minnesota town the other day. Her hands showed the marks of manual labor, her face bore the lines traced by trouble and long struggle against adversity. Few outside her home town ever heard of her. There she was known as a good, plain, hard-working woman, obliged for years to labor hard with her hands to feed her little family. Her circumstances were far from those of affluence and fame. Yet when the day came to reverently lay away her mortal remains, all business was suspended in a great marble palace, the capitol building of the state, and a remarkable delegation of the highest officers of the commonwealth journeyed to the little town to pay her memory the last homage, while at her bier knelt the Governor of Minnesota, mourning a true and faithful mother.

Who shall say that too much honor was paid this humble woman? Was it not meet that the official representatives of the people of Minnesota should show her memory this respect, not alone because she had given the commonwealth a worthy governor, but also because she had given her country a worthy son? The honor and respect paid him, and through him and because of him to her were only such as belong to an American mother who rears such a son; and they are respect and honor for which thousands in silks and satins, with soft hands, dainty complexions and exquisite manners must sigh in vain. The honors were due, and in paying them the state officers of Minnesota well expressed the sentiment of American hearts.

AN ESTIMATE OF BLOCK.

Editor Eastman of the St. Cloud Journal-Press, one of the leading republican newspapers of the state, in commenting editorially upon the candidacy of Julius H. Block for the nomination of governor, says:

"The candidacy of State Treasurer Block for the Republican nomination for governor has been announced by the St. Peter Tribune. This is not entirely unexpected, as there have been rumors of Block workers in various sections of the state, and particularly in the big cities. It is a fair question to ask: For what does Block stand? Why should he be nominated for governor? Can he defeat Gov. Johnson? He is a Republican but he has no record on the questions that interest the people. When the corporations of the state were fighting for the control of the Republican organization—and won—Block was an unconcerned spectator. With Block as a candidate what reason can Republican speakers give to the people why he should be elected over Gov. Johnson, save that he is a good fellow and a Republican? Like some ten or twenty thousand other citizens of the state he would make a creditable governor if elected. But what is there in his record or his personality that makes him the best man to lead the Republican hosts in a desperate battle? This is not a knock but something for the Republicans to seriously consider.

School Libraries Grow.

Remarkable strides have been made since 1884 in the development of state school libraries. The final apportionment of the aid for school libraries was made yesterday, the annual appropriation of $20,000 having been already exhausted and no more will be available until next August.

There are in Minnesota 5,578 school libraries, having on their shelves a total of 732,760 volumes, with an estimated value of $512,216. In 1884 there were only 9,000 volumes valued at $12,000.

The number of orders for libraries during the year was 2,033. During the year 68,155 volumes were added to the libraries, at a cost to the school districts of $22,130.75 and to the state of $19,173.37.

CATARRH THE PLAGUE OF WINTER

Every Catarrh sufferer dreads the return of cold weather, for at the first cold breath of the season this plague of Winter is fanned into life with all its miserable symptoms. The nostrils are stopped up, and a constant dropping of mucus back into the throat keeps up a continual hawking and spitting, the patient has dull headaches, ringing noises in the ears and a half sick, depressed feeling all the time. Every inner lining and tissue of the body becomes inflamed, and secretes an unhealthy matter which is absorbed into the blood and distributed to all parts of the body, and the disease becomes constitutional. The catarrhal poison brings on stomach troubles, affects the Kidneys and Bladder, attacks the soft bones of the throat and head and if not checked leads to Consumption. A disease so deep-seated and dangerous cannot be washed out, neither can it be smoked away. Sprays, washes, inhalations, etc., are useless, because they only reach the membranes and tissues, while the real cause of the disease is in the blood. S. S. S. cures Catarrh because it attacks it through the blood; it goes into the circulation and drives out all unhealthy accumulations and catarrhal matter, and when this is done every part of the system receives a supply of rich, pure blood. Then the inflamed membranes and tissues heal, all discharge ceases, the depressed feeling of the body is relieved, and every symptom passes away. S. S. S. goes to the very root of the trouble, and by purifying and enriching the blood and building up the entire system, cures Catarrh permanently. If you have Catarrh do not waste time with local remedies, but begin S. S. S. and write for our book and any medical advice without charge.

Ed. L. Healy has been given the exclusive agency in Red Lake county for the Canadian Northern railway lands and townsites and intends to push the business this spring and summer. These lands are controlled by the Saskatchewan & Alberta Land company, for which concern Mr. Healy will be employed.

H. A. Blaisdell will be up from Jamesville, Minn., late in April to manage the creamery for the coming year. Mr. Blaisdell was the manager last year, and the fact that he has been re-elected speaks highly for his ability as a buttermaker. He has many friends here who will be glad to know of his return to Red Lake Falls.

It can safely be asserted that spring is here. The snow is practically all gone, and the voices of the robin and meadow lark are heard "in our midst." The ice in the rivers is due to go out in two weeks, and northern Minnesota will soon commence to put on its dress of green. This time of year one can easily imagine that life is worth living.

Thief River News: S. J. Swanson, who was formerly the agent for the Red Lake Falls Milling company at Wylie, was in the city the first of the week. Mr. Swanson is now located at a point four miles north of Warren and reports that he purchased some 100,000 bushels of grain there since last fall. In connection with the elevator he runs a small general store.

The United States court of claims has allowed Henry W. Lee of Thief River $2,000. Mr. Lee performed services for the tribe of Winnibago Indians in Wisconsin a number of years ago, and claimed a fee of some $70,000 for doing this work. The matter has been before different departments in Washington for the past thirty years and it has at last been settled for $2,000.

Plummer Pioneer: St. Patrick's Day was celebrated at the hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. James Walker, Mrs. and Miss Short helping the host and hostess entertain. Among those present from Plummer were Mr. and Mrs. Brown, Mr. J. E. Buskirk, Mrs. Finrow and brother, Miss Nelson and Miss Quist, not to forget Joe Morrisette. A pleasant time was enjoyed by all present.

The funeral of James McAnulty was held Friday at Faribault from the church of the Immaculate Conception and the remains interred in Calvary cemetery at that place. A large number of old friends of the family from Faribault, Shieldsville and Waseca county attended the funeral. Henry, T., William and Miss Katie McAnulty, who went down with the remains, returned home Monday morning.

The following from the Princeton Union will be of interest to judges of probate: "There seems to be an impression prevalent that the new code has cut off the fees of judges of probate. According to section 3634 this supposition is erroneous, for therein it is specified that "the probate judge shall furnish a certified copy of any paper on file or of record in such court upon payment therefor at the rate of ten cents a folio and twenty-five cents for such certificate."

Minneapolis Pythian Advocate: Red Lake Falls Lodge No. 169, during the past two months has experienced a decided change of base. From an indebtedness of over $60, and not a cent in the exchequer they have paid off all bills and have something like $50 to the good. Two new applications have been received, and all but three members are paid up in their dues. The members are decidedly enthusiastic and the precentage of attendance is larger than it has ever been.

The extraordinary demand for lumber exceeding that of one year ago by nearly 50 per cent, has led to another advance in the price of that commodity in St. Paul and Minneapolis. The increase amounts to $1 per thousand for "dimension," which has been quoted at $20 per thousand, is now $21 in the Minneapolis market. This same increas applies on board and fencing. The price of lath was tilted from 25 to 50 cents a thousand. The advance has not been made here yet, but it is bound to follow as a consequence of the tilt in the twin city markets.

St. Hilaire Spectator: Mrs. W. A. Arthur entertained the ladies of the village last Wednesday evening at Hotel Markham by giving a china shower to Miss Catherine E. Pirath. The parlors and dining room of the hotel were tastily decorated with streamers and red and white hearts. Games were indulged in and Miss Huldah Gigstad carried off the head prize and Miss Carrie Pirath the foot prize. At ten o'clock the ladies sat down to an excellent supper which did great credit to the culinary ability of the hostess. Each of the ladies present presented Miss Pirath with a cup and saucer or a plate and she received many tasty and valuable presents.

A Vindication for Dr. Pierce.

Decision by the Supreme Court of the State, Against the Ladies' Home Journal.

A verdict has been rendered in favor of the plaintiff in the libel suit brought against the Ladies' Home Journal (published by the Curtis Publishing Co.) by the World's Dispensary Medical Association, of which Dr. R. V. Pierce is president. The suit was brought by Doctor Pierce against the Curtis Publishing Co., for making false statements about one of his standard family medicines known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. In the May number of the Ladies' Home Journal (1904), Mr. Edward Bok, the editor, stated that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription contained alcohol and some other harmful ingredients, and Dr. Pierce had in the action alleged that the defendant maliciously published this article containing such false and defamatory matter. Dr. Pierce further claimed that no alcohol is or ever was contained in his "Favorite Prescription." that said medicine was a vegetable preparation and contained no deleterious ingredients whatever: that Mr. Bok's statement, pretending to give some of the ingredients of said medicine, was wholly and absolutely false. During the trial, the Vice-President of the World's Dispensary Medical Association stated, that the ingredients of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription were extracted from the following native roots: Golden Seal, Blue Cohosh, Lady's Slipper, Black Cohosh and Unicorn, by means of pure glycerine. He was asked how he knew, as a physician and experienced medical man, that the "Favorite Prescription" was a cure for the diseases peculiar to women, such as amenorrhea, dysmenorrhea, anteversion retro-version, and he stated that he knew such was the fact because of his professional experience and the many thousands of women whose ills had been cured by this "Prescription." The Vice-President, being asked to give his authorities, read from the standard works, such as the United States Dispensatory, The American Dispensatory and many other standard medical books.

The retraction printed by the Curtis Publishing Company two months after the libelous statement appeared and nearly two months after the suit had been begun stated definitely that analyses had been made at their request and that the "Favorite Prescription" did not contain either alcohol, opium or digitalis.

What He Used It for.

Wine tasting was his business, and he was reputed to be on of the best who followed that somewhat peculiar means of making a livelihood, so when the bet had been made and the money posted, his "backers" were sure of winning. Incidentally, they did.

The subject, blindfolded, was to taste, one after another, the contents of twenty-five wine glasses, and—if he would win the stakes—name correctly the liquor in each. From one to twenty-four he went down the line, never hesitating, and always right. At the last one he stopped. It was filled with water only.

He sipped it, turning it over and over with his tongue, asked for a second mouthful, considered it with a most perplexed expression, and then had an inspiration. "Of course," he exclaimed, "it's the stuff I clean my teeth with."—Harper's Weekly.

A Clamor for Endowment.

For years our dramatic critics and lovers of the art have advocated and urged the endowing of theaters devoted thereto. New York is entitled to congratulate herself on the public spirit and interest in the higher forms of drama and music to which she shall owe her endowed theater. But shall she have the only endowed theater in the country? What has she that other great, wealthy and progressive American cities lack? Chicago, Philadelphia, Boston and Pittsburg should severally have their endowed theaters and "little opera houses," for each has the requisite culture and means. The movement is worthy of the heartiest encouragement.

Needed No Nerve Medicine.

The story is told of the late Dr. Stuart: After writing a prescription for a patient the physician told him that the druggist would probably charge him 60 cents for filling it. Then the patient asked Dr. Stewart to lend him the money. Thereupon Dr. Stuart carefully scratched out a part of the prescription and handed it back with 10 cents, remarking: "You can have that filled for a dime. What I scratched out was for your nerves."

Trouble Below.

The directors of the famous Styx ferry had assembled to deliberate on the pass system.

"Gentlemen," said Charon after a lively debate, "as our only passengers are, in the nature of our business, all deadheads, I don't see how a change of policy is going to make it pay."

They saw the wisdom of his suggestion, especially as the ferry had no living expenses to keep up.

A New Bug.

"Yes," remarked the professor, "I rather pride myself on the discovery of another hypothesis."

"Indeed," replied Mrs. Cumrox, a little doubtfully. "I had an idea they were quite extinct."

Classified.

"He says he read and understood Browning when he was a little boy; he must be highly cultured, eh?"

"Yes; a highly cultured liar."

(CHAPTER VI.—(Continued.)

Thus they talked, Gomez all the time conducting the defense of the castle against its owner, and at the same time keeping Philip and Don Juan with him, and their interest centered in the fight.

An hour passed, and burned powder on each side was the only result achieved.

Don Juan began to grow impatient.

"Of what use is this?" he exclaimed. "The fools will play with those guns all day and all night. This kind of warfare grows monotonous. When they get weary they will depart, only to annoy us again."

"What would you advise, Don Juan?" asked Philip.

"Attack! Drive them! Cut them down! It is only by destroying this army of Salvarez that we can carry our banners from this place toward Caracas."

"It is so," said Philip. "Gomez, why not attack?"

"It can be done," said Gomez, darting a look of hatred at Garza.

It was not the desire of Gomez just then to shorten the battle. Mattazudo had not yet returned from the evil errand upon which he had been sent. But the commands of Philip must be obeyed.

Then it was that Salvarez was startled by the shouts of his men.

From the battlements outside the castle came a company to drive the besiegers away.

Salvarez shouted out an order to his soldiers. They had been impatiently waiting for the time to come when rifles and pistols could be used in the defense of their country, instead of cannon, which accomplished nothing.

They rallied around their courageous leader.

"Fire!" he commanded.

A volley was fired, and a dozen of the men of Philip lay dead, and a score wounded. Yet the remainder did not slacken the speed at which they advanced.

They returned the fire.

Several of the soldiers of Salvarez fell.

Salvarez gave the command to fire again.

The advancing enemy now, instead of coming straight for Salvarez, made for the trees and found shelter.

Then began a sort of guerrila fighting, neither side gaining the advantage. Firing by volleys was out of the question. Every man found a tree and fired from behind it whenever he saw the head of an enemy.

This lasted a half-hour.

Then Mattazudo appeared near the group of officers around Philip of Aragon.

"It is done. She is safe," he whispered in the ear of Gomez.

Gomez turned to Philip.

"It has lasted long enough," he said. "I will now show your majesty how to deal with those who oppose you."

He gave the word to Mattazudo.

The two hundred Zambos under the command of the rascally half-breed swept out of the battlements, and gaining the rear of Salvarez, began an attack.

Men of the republic fell by dozens.

"It is of no use," said Salvarez. "Our men canont hold out. We cannot hope to win. Another time, and the castle shall be ours."

He gave the order to retreat.

His men, being familiar with the ground, melted away from before the Zambos, and when there were no more soldiers to pursue, the Zambos returned to the castle.

Philip, Gomez and Don Juan stood and watched the return of their army from the scene of its second victory.

"We are invincible," said Philip.

"You are king," said Don Juan.

CHAPTER VII.

The Powder Mine.

"If this is our last match, shall we use it now, or save it for another time?"

Medworth had asked this question when Tempest had handed him the match in the underground passage where the Americans had lost their way in the darkness.

They felt along the moist, slippery walls, and slowly made their way from one cavernous chamber to another, but without success. After several hours at this work they seemed to have accomplished nothing.

And, in fact, they had not accomplished anything.

The caverns in which they were were not under the castle of Salvarez. But they were not far away from it.

From the entrance at the river bank to the opening in the foundation walls the way was crooked enough. One needed to be familiar with the passage to find his way.

Medworth and Tempest were at least two hundred feet from the true passage, and were going round and round, following upon their own footsteps.

"We shall die here," said Medworth. "We have no food."

"Don't weaken," said Tempest. "Keep a stiff upper lip and perservere in the search."

Again they tried to find the entrance, but did not succeed.

Meanwhile, what of Salvarez?

When he retreated from the Zambos he picked up his wife and daughter, and withdrew to a safe distance from the castle to allow his soldiers time to recuperate.

He remained here until nightfall; then, with a half dozen of his bravest officers, he left his wife and Jacinta with the army, and stealthily made his way toward the castle.

"General," said one of his companions, "you have a plan."

"Yes," he said, a desperate one. One that grieves me, but which seems necessary. I am convinced that we cannot recapture the castle."

"Then what do you propose?"

"To blow it up. Under the castle is a powder magazine. No one but myself, my wife and daughter know of its existence. There is a way to reach it that I alone know. There is a secret passage to my castle from the river. We will enter here and lay a powder train, and blow the enemies of the republic off the earth."

Silently they worked their way along, keeping a sharp lookout for the sentinels of the enemy.

They carried lanterns, but these were not lighted. They were for use in the secret passage.

Salvarez succeeded in guiding his men to the entrance. They entered.

"Look," said Medworth, clutching Tempest's arm, "A light!"

What he saw was the gleaming, dancing reflections of a lantern on the walls near him.

"Some one is coming," said Tempest; "keep quiet."

They heard the sound of footsteps, then of voices.

"Come," said Medworth, in a whisper, "let us see if they are enemies or friends."

Following the light, it was not difficult for them to find Salvarez and his companions.

"Do not get too near," said Medworth.

"It is Salvarez," said Tempest.

"Never mind if it is," replied Medworth, whose mind was acute and alert again.

"By keeping in the shadow we can easily watch them, and we may learn something that will prove to be an advantage."

Tempest knew what was in his companion's mind, and subsided. They stealthily followed Salvarez and his officers, keeping always in the darkest shadow. As there was no light except from the lanterns the officers carried, they could not, of course, see anything beyond the range of their rays, while the Americans, standing out of reach of the dull flame, could easily discern every move the Venezuelans made.

Salvarez led the way direct to where a wall of masonry seemed to effectually obstruct the passage.

But the general, after feeling around a moment, found a loose stone and removed it. It was then easy to make an opening large enough for a man to enter.

Salvarez led the way. The others followed close after him.

Medworth and Tempest remained at the wall, peering through the opening to see what the others were doing.

Salvarez led the way straight to a round powder magazine made of cement.

The Americans did not know what this was, and the Venezuelans spoke in so low a tone that nothing could be gained from their conversation.

But Medworth and his companion were not left long in ignorance of the errand that had brought Salvarez under the walls of his castle.

"They are going to fire the magazine," said Medworth. "That's powder."

The officers worked a while at the magazine, making a connection. Then they carefully laid a train of powder from it toward the hole they had made in the foundation wall.

Medworth and Tempest kept back in the shadows and let them complete their arrangements.

"It is ready," said Salvarez at last. "Much as I love my home, I love my country more. I sacrifice my castle that the enemies of the republic shall be destroyed. Tonto and Adda, when we are safely away, touch a match to the powder and flee for your lives out of the passage. Come, you others, let us hurry, so that the work of vengeance may not long be delayed."

He, with four of his companions, started away, leaving the other two to obey his orders.

"Now!" said one of these, after a few minutes spent in waiting.

"Now!" said Medworth, aloud.

The Americans made a rush. The two officers found themselves seized in the iron grasp of men more powerful than they.

"Take the lantern! Take the matches!" said Medworth.

One of the officers had taken a metallic match-box from his pocket. Medworth seized this. Tempest grasped one of their lanterns, leaving them one to light their way out of the passage.

"Now go," said Medworth to the officers. "Tell General Salvarez that his plot has been discovered. Tell him not to try this game again."

Released from the hands of the Americans, the two officers fled from the place.

"Well!" said Tempest, wiping the perspiration from his face, "that was done very neatly, but why it was done I haven't yet got through my skull. Why didn't you let them blow the castle to pieces? What do you care for that gang of loons?"

"Nothing," said Medworth. "But Lola Garza is in that castle. Would you have her blown to pieces with the rest?"

"By Jove!" said Tempest, soberly. "I never thought of that!"

CHAPTER VIII.

At the Carib's Hut.

There was trouble in the Castle of Salvarez.

The battle over, the victorious troops had given themselves up to feasting and drinking to celebrate the defeat of Salvarez.

The coronation of Philip had been postponed. The battle had interfered, and the troops were not now in a condition to realize the glory of such an event.

While the eating and drinking, smoking and the singing of Spanish songs went on among the soldiers, Philip sat alone in the library of Salvarez, now called the council room of the king.

His reveries were interrupted by the entrance of Don Juan, who burst in upon him like a whirlwind.

"I am undone!" he cried. "There is an enemy among us."

Philip, seeing the frenzied look on Garza's face, started to his feet.

"What do you mean, Garza? Speak! What has happened?"

"Lola, my daughter!" gasped Don Juan, unable to say more.

"What of her?" demanded Philip, placing his hand on the hilt of his sword.

"She is gone from the castle!" Don Juan walked back and forth nervously. "I went to her room a moment ago. I found her door ajar. She was not there. I sought her everywhere in the castle. She is not here. Now that I think of it, I have not seen her since the battle."

"Nor I," said Philip, turning pale. "What do you think has become of her?"

"I think—I am sure—some one has taken her away. My fears were not groundless, as you see."

"You suspect—Gomez."

"I can suspect no one else. I have already spoken to you about my suspicion of him."

"I know. Where is Gomez now?"

"I do not know. I have not seen him."

"Send for him. Let us see what he has to say. If Gomez has taken her away, he must die."

"Yes—he must die—by my hand," said Don Juan.

An orderly was called.

"Request General Gomez to come here at once," said Philip.

The orderly saluted.

"General Gomez is not in the castle, your majesty," he said.

A quick look of intelligence flashed between Don Juan and Philip.

"Do you know where he has gone?"

"No, you majesty. He left some time ago. He ordered his horse, and said nothing about his destination or the time of his return."

"Did he go alone?"

"He went alone."

"Very well. You may go."

The orderly withdrew.

"What shall we do?" asked Philip.

"I must follow Gomez," said Don Juan. "I would advise that you remain here, and act as if nothing had happened. If you should leave the castle, the alarm would in some way reach Gomez. I shall ride out and find him."

"Go, then, and if you find he has been a traitor, shoot him."

"Bring me a horse at once," he said to the orderly.

The horse was brought.

"Do you know which way General Gomez went from here " asked Don Juan.

"He started toward the south," was the reply.

WASPS BENEFIT THE FIGS.

Insects Are Necessary to the Fruit's Successful Cultivation.

The long-continued effort to produce the Smyrna fig of commerce in California has been crowned with success. The history of the experiment is interesting. It began over twenty years ago with importation of cuttings from Asia Minor. Figs have been produced from these and other imported cuttings, but they were not the famous white fig of commerce. The credit of producing the latter in California belongs to George C. Roeding of Fresno. Until this summer every true Smyrna fig tree planted in California which bore fruit failed to mature it; the figs were unfertilized and withered and dropped. It was finally discovered that the fertilization of this fig depended upon the service of the blastophaga wasp, whose habitat is in the capri, or wild fig. The latter was imported and thrived amazingly, but the blastophaga did not accompany it. Special importations of the wasp followed, but it thrived only for a season on the capri fig and then disappeared. It was assumed that it could not survive our winters. Last year the department of agriculture took the matter in hand. A fresh consignment was imported and its care intrusted to Mr. Roeding. Last April the young insect colony emerged in full force from the first capri cot, entered the second, emerged again, and then took possession of the Smyrna fig trees, the fruit on which was ready for fertilization. Mr. Roeding reports that this experiment has been perfectly successful. A ton of the fruit has already been picked from his trees and the entire crop will yield five or six tons more. Mr. Roeding believes that the blastophaga has come to stay and he expects that California will be enriched soon with another industry.—Chicago News.

GREAT SCOTT.

The Biggest Man of Addison County, Vt., Tells an Interesting Story.

E. C. Scott, meat dealer, Vergennes, Vt., Past Commander of Ethan Allen Post, G. A. R., says: "A severe attack of typhoid left me with weak kidneys. Every night I had to get up frequently to pass the urine, which was ropy, dark and very painful to void. I had no appetite, but drank water continually without being able to quench my thirst. Terrible headaches and dizzy spells oppressed me and my back was lame, sore and stiff. A month's treatment with Doan's Kidney Pills rid me of this trouble, and now I am strong and healthy and weigh 230 pounds. I give the credit to Doan's Kidney Pills."

Bourke Cockran, apropos of St. Patrick's day, told an Irish story.

"There was an Irish schoolmaster," he said, "who was examining a class in geography one day.

"'Now, my lad,' he said to a clever little chap, 'tell us what latitude is.'

"The clever little chap smiled and winked.

"'Latitude?' he said. 'Oh, sir, there's none o' that in Ireland. Sure, the English don't allow us any, sir.'"

Splendor of Spanish Throneroom.

The throneroom of the royal palace at Madrid is one of the most magnificent in the world. Decorated in red and gold, it contains rock crystal chandeliers, colossal looking glasses of the finest quality, marble tables and priceless porphyry. The ceiling is painted by Tiepolo with the "Majesty of Spain" in illustration of the virtue of the kings and the manliness of the people, who are represented in the different costumes of the provinces. Here the sovereigns of Spain receive on grand occasions when alive and when dead are laid out in state.

Fate of the Old Presidents.

In the autumn of 1901 Mrs. W., of Roxbury, spent a few weeks with her daughter in Nova Scotia, returning home shortly before President McKinley was shot, bringing her niece, Bessie F., aged six years, home with her. Of course, the child heard a good deal of talk in the house about the shooting of the president.

One day Bessie said to her aunt, "Aunt Minnie, who is king of the United States?" her aunt replied: "We have no kings in the United States like you do in your British country. We have presidents. We have an election every four years and elect a new one."

"Oh, yes," the child replied, "and then they shoot the old ones, don't they?"

FOOD HELPS.

In Management of a R. R.

Speaking of food, a railroad man says:

"My work puts me out in all kinds of weather, subject to irregular hours for meals and compelled to eat all kinds of food.

"For 7 years I was constantly troubled with indigestion, caused by eating heavy, fatty, starchy, greasy, poorly cooked food, such as are the most accessible to men in my business. Generally each meal or lunch was followed by distressing pains and burning sensations in my stomach, which destroyed my sleep and almost unfitted me for work. My brain was so muddy and foggy that it was hard for me to discharge my duties properly.

"This lasted till about a year ago, when my attention was called to Grape-Nuts food by a newspaper ad. and I concluded to try it. Since then I have used Grape-Nuts at nearly every meal and sometimes between meals. We railroad men have little chance to prepare our food in our cabooses and I find Grape-Nuts mighty handy, for it is ready cooked.

"To make a long story short, Grape-Nuts has made a new man of me. I have no more burning distress in my stomach, nor any other symptom of indigestion. I can digest anything so long as I eat Grape-Nuts, and my brain works as clearly and accurately as an engineer's watch, and my old nervous troubles have disappeared entirely." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Man Doomed by His Clothes.

We now know why the scepter is slowly passing from the hands of the masculine. It is because of his clothes. Miss Agnes Repplier, a Philadelphia essayist and club woman, says so. She says so long as men wore costumes that "interpreted their strength, enhanced their persuasiveness and concealed their shortcomings," so long women accepted them as masters. When men rashly abandoned the bright costumes that charmed the other sex they saw their finish. The situation seems hopeless. Either men must go back to velvet knee breeches and gold buckles, slashed doublet, lace trimmings, feathered hat and lingeries or let the woman go on dominating. It is up to man.

GET RID OF THE GAS

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Strengthen the Stomach and Enable It to Do Its Work.

When the stomach is feeble the food lies in it undigested, decays and throws off poisonous gases that distend the walls of the stomach and cause interference with other organs, especially with the action of the heart and lungs. These gases have other ill effects. The nerves and the brain are disturbed and discomforts such as dizziness, hot flashes, sleeplessness, irritableness and despondency originate from this source.

Experience shows that these troubles vanish just as soon as the stomach is made strong enough to digest the food. In other words, it needs a tonic that will rouse it to do the work of changing the food into nourishment.

Miss Minerva C. Ladd, of Ipswich, Mass., says: "I had a weak stomach from the time I was a little child. Whenever I took hearty food it would cause terrible faintness, and I would finally vomit what I had eaten. At times there would be the most intense pains through the upper part of my body. For days in succession, I would have to lie down most of the time. The distress was often so great that I could hardly bear it, and the frequent and violent belching spells were very disagreeable, too.

"My doctor's medicines gave me little relief and it was not until I tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills that I found a cure. Within three weeks a decided improvement was noticeable. The belching spells were less frequent, the pains through my body were not so intense, my food was retained and after taking the pills for a few weeks longer I found that I was altogether free from the miseries I had so long suffered."

Every dyspeptic should read "What to Eat and How to Eat." Write the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y., for a free copy.

Safe.

Of Marshall Field III., the richest child in the world, an amusing story was recently told at Lakewood.

The boy, according to the story, approached an old lady in a Lakewood hotel, and said to her:

"Can you crack nuts "

"No, my dear, I can't," the old lady replied. "I lost all my teeth years ago."

"Then," said the little boy, extending two hands full of walnuts, "please hold these while I go and get some more."

Trust to Nature.

A great many Americans, both men and women, are thin, pale and puny, with poor circulation, because they have ill-treated their stomachs by hasty eating or too much eating, by consuming alcoholic beverages, or by too close confinement to home, office or factory, and in consequence the stomach must be treated in a natural way before they can rectify their earlier mistakes. The muscles in many such people, in fact in every weary, thin and thin-blooded person, do their work with great difficulty. As a result fatigue comes early, is extreme and lasts long. The demand for nutritive aid is ahead of the supply. To insure perfect health every tissue, bone, nerve and muscle should take from the blood certain materials and return to it certain others. It is necessary to prepare the stomach for the work of taking up from the food what is necessary to make good, rich, red blood. We must go to Nature for the remedy. There were certain roots known to the Indians of this country before the advent of the whites which later came to the knowledge of the settlers and which are now growing rapidly in professional favor for the cure of obstinate stomach and liver troubles. These are found to be safe and yet certain in their cleansing and invigorating effect upon the stomach, liver and blood. These are: Golden Seal root, Queen's root, Stone root, Bloodroot, Mandrake root. Then there is Black Cherrybark. The medicinal principles residing in these native roots when extracted with glycerine as a solvent make the most reliable and efficient stomach tonic and liver invigorator, when combined in just the right proportions, as in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Where there is bankrupt vitality—such as nervous exhaustion, bad nutrition—and thin blood, the body acquires vigor and the nerves, blood and all the tissues feel the favorable effect of this sovereign remedy.

Although some physicians have been aware of the high medicinal value of the above mentioned plants, yet few have used pure glycerine as a solvent and usually the doctors' prescriptions called for the ingredients in varying amounts, with alcohol.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" is a scientific preparation compounded of the glyceric extracts of the above mentioned vegetable ingredients and contains no alcohol or harmful habit-forming drugs.

THOUGHT MUCH OF REPUTATION

Story Illustrative of Vanity of Some "Literary Men."

Tom Lawson told a good story the other day about W. H. H. "Adirondack" Murray. When Mr. Lawson was in the publishing business he got an order from the Northern Pacific to get out a booklet descriptive of the road. He received all the necessary details, and it only remained to get some good man to whip it into readable shape, for which the railroad was willing to pay well. While Mr. Lawson was wondering just whom he could get to do the job, he bethought himself of "Adirondack" Murray, who was then in decidedly straitened circumstances. "Just the man," thought Mr. Lawson, and he sent for Mr. Murray forthwith.

Mr. Murray arrived. He appeared as though he needed money, and Mr. Lawson's heart warmed at the good he was about to do.

Mr. Murray listened while Mr. Lawson in glowing language told him what he wanted. When Mr. Lawson finished, he hauled out a check book and said: "And I'm going to pay you $500 for writing the pamphlet and give you the money in advance, Mr. Murray."

Adirondack leaned back in his chair and gazed at the speaker.

"Are you really in earnest?" he asked.

"Why, certainly," responded Mr. Lawson.

The ex-preacher grabbed his hat in disgust. "The idea," he snorted disdainfully. "I couldn't think of lowering my literary reputation for that."

And he strode out of the office in high dudgeon.

The next heard of Adirondack was as cook in a lumber camp.—Boston Post.

INVENTOR CAN MAKE FORTUNE

Odorless Shoe Blacking Crying Need of the Day.

"A fortune awaits the man who invents odorless shoe blacking," declared the man about town. "Well-polished shoes always make their presence known and they leave a trail of blacking perfume behind them in parlor, hall and dining room. One pair of newly blacked shoes is sufficient to scent up an entire room, and in a crowd it is the odor of shoe blacking which arises above that of all others. At the theater the sachet perfumed garments of the women are smothered by the shoe blacking scent, and violet, lily of the valley, carnation, white rose, all go down before the shoe polish.

"Be a man ever so shy, modest and unobtrusive, his presence will be felt in a roomful of company if he happens to be the only man in the room who has had his shoes freshly shined. He gets conscious of his feet and knows that every one is certain he just came from the bootblack. He knows that those shoes will keep on smelling for twenty-four hours and wishes fervently that he were wearing boots of rusty black—anything but those with that shining, odoriferous polish!

"If some one does arise to invent odorless blacking, he may go a step further and manufacture perfumed blacking and the bootblack will ask, 'Violet, white rose, carnation or musk?' before he begins work on a customer's shoes."

To a Country Maid.

Give me a maiden with her hair a-blowing,
Clean heart and cherry lip;
Give me a maiden 'mongst green orchards growing
For sweet companionship.

Scented, ah, yes! but with the breath of roses
Wafted across the fells,
Past where the bee at noontide drinks and dozes,
Amongst the cowslip bells.

Dainty her home, for not in all your searches
Beneath the city mist
Can you find aught to match the silver birches
Or mountain amethyst.

Or the gazelle, which grows in Nature's keeping
Responsive to each sound,
What is more graceful than the squirrel leaping
Within the forest bound?

Better green glens and sounds of running waters
Than all your town taught rules;
Better round limbs and health and bounding daughters
Than all the airs of schools.

Give me a maiden with her hair a-blowing
With the strong wind of the downs;
Rather a love that's like her, great and glowing
Than the hothouse plants of towns.
—MacKenzie MacBride, in the Queen.

Jim Brackett's Bean Pot.

Jim Brackett used to drive an old stage coach between two towns in Maine. The coach, on account of its odd shape, had been nicknamed the "bean pot."

One very cold morning Jim stopped on the narrow country road to take in a passenger, a stout lady, wrapped up in three or four shawls. As Jim was helping her to get through the narrow door, a rather difficult process, to say the least, a man who had been forced to stop his horse behind the coach called out impatiently:

"Say, Jim, when are ye goin' to get out o' the way?"

Jim, who was still pushing with all his might on the fat lady, shouted back:

"Well, just w-w-wait till I get this p-p-pork in the bean pot."

Adulterated Foods.

In these days of adulterated foods even the tempting chocolate cake may not be what it seems. Its cover, as was recently shown in Chicago by the analysis of the products of a firm which extensively advertised the purity of its preparations, may be, like the obelisk in Central Park, paraffined—possibly as a protection against the gastric juices of the stomach.—New York Tribune.

DISFIGURED WITH ECZEMA.

Brushed Scales From Face Like Powder — Under Physicians Grew Worse—Cuticura Works Wonders.

"I suffered from eczema six months. I had tried three doctors, but did not get any better. It was on my body and on my feet so thick that I could hardly put a pin on me without touching eczema. My face was covered, my eyebrows came out, and then it got in my eye. I then went to another doctor. He asked me what I was taking for it, and I told him Cuticura. He said that was a very good thing, but that he thought that my face would be marked for life. But Cuticura did its work, and my face is now just as clear as it ever was. I told all my friends about my remarkable cure. I felt so thankful I want everybody far and wide to know what Cuticura can do. It is a sure cure for eczema. Mrs. Emma White, 641 Cherrier Place, Camden, N. J., April 25, 1905."

For Its Vocabulary Sake.

"Indirectly, more forcibly sometimes than directly," said Senator Foraker at a dinner, "a man may be accused."

"Thus a good woman of Cincinnati called her cook one morning and said:

"'Mary, come and take the parrot out of the bedroom at once. The master has lost his collar button.'"

MIDDLE LIFE

A Time When Women Are Susceptible to Many Dread Diseases—Intelligent Women Prepare for it. Two Relate their Experiences.

Mrs. A. E. G. Hyland

The "change of life" is the most critical period of a woman's existence, and the anxiety felt by women as it draws near is not without reason.

Every woman who neglects the care of her health at this time invites disease and pain.

When her system is in a deranged condition, or she is predisposed to apoplexy, or congestion of any organ, the tendency is at this period likely to become active—and with a host of nervous irritations make life a burden. At this time, also, cancers and tumors are more liable to form and begin their destructive work.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backaches, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness, inquietude, and dizziness, are promptly heeded by intelligent women who are approaching the period in life when woman's great change may be expected.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was prepared to meet the needs of woman's system at this trying period of her life. It invigorates and strengthens the female organism and builds up the weakened nervous system.

For special advice regarding this important period women are invited to write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., and it will be furnished absolutely free of charge. The present Mrs. Pinkham is the daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham, her assistant before her decease, and for twenty-five years since her advice has been freely given to sick women.

Read what Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound did for Mrs. Hyland and Mrs. Hinkle:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I had been suffering with displacement of the organs for years and was passing through the change of life. My abdomen was badly swollen; my stomach was sore; I had dizzy spells, sick headaches, and was very nervous.

"I wrote you for advice and commenced treatment with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as you directed, and I am happy to say that all those distressing symptoms left me and I have passed safely through the change of life, a well woman. I am recommending your medicine to all my friends."—Mrs. Annie E. G. Hyland, Chestertown, Md.

Another Woman's Case.

"During change of life words cannot express what I suffered. My physician said I had a cancerous condition of the female organs. One day I read some of the testimonials of women who had been cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I decided to try it and to write you for advice. Your medicine made me a well woman, and all my bad symptoms soon disappeared.

"I advise every woman at this period of life to take your medicine and write you for advice."—Mrs. Lizzie Hinkle, Salem, Ind.

What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for Mrs. Hyland and Mrs. Hinkle it will do for other women at this time of life.

It has conquered pain, restored health, and prolonged life in cases that utterly baffled physicians.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Succeeds Where Others Fail.

PINAULT LOSS IS HEAVY

Safety Deposit Box Rifled and Valuable Family Jewels and Negotiable Papers Taken.

The story of the Pinault robbery has not half been told, says the Minneapolis Tribune.

When it was announced that someone had broken into the safe of Dr. Pinault and stolen his valuable French plate, it was understood that that was the extent of the robbery, and the loss was serious enough to mean one of the boldest and most extensive thefts that has been committed in Minneapolis for years.

It is now learned that when the robbers secured the plate it was but an incident of their work, and that the robbery of the plate is as nothing compared with the booty that the men really secured.

It now appears that the safety deposit vault rented by Dr. Pinault from a local trust company was first robbed, and a large share of Dr. Pinault's immense fortune abstracted therefrom. The robbery of the safety deposit vault was followed by the robbery of the contents of the safe at the Pinault residence.

The police and Dr. Pinault refuse to give out any information as to the value of the stolen property, but it is said to run into the hundreds of thousands of dollars. It includes the jewels belonging to Mrs. Pinault and much negotiable paper belonging to Dr. Pinault.

The police have been very reticent about this robbery, but from what has been learned, it is the rifling of the safety deposit vault, and not the stealing of the French plate that they must be directing their energies to.

Instead of one man, the residence caretaker, being under suspicion, there must have been several men in the game, which was one of the boldest and cleverest ever pulled off in this country. The work stamps the men as being among the cleverest crooks in the country, and it would not be, surprising under the circumstances if the police failed to secure any trace of the thieves or the plunder.

How the thieves gained access to the safety deposit vault is something of a mystery, but from a reliable source it is learned that the chief crook, who was conversant with all of Dr. Pinault's affairs, forged an order on the trust company for the key of the box, though why the doctor should have left his key with the company is not known.

In any event, the man and his confederates gained possession of the key in some way or other, and the rest was easy. They stole the jewelry valued at hundreds, and probably thousands of dollars and also the negotiable paper.

So confident were the crooks that their work was protected from discovery that they made bold to open a broker's office on Nicollet avenue and advertise the paper for sale. They kept the office open for about two weeks, but it is not known that they succeeded in selling any paper.

The combination to the safe at the Pinault residence was kept in the safety deposit vault, and with this combination in their possession and a key to the house it was easy for the thieves to work on the safe at their leisure, and dispose of the plate as they saw fit.

They took their time about everything, and had plenty of time left to leave the United States with their booty if they desired.

Many so-called Webster Vest Pocket Dictionaries have been put upon the market, but until now there has been no authentic dictionary of this class, abridged directly from "Webster's International." Such a vest pocket manual has just been issued, entitled "Webster's Little Gem Dictionary." It is scholarly and strictly reliable, being the best, most concise, and most complete of its kind. The main vocabulary includes by actual count more words than are found in any other pronouncing dictionary of its scope although some books make exorbitant claims to the contrary. The "Little Gem" also contains a very full and up-to-date Gazetteer of the world, many valuable tables and lists, and also twelve pages of colored maps, seldom published in a book of this size. It is just the guide you need to answer your many questions with accuracy. All copies are supplied with the marginal index and will be sent postpaid on receipt of price. IN PROBATE COURT

Special Term, March 19, 1906.

In the matter of the Estate of Norman Perry Hall, deceased:

Whereas, certain writings purporting to be duly authenticated copies of the last will and testament of Norman Perry Hall, late of Cook county, Illinois, deceased, and the probate thereof in the Probate Court of Cook county, state of Illinois, have been delivered to this Court;

And, whereas, George Morinville has filed therewith his petition, representing among other things that said Norman Perry Hall lately died in said county of Cook, state of Illinois, testate, possessed of certain real estate, situated in said county of Red Lake, and that said petitioner is owner of said lands hereinbefore described, situated in Red Lake county, Minnesota, and praying that the said instrument may be admitted to probate, and that letters of administration, with the will annexed, be to C. R. Middleton issued thereon:

It is Ordered, that the proofs of said instrument, and the said petition, be heard before this Court, at the Probate Office in said county, on the 14th day of April, 1906, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, when all persons interested may appear for or contest the probate of said instrument:

And it is further ordered, that notice of the time and place of said hearing be given to all persons interested by publishing this order once in each week, for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in the Red Lake Courier, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Red Lake Falls in said county.

Dated at Red Lake Falls, the 19th day of March, A. D. 1906.

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

DEFAULT HAS BEEN MADE IN THE conditions of a certain mortgage executed and delivered by William F. Lehman, an unmarried man, as mortgagor, to Arthur D. Warner and Earle F. Andrus, as mortgagees, upon the following described tract or parcel of land situate and being in the county of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, to-wit: The northwest quarter (NW¼) of Section twenty-seven (27), in township one hundred and fifty (150), North of Range forty-four (44), West of the Fifth Principal Meridian, which said mortgage was dated the 4th day of June, A. D., 1901, and was duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of said County of Red Lake on the 15th day of November, A. D. 1902, at 4 o'clock and 10 minutes in the afternoon, in Book 22 of Mortgages on page 198, and

WHEREAS, there is claimed to be due, and is due upon said mortgage and the notes therein described, at the date of this notice, the sum of Three hundred and ninety-three and 60-100 ($393.60) Dollars, and no action or proceeding at law or in equity has been instituted to recover the same or any part thereof,

Now, Therefore, notice is hereby given that under and by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, said mortgage will be foreclosed and the real property therein described, being the same premises hereinbefore described, together with the hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging, will be sold by the Sheriff of said County of Red Lake, or his deputy, at public auction to the highest bidder therefor, for cash, at the office of said sheriff, in the Court House at Red Lake Falls, in said County of Red Lake, on the 21st day of April, A. D., 1906, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, to pay the amount which shall then be due on said mortgage including an attorney's fee of $25.00, stipulated in said mortgage in case of foreclosure thereof, and the other costs and disbursements allowed by law in such foreclosure proceedings.

AN EXCELLENT CONCERT

The Red Lake Falls Band Gives Sacred Concert Which is Greatly Enjoyed,

With a brass band is usually associated the idea of a light and flashy music addicted to by street organizations and the kind of music that catches the public ear, but the Red Lake Falls band proved its capacity Thursday evening for the more difficult classical music and at the same time to please a very select audience.

In the first part the band played the Grand March from Tannhauser, an overture from Martha and the Peer Gynt Suite by Grieg and all were played with precision and excellence of phrasing. Mr. Clement Brunelle gave a splendid rendition to the Holy City played as a cornet solo.

The second half of the program was opened with "Simple Aveu," a trio for violin, cello and piano by Messrs. Miller, Berthon and Healy. An encore was insisted upon and responded to. The trombone solo, "Asleep in the Deep" by Mr. Harry B. Healy was a delight and nothing short of a repitition seemed to satisfy the audience. Miss Pauline Neiland's recitation, "King Robert of Sicily," showed careful preparation and a cleverness of performance. Responding to an encore, she gave "Abide With Me" to a piano accompanyment. It was sweetly done. The program was closed by the band with a paraphrase, "Nearer My God to Thee," and the Coronation March from the Prophet.

Professor Miller and his splendid organization were deservedly the recipients of much praise.

Jim Hill's New Road.

James J. Hill is to have a twin transcontinental road, operations now being underway for the construction of an east and west line between Winnipeg and Van Couver. Five hundred miles of the new line is already in process of construction and plans call for a total of 1,800 miles. Hitherto it has been surmised that Hill was building in connection with the Canadian Northern but this is not the case and an exiting rail laying contest soon will start between the Great Northern and the Canadian Northern and the Grand Trunk Pacific. The biggest stretch of line on which construction is now underway and between Van Couver and Princeton. The route follows along the Frazer river and inclinining northerly, it strikes just north of the Tulameen river. The line proceeds along the Similkameen valley in a northerly direction to Midway B. C. from which point a line already has been built to Nelson, Grand Forks and Bonners Ferry, where connection is made at Kuskonook. From there a line is to be built to Fernie the line will strike across to Winnipeg. Surveyors are already in the field on this section of the proposed road and construction probably will commence in a month or more. This will give the Great Northern almost as short a line as the Canadian Pacific route.

A number of feeders for the Canadian transcontinental line are being built from points in the United States. One is from St. Johns, N. D., to Brandon, Manitoba, another from Neche, N. D,. to Portage la Prairie, Man., and the third is the construction of a line from Hibbing, Minn., to Koochiching, touching the international boundary. The latter line will give the Canadian Great Northern line an outlet to the head of the lakes, as the Great Northern railway has a line from Hibbing to Duluth.

DRUNKEN DEBAUCH ENDS IN A DEATH

Anton Shoston, a Prominent Farmer, Dies Probably as Result of Accident.

Two Campanions Sleep Off Their Stupor Unconscious of the Tragedy.

Anton Shoston lying cold in death and his two companions sleeping off a drunken stupor, unconscious of the tragedy, was the horrible scene that greeted the neighbors Saturday night at a little farm house ten miles east of St. Hilaire.

Shoston, who lived about twenty-three miles east of St. Hilaire, had gone to that town on Thursday on business, his purchases there including a jug of whiskey. Returning homeward Friday night he arrived at the house of a friend named Isaac Dahlen about midnight. He spent the night there and Saturday morning he and Dahlen went to the house of John Kjenickson, to borrow a wagon to continue his journey as the sleighing had played out. The three had dinner at Kjenickson's and with the gallon jug of whiskey proceeded to make merry. They evidently did for when it was all over there was but little whiskey left. Hjenickson and Dahlen fell by the wayside and Shoston alone remained so no living witness is able to tell just what followed whether of suicide, accident or other means Shoston came to his death. All that is known of it was that when found he had been dead some hours and a bullet hole in his head told only how he died.

The first person to learn of the affair was Carl Eggen, a neighbor who made the discovery about five o'clock in the afternoon. Later came Edward Peterson and A. C. Mayfield, other neighbors. Their first act was to get a doctor from St. Hilaire. He came but was hours too late. Then Coroner Belair of Red Lake Falls was telephoned for. He arrived Sunday morning in company with County Attorney Germo and an inquest was held. Little or nothing was developed except the doings of the three men prior to the time when Kjenickson and Dahlen, overcome with liquor, went to sleep.

What a picture greeted Carl Eggen, who was the first to arrive. As a witness he told at the inquest how he entered the open door, how Kjenickson lay asleep upon the bed and could not be aroused, how Shoston lay upon the floor and Dahlen was crawling toward him calling on him to awaken. Shoston will awaken no more in this world. A revolver, the instrument of death lay at his side. Edward Peterson and A. C. Mayfield told much the same story.

Kjenickson, at whose house the affairs took place told of the events up to the time as he said "I drank until I was so full I was dead to the world." Besides what has been above related, he told of Dahlen getting out his revolver to shoot his dog but Sjoston had protested and took the revolver away from him. Isaac Dahlen testified to a similar state of facts.

The coroner's jury returned a verdict that Sjoston came to his death by the accidental discharge of a revolver then and there in his own hands.

The jury was composed of L. T. Bergh, Mike Madden, Louis Buse, Ed Meiler, Val. Yeager and H. C. Jarr.

The dead man, Anton Shoston, was a resident of the town of Highlanding, some twenty miles east of St. Hilaire. He had a wife and seven children and was about forty years of age, He was a prosperous well-to-do farmer, and well liked by those who knew him, so there is little reason to suppose the death was anything but accidental, the act of a drunken man carelessly handling a revolver.

OPERATIONS WILL COMMENCE MAY 1

Red Lake Falls Creamery Will Be Ready for Business the First of May.

State Dairy Inspector Winkjer Will Lend Assistance in Making It Go.

It will be good news to the community to learn that the Red Lake Falls creamery will begin operation on May 1.

Secretary Henning of the Creamery Association announces that a first class butter-maker in the person of H. A. Blaisdell of Janesville, Minn., who comes to the city highly recommended as an expert in butter making, will have charge.

Along this line it can be said that an unusual effort will be made this year to put the creamery on a higher basis of efficiency than it has ever occupied and to keep it in line with the best creameries of the state.

Joel G. Winkjer of Crookston, state dairy and food inspector, was in the city Saturday in consultation with members of the association. He has promised to spend some little time here this summer and will lend much valuable aid in the production of a high grade of butter and placing the creamery on a paying basis to farmers as well as the association.

While in the city Mr. Winkjer contributed the following on the subject of creameries which will be of interest to farmers generally:

The local co-operative creamery is what has made Minnesota famous as a butter producing state both as to quality and quantity. The reason for it is that the farmers feel that the creamery is their own, and any increase they make in the product manufactured makes their creamery so much more valuable to them and whenever they make an improvement in quality of their cream they are sure of a bigger price for their butter. They feel that the better support they give their creamery in every way the better off they are. It is also an educator for it teaches the lesson of co-operation; a feeling of interest in their work is created and the little petty differences which some times exist are harmonized and wiped away to give room for something that does good. The good does not end with the mere operation of a creamery but when together at the creamery or regular meetings, topics of interest are discussed and the result is that the different methods of farming are brought about and their labors will bring better returns. When they come together at the creamery the check for each month is discussed and the number of cows that produced it compared and a pleasant rivalry to excel and desire to find out the other patrons methods are produced.

It is a well established fact which is hard to see by farmers in a locality that has not had a real successful creamery that the dairy business puts the farmer on better financial basis and can operate his farm more profitaby than where one kind of crop is raised on the same land year after year. In your own locality you have had plenty of evidence that the creamery business pays and it is for you to get together and give your own creamery the support it ought to have and the business will grow more and more remunerative to you and when your creamery starts up on May 1st, or before be sure to be there the first day with your cream and arrange with with your neighbor to go with you. Even if you have not such a great amount to begin with each little lot helps. You may think that it does not pay you to bring just a small quantity which as far as the direct returns for the cream is concerned may be true but let us see if it does not pay you in another way. Suppose you were to sell your 160 acres of land; if you had a successful creamery in your town you can feel assured that you could ask $1.00 more per acre than if you did not have one. A good creamery would increase your land value more than $1.00 per acre but we will use this for sake of argument then you can see that a creamery is worth some for you to help make that creamery of yours a success. Be there the first day it starts and make this year a hummer.

SIX PLEAD GUILTY TO INDICTMENTS

Box Car Thieves of Thief River Are Sentenced to Terms in the Penitentiary.

Disposition of the Civil Calendar and Business Done During the Past Week.

Eka Hathaway and Gross Edson, two of the participants in the Soo line box car robberies last fall, plead guilty before Judge Watts Monday and were given sentences to the state penitentiary, Hathaway drawing one and a half years and Edson three years. The charge was that of grand larceny.

The stealing of goods from cars in the yards at Thief River Falls covered a considerable period of time and from it arose seven indictments against Hathaway and six against Edson. The latter was a switchman in the employ of the road and the former was employed in the bottling works. The indictments, other than those under which they received their sentences, were nolled by County Attorney Germo.

Ole Hagan and Charles Erickson pleaded guilty Tuesday to the indictments charging them with participation in the car robberies. Hagan was given a years sentence and Erickson years.

Ben Holden pleaded guilty to the charge of larceny and was given a fine of $20 or 90 days in jail. At present he is languihsing in the county's bastile.

James Kibby pleaded guilty to breaking jail. His sentence was suspended until after his trial for larceny.

Charles Rockstad, also implicated in the box car robbery, was tried yesterday and acquitted by the jury. He was defended by Attorney C. E. Boughton.

Civil Calendar.

During the past week causes on the civil calendar have been disposed of as follows:

James Meehan vs. K. M. Hansen, verdict for defendent. This was an action for $900 being the balance claimed to be due on a building contract. The defendant set up a failure to finish the building on contract time and to have it comply with plans.

Francois Desjariais vs. William Findeisen, dismissed by plaintiff.

Arthur La Fontaine vs. Fred Westphal, et. al., answer withdrawn and verdict ordered for plaintiff.

Mary Grenier, as adm., vs Francis Grenier, verdict for defendent.

George W. Casbon vs. Julius Pletn, jury directed to return verdict for defendant.

Having completed its business the petit jury were discharged this morning.

The calendar will probably be finished and court adjourn today.

EASTER MONDAY CONCERT.

Orpheum Quartette Will Give Elaborate Entertainment.

The Orpheum Quartette, composed of Messrs. L. P. Berthon, Frank E. Miller, J. L. RESUME OF THE NEWS

Fresh——Reliable——Brief

From Washington.

Secretary Bonaparte decided to accept the resignation of Midshipman Minor Merriwether from the naval academy.

The controller of the currency has been advised that the First National Bank of West Texas closed its doors yesterday.

Naval maneuvers on the great lakes have been authorized by the secretary of the navy from Aug. 5 to 10, when naval militia of the states bordering on the lakes will rendezvous at a point which has not yet been selected for combined drill.

Secretary Taft received the official advices from Acting Gov. Gen. Ide at Manila that Gov. Curry had not been killed in the recent fight with the Paulajanes in Samar, but had escaped, and after being lost for thirty-six hours, returned to headquarters.

Orders have been issued by the postmaster general instructing the postmaster at New York and Brooklyn to refuse to admit to the mails the advertisements of fifty-two illegal "medical offices" located in those cities, and also to refuse to deliver mail.

Crimes and Criminals.

Harry Hauren, twenty-two years old, killed Meut Devins, who was beating his mother at Peoria, Ill.

Mexican Indians killed seven people near La Dura, and did not stop their rampage until Mexican troops crushed them.

Detectives James Doyle and James Considene were stabbed and two Greeks were shot in a fight at Chicago Sunday night.

William Moore of Grand Forks, charged with the theft of his roommate's trunk, was sentenced to two and a half years in the penitentiary.

Mrs. Vincent Demarco was shot and killed by her husband in Chicago. She was thirty years old, and the only support of her four children, it is alleged.

The Drake investigation at Cincinnati found that over $2,500,000 paid by the city for bonds of its employes has gone to a ring of high city officials.

Nine convicts escaped from the city stockade at Atlanta, Ga. The delivery was accomplished by the filing of a steel bar over a window. One of the men, a white man, was captured.

Driven to desperation by letters and advertising literature from "fake" doctors, who had induced him to believe that he was afflicted with an incurable malady, Fred L. Glossing, seventeen years old, committed suicide at Blackfoot, Idaho.

Nine persons were killed and thirteen injured when an accommodation train on the Chicago & Northwestern railway's new branch ran into a washout on the prairie twenty-six miles west of Casper, Wyo. Most of the persons killed and injured were workmen on the way to the grading camps.

Because he was despondent over loss of health, Samuel Peterman, a farmer near Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., placed a rifle to his mouth and blew out his brains. The bullet passed through his head and through the ceiling, finally lodging in a pillow under the head of a son who was asleep without arousing him. Peterman was sixty years of age and leaves a wife and five children.

William D. Mann, publisher of Town Topics, in a New York court, pleaded "not guilty" to an indictment charging him with perjury. His counsel, Martin W. Littleton, asked Judge O'Sullivan to set an early date for the trial. District Attorney Jerome replied that "The defendant will have his day in court, when he will be able to vindicate himself if he can, but the district attorney will try this case when he gets ready."

Casualty List.

The total death list in the Fairmount, Va., mine district is twenty-six.

Hail and cold have killed a large part of the fruit crop in the bud in Raleigh, N. C.

Mrs. Thomas Marshall and her four-year-old child were burned to death at Prestonburg, Ky.

Fire in a six-story brick building in Chicago, occupied by several wholesale clothing merchants, caused a loss of $150,000.

The large sawmill at Clay City, Ky., owned by the Swan-Day Lumber Co., was burned. The loss is estimated at over $200,000.

Fire at Fayetteville, N. C., in the Frank Thornton dry goods stores destroyed eleven buildings. The loss is $300,000. Several were hurt.

A carpet tack, caught between cog wheels, caused a spark that resulted in the blowing up of the works of the Phoenix Powder company, eight miles east of East St. Louis, Ill., killing two men.

At Ottumwa, Ia., the J. E. Scase dry goods store was totally destroyed and the First National bank, McElroy hotel and W. J. Dolan dry goods store were greatly damaged by a fire of unknown origin. The guests in the hotel were driven from their rooms by the fire, but no person was injured. The property loss was $25,000.

Fire in the Olson block at Butte, Mont., resulted in approximately $100,000 damage to the wholesale stock of the Passmore Paper company through the warehouse being flooded with water.

Foreign Notes.

"David B. Hill has made his last fight for the Democratic party in this state," said a minority member of the New York legislature. "From what I know and learn regarding Hill's condition," he continued, "I am convinced that there is little to be hoped for in his case. He is a broken man physically."

CHARGE AT MOB WITH BAYONETS

CANADIAN TROOPS DISPERSE DISORDERLY MOB OF STRIKERS.

SITUATION IS VERY GRAVE

RIOTERS DEFY SOLDIERS, ATTACK CAR AND ARE DRIVEN BACK BY FORCE.

Winnipeg, April 1. — The strike situation is rapidly assuming startlingly grave propositions. The mob yesterday assumed such a threatening attitude that regulars were called out and a detachment of Royal Canadian Mounted Rifles were called up to patrol Main street. The regulars lined up at the corner of Higgins and Main streets with fixed bayonets.

Charged by Troops.

This did not awe the crowd, which attacked a car and attempted to pull off the crew. Mayor Sharpe read the riot act amid the hoots and jeers of the crowd. The soldiers then loaded their guns with ball cartridges and, the mob failing to disperse, a charge with fixed bayonets was ordered. This had the necessary effect and the wildly excited mob was restrained.

The few cars that were operated yesterday were taken off the tracks at 6 o'clock last night, and this no doubt prevented bloody riots, as the crowd was in violent mood.

May Attack Residences.

Attacks on the residences of directors of the traction company were threatened.

Only six cars were run yesterday, and they carried more policemen than they did citizen passengers.

A feature of yesterday's disturbances was the arrest of two private detectives for assault. One of them attacked Mayor Sharpe and City Solicitor Hunt, not knowing who they were.

When the cars stopped running last night the mob quieted down somewhat and the troops were withdrawn from the streets, much to the relief of peace-loving citizens, who feared the dire results that would have followed an order to fire on the mob.

Maxim Gun Ready.

Besides the regulars, the Thirteenth field battery and Nineteenth regiment are under orders to turn out if required. A gun squad with a Maxim turned out with the regulars.

The police had the busiest day in the history of Winnipeg. Every person detected in the act of creating a disturbance was promptly placed under arrest and carted off to the station.

Must Keep Off Streets.

At 3:15 o'clock yesterday afternoon City Solicitor Hunt announced, by authority of the mayor, that citizens are warned to keep off the streets, that disorders have gone as far as can, in public interest, be allowed, and that if citizens get in the way of the authorities they must take the consequences.

BURNS RIFLE BUTT; IS DEAD.

Wisconsin Woman Is Accidentally Shot and Killed.

Whitewater, Wis., April 1. — While attempting to burn the wooden butt from an old rifle in her kitchen range Mrs. John Dutton, forty-three years old, wife of a farmer living near here, was accidentally shot and killed by the explosion of the rifle. Her fourteen-year-old son brought the gun from the barn, where he had found it, and requested his mother to burn off the butt in the stove. She held it in the fire by the barrel and the gun suddenly was discharged and a bullet entered her heart.

ARE DRIVEN TO CANNIBALISM

HORRIFYING ACCOUNTS COME FROM FROZEN ARCTIC PLAIN IN ASIA.

St. Petersburg, April 1. — Horrible accounts are reaching St. Petersburg of cannibalism and starvation among tribes inhabiting the frozen Arctic plain of the Chukchis peninsula at the extremity of Asia. Most of the reindeer died of starvation during the winter of 1904-5, leaving the inhabitants without means of communication or food.

During the last winter whole tribes have died and members of the Omonlens and Oloiya tribes, when facing starvation, assembled in council and decided that nothing remained but death. They agreed that each head of a family should kill his wife and children and then commit suicide. The tribesmen gathered on a plateau covered with snow and ice and in the darkness of the Arctic winter the Spartan decision was executed, not a single member of the two tribes surviving.

More revolting still is the story of what occurred in a family of the Yukhai tribe. A mother and nine of her children having died of hunger, the father, a surviving daughter and a nephew lived upon the remains, and when they were consumed the father murdered the nephew.

A Russian named Dolganoff, who went to the region to buy furs, reported the situation to the authorities at Yakutsk, Siberia. He entered a snow hut of a Yukahir family while the latter were eating the head of a murdered relative.

CONGRESS.

House Passes Appropriation Bill Carrying $30,000,000.

Washington, March 31.—The house yesterday passed the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill, carrying $30,000,000, after considering the measure two weeks.

Young was convicted of assaulting and murdering a sixteen-year-old girl whom he had adopted.

MINERS TO SIGN WHEN THEY CAN AGREEMENTS WILL BE MADE WITH OPERATORS WHO WILL SIGN 1903 SCALE.

STRIKE WILL BE SHORT ONE

EMPLOYERS OF 75,000 BITUMINOUS MINERS WILL SIGN AT ONCE.

Indianapolis, April 1. — The national convention of the United Mine Workers of America ended yesterday after authorizing national and district officers to sign wage agreements with any operator who would agree to pay the scale of 1903 or its equivalent for a period of two years. This would involve an advance of 5.55 per cent in all districts except the Southwest, where an advance of 3 cents per ton is demanded, as the 1903 scale is practically in force there.

The convention declined an offer made by the operators of Illinois, Indiana and Ohio to submit the differences to arbitration. Where a coal operator owns mines in different districts the scale must be signed for all the properties.

Many Will Sign at Once.

It is anticipated that the scale will be signed in a few days by employers of 75,000 miners. The Pittsburg Coal Company of Western Pennsylvania, which owns mines in Ohio, Illinois and West Virginia, will, it is expected, sign at once, together with a number of independent operators. The miners expect to get the advance soon in all the Indiana mines south of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, in a number of Central Indiana mines, in one-half of the Illinois mines and in a large percentage of the mines in Ohio. The duration of the strike in Michigan, Kentucky, Central Pennsylvania and Iowa and West Virginia cannot be determined until next week. President Mitchell told the convention that he believes half of the tonnage of Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Western Pennsylvania will sign soon, including independent operators having an annual output of 13,000,000 tons, who protested here against the advance.

Strike Will Be Short.

Pittsburg, April 1. — General sentiment in the Pittsburg district of the bituminous coal field is that while a strike is inevitable in Western Pennsylvania, at least, it will be of short duration. By the adoption of the Berry resolution the way is opened for the operation of the Western Pennsylvania mines, 53 per cent of which are controlled by the Pittsburg Coal company. Dispatches from various points where there has been trouble announce the restoration of the 1903 scale, and the intention of striking miners to return to work Monday morning under that scale.

A thirty days' suspension may be called in this district. This, it is stated will be done in order that the large stocks of coal may be reduced.

GO TO POLLS ON RAFTS.

Flood Drives Most of People From Homes but Doesn't Stop Voting.

Elkport, Iowa, April 1. — Even a flood that drove two-thirds of the residents of this village from their homes and put some of the houses under six feet of water, did not prevent the local election from being held. Rafts were used by the members of the opposing factions in order to reach the polls and register their votes in the spirited contest. These improvised crafts were rowed to the city hall and ladders were provided to reach the second story, where the polling booths were situated.

RESCUED FROM LIVING DEATH

AFTER BEING ENTOMBED TWENTY DAYS, THIRTEEN MINERS ESCAPE.

SEQUEL TO FRENCH DISASTER

MEN LIVE FOR MANY DAYS ON PUTRID HORSE FLESH IN TOTAL DARKNESS.

Lens, France, April 1. — The disaster at the Courrieres coal mines, by which 1,200 lives were lost, had a startling sequel yesterday when thirteen miners were taken out alive, after having endured twenty days of entombment. The story of the survivors discloses that they lived for many days on putrid horse meat amid total darkness and in the stench from scores of decaying corpses. The presence of human flesh would speedily have forced the starving men to the last desperate extremity if they had not been rescued.

The survivors were sturdy young miners, from seventeen to twenty-five years of age, except their leader, Henri Nemay, who is thirty-eight years old. All show of their experiences, being emaciated, exhausted and nearly blinded.

Their rescue caused a temporary nervous lucidity, during which they greeted their relatives and graphically related their sufferings. The doctors then enforced quiet upon them, fearing the results of fever and poisoning from their diet on decayed horse flesh.

There were touching scenes as wives and mothers greeted those whom they had long given up as dead. Crowds besieged the hospitals to which the men were taken, cheering the survivors and imprecating the ineffective salvage work that followed the disaster.

May Save Others.

The rescue of these thirteen men revived the hope that others are alive, and the relatives of those whose bodies have not been recovered clamorously demanded that efforts be redoubled to bring out any possible survivors.

There is a report that there were five others who came almost to the bottom of the pit yesterday, but were unable to continue on account of exhaustion.

The total number of men missing after the catastrophe was 1,212. The bodies recovered numbered approximately 500. The others are Still Unaccounted For.

The engineers explain that smouldering fires prevented them from exploring remote passages o fthe mine, where it was thought that there could be no survivors. The mine owners also claim that the strike reduced the number of available rescuers.

Many engineers and scientists agree that all in the mine must have died long ago. Engineer Laur, however, dissents, asserting that the salvage work has been deplorably inefficient, and he believes that scores died of exhaustion owing to the poor work of the salvage companies.

TAKES AMBASSADOR'S OATH.

Gen. Wright Will Sail for Japan on April 20.

Washington, April 1. — Luke E. Wright, former governor of the Philippines, became ambassador of the United States to Japan yesterday. He will sail for Japan from Seattle on April 29. Gen. Wright ceased to be governor of the Philippines by taking his new oath of office. Henry C. Ide, the present acting governor, will continue as such until April 2, when he will be inaugurated governor general. On Sept. 15 James F. Smith will succeed him.

PREVENT JEWISH MASSACRES

LEAGUE OF RUSSIAN WRITERS ISSUES APPEAL TO RUSSIAN PEOPLE.

St. Petersburg, April 1. — The League of Russian Writers has issued an appeal to the Russian people to unite in the name of their consciences and self-respect to prevent the Jewish massacres which, they claim, are beyond doubt being prepared in Southwestern Russia for Eastertide. The appeal says that it is not fancy but fact that the police and gendarmes are arranging to let loose the Black Hundreds upon the members of the helpless race. It recalls that the Kishineff, Gomel and Odessa anti-Jewish outrages were committed at the instigation of Minister of the Interior Plehve, Prefect of Police Neidhardt and Count Podgorichanie, chief of the Gendarme Rie of Gomel. Just as these St. Bartholemews were arranged by agents of the government, the appeal declares, the recent proclamations from the police master at St. Petersburg and the military staff at Odessa leave no doubt that the authorities are privy to the present propaganda.

MAY FLOOD WHOLE TOWN.

Broken Dam Causes Panic in Bellefontaine, Ohio.

Bellefontaine, Ohio, April 1. — The entire population of Lewiston, near here, was called out early last evening to help repair a break in the dam of the Lewiston reservoir which threatens to deluge the town. Danger, it is feared, is only temporarily passed, and there was no sleep last night for the residents of the place. A panic followed the news of the break, but the excitement was allayed when 500 men got to work and soon had the overflow under control.

FIGHTS HIS EXECUTIONERS.

Negro Murderer Delays Hanging by Resistance.

Towson, Md., April 1. — Isaac Winder, a negro, was hanged here yesterday for the murder of Frederick L. Rhinehart, an aged tollkeeper. When Winder was conducted to the scaffold he resisted the deputies who were pinioning his arms and a struggle ensued which lasted for ten minutes before he was overcome and the execution proceeded.

STRIKE CLUES IN MURDER MYSTERY

TEN MACEDONIANS ARRESTED IN DULUTH MAY KNOW SOMETHING OF CRIME.

ARRESTS DEEPEN MYSTERY

MINNEAPOLIS POLICE BENDING EVERY ENERGY TO CLEAR UP SEXTUPLE MURDER.

Minneapolis, March 31.—Ten Macedonians, recently from Minneapolis, were arrested in Duluth yesterday morning and are being held until the Minneapolis police can ascertain whether or not they knew or had anything to do with the murder of the six foreigners at 243 Tenth avenue south Tuesday night.

Kuzman Sokuloff, leader of the gang of which the six dead men were members, is considered the most important prisoner under arrest. From him was received the correct names of the murdered men as follows:

Nukola Jaless, Andri Jaless, Angelo Jaless, Thomas Jaless, Krispin Wuvkoss and Krivie Mitie.

Was Greatly Agitated.

Sokuloff was last seen by those who know him in this city last Monday afternoon, when he, his wife, his children and a number of his followers left the house at 243 Tenth avenue south to go to the depot to take a train for Duluth. At that time every member of the party seemed to be greatly agitated over something, and seemed anxious to get away as soon as possible. Persons living near by noticed this uneasiness, and have communicated with Chief Doyle.

The police of this city, assisted by the St. Paul police, are bending every energy to solve the mystery of the bloody crime.

Suspects in Duluth.

Duluth, Minn., March 30.—Instead of clearing the mystery of the murder of six Macedonians in Minneapolis, the arrest in this city yesterday of ten persons on suspicion has only deepened the mysteery, which has already disarmed the police.

It was supposed that those now in custody here were in some way connected with the crime, and the Minneapolis police asserted that the key to the mystery could be found in this city.

This suspicion was confirmed in a way during the later developments of the case last night, when it was learned by the police that were sold by the Kelly Hardware Co. of this city to foreigners one day last week. An employe of the company left last night for Minneapolis for the purpose of identifying the hunting knives found in the house of slaughter.

This is regarded by the Duluth police as one of the most important clues that has yet been struck and much will depend on the result, as it is known, and admitted by Sokuloff, the spokesman of the suspects, that he and several of his countrymen passed through the city last week on their way from Alborn, where they had been employed during the winter, for Minneapolis. Whether any of the persons besides Sokuloff were in the party at that time, or whether it was other members of the Macedonian colony at the Head of the Lakes, is not known.

"For persons detained on suspicion of a terrible crime," said Chief Troyer last night, "these foreigners, if guilty, have certainly proved themselves to be good actors.

"Acting on information received yesterday, we went to a lodging house at 723 1-2 West Superior street, and in a room packed with thirty foreigners, asked for a man and several of his friends who came from Minneapolis Monday. Sokuloff

Promptly Stepped Forward,

and in response to our demands told of eight others, the tenth man having left the building temporarily. He volunteered to assist us in finding this man, and accompanied Capt. Resche, identifying him on the street. They gave us all possible assistance in our search for information, conducted themselves quietly and made no protest whatever against the investigation. Sokuloff, the victims of the tragedy and twenty-two other countrymen, according to Sokuloff, have worked together for two years and were

The Best of Friends.

During the past four months the thirty, excepting the eight who arrived in Minneapolis Saturday from the old country, have been employed at Alborn. Sokuloff says he left the Alborn camp Tuesday of last week for Minneapolis. When he arrived he says the six victims were in the house that proved their tomb. They were with him at Alborn, but he declares he left that station two days ahead of the remaining members of the party and never saw them again until he met them in Minneapolis. For three days, then, sixteen of the Macedonians, including the victims, were together in the house of death.

CHANGES IN PROBATE LAW.

New Code Modifies Laws Pertaining to Estates.

The new code contains several modifications of the laws relating to the descent of property. One change is in relation to the descent of property from an unmarried man or woman, and another is the omission of the section governing the descent of property inherited from a parent upon the death of one of several children.

The probate code of 1889 contains this provision: "If the intestate leaves no issue nor husband nor wife his estate shall descend to his father." The next section provided that if the father is dead the property will descend to the mother.

Under the new code the property descends to the father and mother in equal shares, if they both survive the child. Section 3648 provides: "If the intestate leaves no issue nor spouse his estate shall descend to his mother and father in equal shares, or if but one survive then to such survivor." There is no change in the provision that in case neither the father or mother survives the property shall descend to the brothers and sisters in equal shares.

The old law contained this provision: "If any person dies leaving several children or leaving one child and the issue of one or more children and any such surviving child dies under age and not having been married, all the estate that came to the deceased child by inheritance from such deceased parent shall descend in equal shares to the other children of the same parent and to the issue of any such other children who have died by right of representation."

This section is entirely omitted in the probate laws contained in the new code. A case illustrative of this provision of the old law arose in the probate court in St. Paul last year, and resulted in the restitution to a child who had been deprived of her rights through an error in a decree of the probate court years ago.

The question arose upon a petition to have the final decree in the estate of Katherine Kenney vacated and corrected. Katherine Kenney was a daughter of Patrick Kenney, who died in 1886, leaving a widow and two daughters, Katherine and Mary. He was at the time of his death the owner of several lots, including one upon which the gas company's plant is located. When his estate was closed up the property was assigned to his widow and two daughters.

Katherine Kenney died at the age of thirteen years and in entering the final decree in her estate the court assigned her interest in her father's eestate to her mother. When Mary Kenney attained her majority this matter was investigated, and she applied to the court to have the decree in her sister's estate amended on the ground that under the law her sister's share inherited from their father should have been assigned to her instead of to their mother. This was done, after the supreme court had passed upon the question.

DENIES GRAFT CHARGE.

Former Chisholm Official Testifies at Duluth Trial.

The state, which accuses W. A Masters, former village recorder of Chisholm, o fsoliciting a bribe of $100 from D. D. Crowley of the Crowley Electric company for his (Masters') signature to a contract, has taken all the testimony of D. D. Crowley. County Attorney McClintock, who is trying the case before Judge Cant in the district court, has also introduced two letters written last summer by Masters, notifying Crowley that he would not sign the contract until "some matters" were adjusted.

Masters went on the witness stand and denied that he had ever asked Crowley for money. He said that the letters referred to violations of Crowley's contract with the village.

E. J. Matheson, who last summer was superintendent of the Crowley company's electric light plant at Chisholm, testified that Crowley, shortly before the session of the last grand jury, asked him to swear that he had given Masters $100. He also swore that Crowley had asked him, when he refused to do this, to testify that Crowley had given Masters the money.

Another point made by the defendant in his testimony was his statement that after March 2, Crowley told him that if he could get rid of Masters and Oscar Wilberg, trustees, he could make $2,000.

The Minnesota & International station at Funkley has been destroyed by fire, nothing being saved except a small quantity of freight. It is not definitely known how the fire originated, but it is thought to have resulted from a defective stovepipe. No estimate of the loss has been given.

Fire completely destroyed a dwelling house occupied by George Bauer, a farmer living near Jefferson. When the blaze was discovered the upper portion of the house was completely enveloped in flames, and it was impossible to cope with them.

The evangelistic meetings are still being conducted in the opera house at Sauk Center. Great interest is being taken. The saloons voluntarily close their bars every evening from 7 to 9 o'clock, and all other business places close early.

Erin Dunlap, a pioneer of Minnesota, died in Duluth at the age of sixty-six years. He served through the Civil war. Mr. Dunlap lived most of his life at Sauk Center, where his remains will be taken. His death occurred on the fortieth anniversary of his wedding.

Calumet Baking Powder

The only high grade Baking Powder sold at a moderate price. Complies with the pure food laws of all states.

Trust Baking Powders sell for 45 or 50 cents per pound and may be identified by this exorbitant price. They are a menace to public health, as food prepared from them contains large quantities of Rochelle salts, a dangerous cathartic drug.

An Honest Man—New School.

Cassius R. Peck, assistant United States district attorney of Oklahoma, at a banquet in Guthrie recently spoke on honesty.

"What are we coming to? Are we coming to such a pass that our ideas of an honest man will correspond with the idea of old Hiram Stroode?

"Hiram Stroode, for the seventh time, was about to fail. He called in an expert accountant to disentangle his books. The accountant, after two days' work, announced that he would be able to pay his creditors 4 cents on the dollar.

"At this news the old man looked vexed.

"'Heretofore,' he said, frowning, 'I have always paid 10 cents on the dollar.'

"A virtuous and benevolent expression spread over his face.

"'And I will do so now,' he resumed. 'I will make up the difference out of my own pocket.'"

Feminine Attraction.

Dolly—Yes, the prettiest girl in our Sunday school sold kisses at 99 cents each to help along the church fair. somehow the young men were shy about taking them at that price.

Dick—No wonder. You must have been trying to attract girls. Young men are not looking for 99-cent bargains.

His Opportunity.

"Now, wouldn't it be funny," remarked Popley, "if I were to become a little boy again?"

"Maybe it wouldn't be so funny for you, pa," replied his bright young son. "If you wuz to be littler'n me, pa, I think I'd square up a few things."

"What do you think of those new patent couplers?"

"Haven't paid any attention to them The old way of coupling with the aid of a minister and a prayer book is good enough for me."

"COFFEE JAGS."

The Doctor Named Them Correctly.

Some one said, "Coffee never hurts any one." Enquire of your friends and note their experiences.

A Phila. woman says:

"During the last 2 or 3 years I became subject to what the doctor called 'coffee jags' and felt like I have heard men say they feel who have drank too much rum. It nauseated me, and I felt as though there was nothing but coffee flowing through my veins.

"Coffee agreed well enough for a time, but for a number of years I have known that it was doing me great harm, but, like the rum toper, I thought I could not get along without it. It made me nervous, disordered my digestion, destroyed my sleep and brought on frequent and very distressing headaches.

"When I got what the doctor called a 'coffee jag' on, I would give up drinking it for a few days till my stomach regained a little strength, but I was always fretful and worried and nervous till I was able to resume the use of the drug.

"About a year ago I was persuaded to try Postum, but as I got it in restaurants it was nothing but a sloppy mess, sometimes cold, and always weak, and of course I didn't like it. Finally I prepared some myself, at home, following the directions carefully, and found it delicious. I persevered in its use, quitting the old coffee entirely, and feeling better and better each day, till I found at last, to my great joy, that my ailments had all disappeared and my longing for coffee had come to an end.

"I have heretofore suffered intensely from utter exhaustion, besides the other ailments and troubles, but this summer, using Postum, I have felt fine." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason.

Restaurant cooks rarely prepare Postum Coffee properly. They do not let it boil long enough.

INTRODUCING OURSELF.

In last week's issue the new editor the COURIER was introduced to the readers by Mr. King in almost too flattering a notice; this week it is his pleasure to introduce himself. Nothing in a personal way however, for if he is good for anything, the public will find it out soon enough; if he isn't, it will be found out altogether too soon.

No promises go with this introduction beyond the fact that the COURIER will be as Democratic as is necessary. Otherwise the new editor is in business for the same reason that any other man is and if he makes a failure of it, it is he who must bear the burden of failure.

IT will take more than thirty years to complete the Panama canal if all the work has to be done at Washington.

A. L. COLE of Walker is a candidate for governor. His right will probably be disputed only by the other candidates.

STATE TREASURER BLOCK would relieve an anxious constituency by at least admitting himself to be a "receptive candidate."

As a companion piece to "The Winning of the West" we hope the president can soon write "The Licking of the Senate."

All Run Down

THIS is a common expression we hear on every side. Unless there is some organic trouble, the condition can doubtless be remedied. Your doctor is the best adviser. Do not dose yourself with all kinds of advertised remedies—get his opinion. More than likely you need a concentrated fat food to enrich your blood and tone up the system.

Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil is just such a food in its best form. It will build up the weakened and wasted body when all other foods fail to nourish. If you are run down or emaciated, give it a trial: it cannot hurt you. It is essentially the best possible nourishment for delicate children and pale, anaemic girls. We will send you a sample free.

Be sure that this picture in the form of a label is on the wrapper of every bottle of Emulsion you buy.

GEORGE E. DUIS, independent candidate for mayor of Grand Forks, was elected Monday by 366 votes over the regular Republican nominee. It was followed by vast rejoicing by the residents of that city.

EDITOR A. N. Dare of the Elk River Star News was very tired last week and devoted half a column to saying nothing in defense of spring's enervating lassitude which seems to have pervaded every atom of his being.

THE insurance committee is not quite satisfied that Hamilton's "defi" closes the case. It finds half a million dollars unaccounted for on his own showing and challenges the statement that his expenditures were audited. And the end is not yet.

IT is hardly worth while to figure on what Baby Rockfeller will be worth fifty years from now. There is not a particle of doubt that he is worth more today than he ever will be again, and if anybody doubts it let him get an appraisement of the infant from his mother.

THE COURIER is grateful for the kindly greeting of its contemporary, the Gazette, and would assure its editor if days of controversy come, as so often do between papers of the same locality, there will be nothing of a personal animus on the COURIER's part. It will all be for the good of the public—the public is so apt to enjoy that sort of thing.

HAVING married another woman while daily expecting the death of his wife, who however did not oblige him, Millionaire Kiley of Brooklyn cannot now understand why the public should intrude into "private affairs of this nature." They fail to see that in Utah also. Likewise in Wall street. Indeed, it is understood that some horse thieves make the same complaint.

AN Omaha physician declares that out of 500 operations for appendicitis in Omaha hospitals in the past year not 10 per cent. were real cases. The appendicitis craze is in full swing but, he says, the profession is not entirely blamable, as "the people demand operations." "The people" have a constitutional right to know what is going on inside of them, and the surgeons have a certain curiosity, about it, too.—Exchange.

DULUTH gets the republican state convention and it will be held there June 13. The county conventions will be held one week earlier, June 6. There will be 1,090 delegates, based on the average vote cast for candidates on the state ticket in 1904. A new departure will be the incorporation in the call of a statement that the convention will indorse a candidate for United States senator for the legislature to elect next winter.

WINTER ECZEMA SKIN HARD AND DRY

Some skin diseases are active in Summer, while others wait until cold weather to manifest themselves. Winter Eczema sleeps in the system through the long hot months, and gives no sign of its presence; but at the coming of Winter the trouble asserts itself and it becomes one of the most painful and distressing of all skin diseases. The blood is filled with poisonous acids which seem to be excited by the cold; and as these are thrown off through the pores and glands, the skin cracks and bleeds, the flesh becomes hot and feverish and the itching intense. The natural oils which keep the skin soft and pliant are dried up by the cold, bleak winds, causing it to become hard and dry, giving it that shiny, leathery appearance, characteristic of the disease. The head, face, hands and feet are the usual points of attack, though other parts of the body may be affected. So painful and distressing is the trouble that the sufferer constantly "doctors" and treats it trying to get relief. Soothing washes, medicated ointments and salves are used, but aside from giving temporary relief they do no good. The cause is poisonous acids in the blood, and these must be removed before a cure can be effected. The only cure for Winter Eczema is S. S. S., the greatest of all blood purifiers. It cleanses the entire blood supply of the acrid poisons and sends a fresh, healthy stream to the diseased skin, healing and softening it and curing the painful, itching eruptions. S. S. S. enters the blood and purifies it of all waste and foreign matter, and cures Winter Eczema—or Tetter as it is sometimes called—safely as well as surely; besides it does not contain any harmful mineral to derange or damage any part of the system. Book on Skin Diseases and any medical advice you need, free.

John A. Duffy returned yesterday from the sorrowful duty of burying his father, John Duffy, who died last Thursday at the home of another son, William D., at Washburn, Wis. The late Mr. Duffy was 73 years of age and the cause of his death is given as heart failure. He left surviving him six sons and a daughter; John A. Duffy of this city, Edward P. and Martin of Aitkin, William D. of Washburn, James P. of Superior and Andrew C. of Wilcox, Arizona, and Mrs. Louis Kaufer of this city. Not expecting the death, Mrs. Kaufer returned from Washburn just before her father died. An unusual feature of the funeral obsequies was that the six sons acted as pallbearers. The funeral was held at Washburn Sunday and the remains taken to Monroeville, Ohio, where they were buried beside those of his wife. Mr. Duffy had frequently visited in Red Lake Falls and made many friends here who sympathize with the mourners in their loss.

A hundred children are being drilled by their teachers and the performance will be given either April 27 or May 5.

An ice gorge in the Clearwater river has been an interesting sight this week both an account of its proportions and the imminent danger for a brief time to the several bridges crossing the stream. The principal cause of the gorge was the going out of the ice in the Clearwater before it had started in the Red river. The Clearwater ice had cut a channel across the Red river and piled itself high on the opposite shore, in places being ten feet higher than the surface of the Red. The jam then extended up the Clearwater to the bridge at the main street crossing. For a time Monday afternoon there was grave danger to the Klondike bridge, the water being so high that it covered the road approach but it quickly subsided. So far the dam in the Red river has suffered but little from the floating ice.

The Athenian program given in the evening of last Friday that the business men of the city might have an opportunity to attend, drew an audience that made necessary the use of the "S. R. O." sign and a remarkably clever program it was too. Miss Ina Linnihan's reading, "Sunnys Christening;" Roy Blake's recitation, "Devotion to Duty;" Miss Rebecca Hunt's original story, "Trials of a Freshman;" the Quartotte's song and encores; Ralph Healy's piano solo; Miss Elenore Hanson's parody on Longfellow's Song of Life;" Miss Clara Rue's original story, Miss Violet's Dinner Party;" Miss Segred Anderson's recitation; Miss Geshilda Schlesinger's, "A Summer's Vacation in Upsidedownville;" and Miss Lizzie Casserly's newspaper, "The Athenian Howler," were all better than well done and each in turn evoked immense applause.

Or the Trials of a Spanish Girl.

By SEWARD W. HOPKINS.

Copyrighted 1900 by Robert Bonner's Sons.

Don Juan set out at a gallop. He had not traveled more than a mile when he saw before him a hut, with a large white rock in front of it. At the door of the hut stood the horse of Gomez.

Leaping from his horse, Don Juan tied him to a tree and crept cautiously forward toward the hut.

It was a rude habitation, made of logs, the crevices partly filled with mud. The sounds of voices at ordinary tones inside could be easily heard by a listener outside.

Don Juan applied his ear to a convenient crack.

"I say you lie!" her heard the voice of Gomez say. "She is here."

"Senor is mistaken, came a voice in Spanish. The Indians of the Spanish-American countries early learned to use the language of their conquerors. "There is no one here."

"You lie, I tell you!" exclaimed Gomez. "Mattazudo took a girl away from the castle and brought her here. I learned of it, and came at once to take her away. She is to be my bride."

"Men do not steal their brides now," replied the Indian.

"I did not steal this one. I tell you I know she is here. Mattazudo stole her from the castle and brought her here. I know this, I tell you, and if you do not give her up it will be bad for you."

"I am an old man, senor. You may kill me, if you will. I am powerless against an army. My friends are not your friends. The friends of the republic are mine, and they are defeated."

"What do I care about all that? I did not ask for your friendship. I want that girl."

"She is not here, senor."

"She is here, Mattazudo told me she was here."

"You are not wise to believe the words of Mattazudo. The half-breed has a lying tongue and crafty mind. If he has taken the girl away, he has put her where you cannot find her."

"I will find her."

"I hope so senor. I would not wish she would remain in the hands of Mattazudo. He is a devil of cruelty, and knows no law but his own passions. He would not bring the girl here, for he knows I would protect her. He is my enemy—I am his."

"I must find her. If she is lost to me, I will kill the half-breed."

"He should have been killed long ago, senor."

"You swear you have told me the truth?" "I swear it, senor."

"You swear you have not seen the girl? Repeat it after me."

"Senor, you are wasting time. I know nothing. I swear I have not seen the girl."

"Then let Mattazudo beware."

Gomez rushed from the house, mounted his horse and rode away.

Don Juan did not seek to stop him. The old Spaniard was bewildered by what he had heard. While it was evident that Gomez knew that Lola had been taken away from the castle, he had said nothing to indicate that her abduction was at his own bidding.

Fortunately Gomez did not ride toward Don Juan's horse.

Garza returned to the castle reaching it before Gomez. He went directly to Philip.

"Well? said the pretender, eagerly, rising to his feet.

"I have not found her," said Don Juan, fiercely, "but I know the name of the scoundrel who took her away."

"Name him."

"Mattazudo, the half-breed.

"Ah! tell me all that you have learned."

Don Juan related what had taken place at the Carib's hut.

"Has Gomez returned?" asked Philip.

"No, but Mattazudo is in the castle."

"Then send for Mattazudo."

The orderly was called in.

"Tell the half-breed who commands the Zambos to come here," said Philip.

In obedience to the summons Mattazudo came swaggering in.

"Scoundrel!" exclaimed Don Juan, springing toward him.

The half-breed looked in astonishment from Garza to Philip.

There was no mistaking the expression on either face.

"Senors, you amaze me," he said. "What have I done that you are angry with me?"

"You stole my daughter from the castle and carried her away," said Don Juan. "You need not lie. I know all."

Mattazudo seemed even more surprised.

"I—I—am bewildererd, senor," he said. "I took your daughter away, it is true, but Gomez—surely you knew all about it."

"What do you mean?"

"I mean that I did nothing more than carry out your commands."

"My commands. For Heaven's sake speak plainer! My commands. What commands?"

"Your command, senor, to take your daughter to a place of safety until after the battle."

"A place of safety? In Heaven's name what place could be as safe as this castle? I gave no such command. What do you mean?"

"You gave no such command, senor? Surely you or Gomez must be mistaken."

"How? Gomez? What about Gomez?"

"Gomez came to me and said: Mattazudo, Don Juan Garza is anxious for the safety of his daughter. We do not know how strong the force of Salvarez may be. He may retake the castle, and the girl must not be exposed to the passions of victorious soldiers. Do you know of a safe retreat near this place?' 'None nearer than a mile,' I answered. 'The hut of the Carib Ramana.' 'Take her there,' he said. 'Tell her that Don Juan, her father, is in command of a portion of the army and cannot come to her.' He commanded me to do this senor, and I did. She followed me, and I took her to Ramana's hut."

"You lie!" cried Don Juan, beside himself. "I have been to the Carib's hut. Gomez was there. He demanded my daughter of the old Carib, but the Indian swore that she had not been brought there."

"You heard that, senor?"

"I did. I missed my daughter, and knew that some foul fiend had taken her away. Gomez left the castle, and I followed him. I heard his conversation with the Carib. He cursed because my daughter was not there, and swears vengeance on you."

"On, me, senor? Gomez has tricked us both. His command to me was a lie to get the girl out of the castle. But he tricked you more shrewdly still."

"Tricked me?"

"Tricked you, senor; he and Ramana. You saw his horse. You crept to the hut. You made no allowance for Gomez keeping a watch for pursuers. You heard him curse because the girl was not in the house. But did you go inside?"

"Go—inside? What do you mean?" gasped Don Juan.

"I mean senor, that if you had gone inside, perhaps you would have found your daughter. I took her to the Carib's hut. Gomez went there to get her. He saw you coming. He and Ramana quarreled to trick you. You saw him ride away. You did not wait to see him come back. For proof, senor, where is Gomez now?"

Don Juan turned to Philip with a white face.

"Have I been so stupid?" he asked.

"The mistake can be remedied," said Philip. "Mattazudo, you thought you obeyed Gomez before. Obey me now. Take some of your brave Zambos with you, go to the Carib's hut and bring back Don Juan's daughter. Go. Your life depends on it."

CHAPTER IX.

The Sliding Panel.

"Well, we are here," said Tempest, standing with the lantern in his hand.

"We own the caverns, what are we going to do with them?"

"The first thing," said Medworth, "is to destroy this powder train, and take precautions that the magazine is not blown up while we are in here."

They spent a half hour at this work, and when they considered the magazine safe, they began an examination of their surroundings.

Not far from the powder magazine they found a rude stone stairway running from a central position in the cellar to an abrupt termination against a wooden door, what seemed to be one at the top.

Upon examining the wall at the top, they found that what had seemed to be a door had no knob, and no apparent way of opening it.

"This door, if it is a door," said Tempest, "was never made to open."

"There must be a secret spring," said Medworth. "Surely the stairs are not here for nothing. If force cannot open the door let us look for a spring."

They began a careful examination of the surface of the door, and the walls around it, going over every inch with their finger ends, Tempest holding the lantern to facilitate the search.

"Ha! Here is something," said Medworth. "A button."

He pushed, pulled and twisted this, but to no purpose.

"I am convinced that this button opens the door," he said. "Now, while I manipulate it, you push the door. It may be out of order."

He tried again, and Tempest, putting his strength to the door, had no difficulty in opening it.

"Now be careful," said Medworth.

They passed through the open door, and found themselves in a narrow passage, entirely destitute of furniture, and perfectly dark save for the rays of the lantern.

There was no other door to this place than the one they had come through, but at the other end they found what seemed to be a panel in the wall. From the side they were on it could be easily noticed, and Medworth marveled that the trick was not more skillfully done.

He placed his hand on this panel, and pushed it. It slid noiselessly to the left.

Before them was a large, sumptuously furnished library, the table of which was strewn with papers and maps, and the air heavy with tobacco smoke, though no person was visible. A lamp shed a gloomy sort of light over the apartment. After making themselves certain that there was no one in the room, Medworth and Tempest went in.

There was a door opening from this room into a wide hall. Peering out into this, they saw, at the further end, a sentinel standing, leaning on his gun.

Medworth now examined the sliding panel. He found that, rude as the contrivance was on the other side, here it was a most carefully executed thing. It was simply one of any number of panels that ornamented the walls of the room, and when closed could not be detected as different in its construction from any of the others.

Medworth counted them, and found that the sliding panel was the fifth from either end, being exactly half way.

They would have turned their attention to other things, but hearing footsteps they sprang into the hiding-place and closed the panel.

They distinctly heard two men enter the room.

Bending down, Medworth applied his ear to the panel to listen to what was said.

"It is a strange—a most inexplicable thing, Garza," he heard some one say "I confess I do not understand it."

"Your majesty," was the reply, and Medworth's heart throbbed as he recognized the voice of the father of the girl he loved, "as for understanding it, believe me, I have not been near that point. My heart is bursting with grief. It was a dastardly crime. A crime for which the criminal must die when I learn his name."

"It is still doubtful, then, whether Gomez or Mattazudo is lying."

"It is almost a certainty that neither is telling the truth."

"Strange. You say you rode to the Carib's hut with Mattazudo?"

"Straight from your presence. You commanded Mattazudo to find and return my daughter, and it must be said, in all truth, that he seemed at least to be sincere in his effort. We went to the Carib's hut. We found the old Indian there. Mattazudo at once commanded him to deliver up the girl that he, Mattazudo had brought there under a misunderstanding. The Carib smoked calmly on and asked how many more were coming for a girl he had never seen. Mattazudo threatened to shoot him, but nothing could move the old Indian. I pleaded with him. I besought him with all the energy of a broken-hearted father to restore my daughter to me, but he still claimed he had not seen her. Mattazudo told me that Ramana was a friend of Gomez, and no doubt had agreed to keep silent. The only way, of course, was to get the truth out of Gomez. When we returned to the castle I taxed Gomez with the crime; but without waiting to deny it, he sprang upon Mattazudo with drawn sword, and would have killed him, had not some of the Zambos been standing near to interfere. Then, to me, Gomez denied all knowledge of my daughter, and says the story of Mattazudo is a lie. Now, what am I to believe? Only one thing is certain—that my poor girl is stolen from me, and I would give my life to know she was safe."

The old Spaniard had not left the room before two silent figures crawled stealthily away from the sliding panel and down under the foundations again to lay their plan of action.

Game of Bowls Revived.

There are signs and symptoms of a revived interest in the game of bowls, one of the oldest outdoor pastimes in England. In its heyday bowls ran archery very closes—so close, indeed, that in the interests of national defense it was deemed essential to discourage the game. Thus it was, probably, that the pastime came to be looked upon as having something of an illicit character, and for a time was more or less associated with houses of entertainment which were not always of the best repute. But, in spite of the ban of bygone centuries, the bowling green has survived, more especially in the north of England and in Scotland. Nor can there be any more delightful game than bowls for a summer evening, more especially for those who have attained to an age when such lively physical exertions as are involved by cricket and tennis become a little unwelcome.

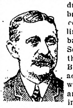
He Was the Hotel Echo.

A guest of one of the hotels at a certain mountain resort took a notion oneday to climb to the top of the nearest hill. Having reached that point, he was astonished to find there an old man sitting on a rock, with a pair of field glasses in his hand, through which he looked at short intervals, and after each look he would whoop and halloo at the top of his lungs. "What in the world are you doing?" asked the tourist, approaching the old man. "Don't talk to me, sir, if you please," answered the old man; "if you do, you'll take my attention, and I'll lose my job. I'm the Echo at the Mountain House, down there, and I have to watch for my time to come in."

Japanese Emperor's Salary.

The emperor of Japan has an allowance something like $2,000,000 a year to keep up the imperial establishment. He has also a large private fortune, having invested in stocks and real estate. At the close of the Chinese-Japanese war Parliament voted his majesty 20,000,000 yen (an amount equal to 10,000,000 gold dollars) out of the indemnity paid by the Chinese as a mark of gratitude for his direction of the naval and military operations.

Weak arguments are often thrust before my path; but although they are most unsubstantial, it is not easy to destroy them. There is not a more difficult feat known than to cut through a cushion with a sword.



A COLD BROUGHT IT ON.

Severe Congestion of the Kidneys Soon Cured by Doan's Kidney Pills.

Richard M. Pearce, a prominent business man of 231 So. Orange St., Newark, N. J., says: "Working nights during bad weather brought on a heavy cold, aching of the limbs and pain in the back and kidneys. Severe congestion of the kidneys followed. Besides the terrific aching there were whirling headaches, and I became exceedingly weak. My doctor could not help me, and I turned to Doan's Kidney Pills, with the result that the kidney congestion disappeared and, with it, all the other symptoms. What is more, the cure has lasted for eight years."

Tess—The idea! Weren't you indignant?

Jess—I should say I was. When a man promises anything he ought to keep his word.

The Curse of Shiftlessness.

Whether shiftnessness is a vice that is incurable or a habit that can be overcome, it is, anyhow, a condition that perplexes and irritates relieving officials. Shiftlessness is paying one's last 50 cents for a circus ticket without learning where to-morrow's breakfast is coming from. It is a refusal to repair the leak in the roof when the sun shines. It is killing the goose that lays the golden eggs. It takes no thought of the sorrow. It never lays up anything for a rainy day. It always ignores opportunities. It prefers to rely on neighborhood bounty to hustling for itself. It won't work except under the pressure of necessity. It never gets ahead.

Not Going to Roll 'Em Home.

A newsboy walked into a drug store and said to the clerk: "Gimme a half-dozen quinine pills."

The clerk thought he would have a little fun with him and said: "Do you want them in a box?"

The newsboy replied: "Aw, what you think, I'm goin' to roll 'em home?"

Right.

Irate Wife—I want to know, sir, what time it was when you got home last night!

Husband (meekly)—A quarter of twelve, my dear.

Irate Wife—Twelve nothing! The clock had just struck three and—"

Husband (triumphantly)—Well, ain't that a quarter of twelve?—Judge.

King's Sporting Record.

Few people are aware that there are hardly any wild beasts that come within the sportsman's category that have not fallen to King Edward's rifle. But he has never shot a hyena, though when in Egypt, many years ago, he remained up all night on more than one occasion to kill a specimen.

Presence of Mind.

The audience was at the bated breath period.

Suddenly was heard an ominous crackling.

Incipient panic reared its horrid head.

At this instant the heroine advanced to the edge of the stage and glanced toward the gallery.

"No," she said, as she glanced down the column of marriage notices, "it cannot be true that marriage is a lottery."

"And why not?" queried the young man in the parlor scene.

The Coffee Debate.

The published statements of a number of coffee importers and roasters indicate a "waspy" feeling towards us for daring to say that coffee is harmful to a percentage of the people.

A frank public discussion of the subject is quite agreeable to us and can certainly do no harm; on the contrary when all the facts on both sides of any question are spread before the people they can thereupon decide and act intelligently.

Give the people plain facts and they will take care of themselves.

We demand facts in this coffee discussion and propose to see that the facts are brought clearly before the people.

A number of coffee importers and roasters have joined a movement to boom coffee and stop the use of Postum Food Coffee and in their newspaper statements undertake to deceive by false assertions.

Their first is that coffee is not harmful.

We assert that one in every three coffee users has some form of incipient or chronic disease; realize for one moment what a terrible menace to a nation of civilized people, when one kind of beverage cripples the energies and health of one-third the people who use it.

We make the assertion advisedly and suggest that the reader secure his own proof by personal inquiry among coffee users.

Ask your coffee drinking friends if they keep free from any sort of aches and ails. You will be startled at the percentage and with very naturally seek to place the cause of disorder on something aside from coffee, whether food, inherited tendencies or something else.

Go deeper in your search for facts. If your friend admits occasional neuralgia, rheumatism, heart weakness, stomach or bowel trouble, kidney complaint, weak eyes or approaching nervous prostration induce him or her to make the experiment of leaving off coffee for 10 days and using Postum Food Coffee, and observe the result. It will startle you and give your friend something to think of. Of course, if the person is one of the weak ones and says "I can't quit" you will have discovered one of the slaves of the coffee importer. Treat such kindly, for they seem absolutely powerless to stop the gradual but sure destruction of body and health.

Nature has a way of destroying a part of the people to make room for the stronger. It is the old law of "the survival of the fittest" at work, and the victims are many.

We repeat the assertion that coffee does harm many people, not all, but an army large enough to appal the investigator and searcher for facts.

The next prevarication of the coffee importers and roasters is their statement that Postum Food Coffee is made of roasted peas, beans or corn, and mixed with a low grade of coffee and that it contains no nourishment.

We have previously offered to wager $100,000.00 with them that their statements are absolutely false.

They have not accepted our wager and they will not.

We will gladly make a present of $25,000.00 to any roaster or importer of old-fashioned coffee who will accept that wager.

Free inspection of our factories and methods is made by thousands of people each month and the coffee importers themselves are cordially invited. Both Postum and Grape-Nuts are absolutely pure and made exactly as stated.

The formula of Postum and the analysis made by one of the foremost chemists of Boston has been printed on every package for many years and is absolutely accurate.

Now as to the food value of Postum. It contains the parts of the wheat berry which carry the elemental salts, such as lime, iron, potash, silica, etc., etc., used by the life forces to rebuild the cellular tissue, and this is particularly true of the phosphate of potash, also found in Grape-Nuts, which combines in the human body with albumen and this combination, together with water, rebuilds the worn-out gray matter in the delicate nerve centers all over the body and throughout the brain and solar plexus.

Ordinary coffee stimulates in an unnatural way, but with many people it slowly and surely destroys and does not rebuild this gray substance so vitally important to the well being of every human being.

These are eternal facts, proven, well authenticated and known to every properly educated physician, chemist and food expert.

Please remember we never say ordinary coffee hurts everyone.

Some people use it regularly and seem strong enough to withstand its attacks, but there is misery and disease in store for the man or woman who persists in its use when nature protests, by heart weakness, stomach and bowel troubles, kidney disease, weak eyes or general nervous prostration. The remedy is obvious. The drug caffeine, contained in all ordinary coffee, must be discontinued absolutely or the disease will continue in spite of any medicine and will grow worse.

It is easy to leave off the old-fashioned coffee by adopting Postum Food Coffee, for in it one finds a pleasing hot breakfast or dinner beverage that has the deep seal brown color, changing to a rich golden brown when good cream is added. When boiled long enough (15 minutes) the flavor is not that of rank Rio coffee but very like the milder, smooth and high-grade Java, but entirely lacking the drug effect of ordinary coffee.

Anyone suffering from disorders set up by coffee drinking (and there is an extensive variety) can absolutely depend upon some measure of relief by quitting coffee and using Postum Food Coffee.

If the disease has not become too strongly rooted, one can with good reason expect it to disappear entirely in a reasonable time after the active cause of the trouble is removed and the cellular tissue has time to naturally rebuild with the elements furnished by Postum and good food.

It's only just plain old common sense.

Now, with the exact facts before the reader, he or she can decide the wise course, looking to health and the power to do things.

If you have any doubt as to the cause of any ache or ail you may have, remember the far-reaching telegrams of a hurt nervous system travel from heel to head, and it may be well worth your while to make the experiment of leaving off coffee entirely for ten days and using Postum in its place.

You will probably gather some good solid facts, worth more than a gold mine, for health can make gold and sickness lose it. Besides there's all the fun, for it's like a continuous internal frolic to be perfectly well.

There's a reason for

AMERICAN WOMEN FIND RELIEF

The Case of Miss Irene Crosby Is One of Thousands of Cures made by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

How many women realize that it is not the plan of nature that women should suffer so severely.

Miss Irene Crosby

Thousands of American women, however, have found relief from all monthly suffering by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it is the most thorough female regulator known to medical science. It cures the condition which causes so much discomfort and robs these periods of their terrors.

Miss Irene Crosby, of 313 Charlton Street, East Savannah, Ga., writes:

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a true friend to woman. It has been of great benefit to me, curing me of irregular and painful periods when everything else had failed, and I gladly recommend it to other suffering women."

Women who are troubled with painful or irregular periods, backache, bloating (or flatulence), displacement of organs, inflammation or ulceration, that "bearing-down" feeling, dizziness, faintness, indigestion, nervous prostration or the blues, should take immediate action to ward off the serious consequences, and be restored to perfect health and strength by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and then write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for further free advice. She is daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham and for twenty-five years has been advising women free of charge. Thousands have been cured by so doing.

Visiting Nephew—It seems to come natural, somehow. I've had a good deal of practice with a fountain pen.

A Gentle Reprimand.

"It's much easier to talk than to listen, isn't it?" grinned the man who had monopolized the conversation for two hours.

"I don't know," replied the girl, archly; "it's a long time since I've had the chance to find out."

Provoking.

"A girl with pretty ankles has a hard time of it," observed the home-grown philosopher.

"As to how?"

"The main time she wants to wear her nice open-work stockings is on a rainy day, and then like as not her mother won't let her."

A Misanthropic Opinion.

"Aren't you ambitious to achieve fame?"

"Not at all," replied Mr. Cumrox. "Fame is merely an invitation to the entire public to gossip about you."

Transvaal Climate.

One peculiarity of the Transvaal climate is that, while being very healthy, it yet has the effect of making people appear far older than they really are. The rarified air is popularly supposed to be responsible for this.

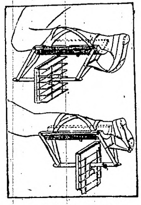
SHOWING THE WORLD'S PROGRESS

Measuring Sea Depths by Electricity.

For ascertaining the depth of the sea without the use of the sounding lead or other devices, the Norwegian engineer, Berggraf, has invented a unique method. He sends sound waves perpendicularly into the water and measures the time they require to return to the surface after having been reflected from the bottom of the sea. The speed of the sound in water being known, the length of the space passed through is immediately determined; one-half of it is the depth of the water. The device consists of a transmitter, a receiver and a timepiece. The electro-magnetic transmitter sends to the bottom of the sea a series of deep sounds, which, upon their return, are taken up by the microphone. A listening device or receiver reproduces the sounds. Naturally, the sound is exceedingly weak upon its return, so that it is hardly preceptible, but it is rendered distinctly audible by the vibration of the receiver or ear-piece reinforced by a sounding tube.

To Aid the Swimmer.

A recent invention of a Canadian will be of interest to those who delight in swimming. It is an attachment which, being worn by the swimmer, will facilitate his progress in the water by affording him an enlarged area with which to push himself forward. In the illustration it is shown attached to the leg of a swimmer, although it can be modified to fit arms also. The operation will be obvious. The device consists of an open rectangular framework, within which are suspended a series of light vanes hinged along one edge of the open framework in such a manner as to be susceptible of setting themselves with the current of water going through them as the legs are drawn forward or bent for the stroke. During the back stroke or thrust the vanes will close and form a plane normal to the movement of the limb. A framework of vanes of this kind is supported from each limb of the swimmer, to which it is secured by bands or straps, certain portions of the frame being made buoyant to an extent sufficient to sustain the weight of the device in the water. This constitutes the primary element of the attachment, the form and manner of the attachment being modified to the requirements of arm and leg. To supplement the leg movement with the instep action of the foot, the vane frame is pivoted to the leg attachment by a system of parallel links, which link motion is connected by a light rod to the toe of a sandal or shoe on the foot. The feet, instead of acting merely as paddles, are utilized to impart considerable muscular power to propel the body forward, the legs being kept merely far enough apart to avoid striking the frames together.



To Facilitate Progress.

Substitute for Platinum.

Charles H. Birmingham, a Baltimore man, announces that he has discovered a substitute for platinum. The American Inventor describes the new metal as grayish white, with about the same specific gravity and atomic weight as platinum has. It is malleable and ductile.

As platinum is at present worth $23 an ounce and as only 1,600 ounces were imported to this country last year the discovery, it is declared, will prove most valuable to electricians, machinists, chemists and dentists, as an unlimited quantity can be manufactured in a short time, and the price an ounce will be at least cut in two.

Coldest Place on Earth.

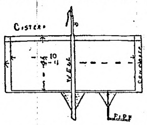
Where is the coldest place in the world? W. N. Shaw some time ago placed the region of lowest temperatures of the northern hemisphere in a great oval of land surface in Siberia. At Werchojansk a temperature as low as 69.8 degrees centigrade below freezing has been registered. But this has now been matched by the Russian artist Borrisoff in Nova Zembla. During an excursion to the straits of Matouchin he found in an explorer's cache a box containing two thermometers for recording maximum and minimum temperature. It is supposed that they belong to Hofer, the Austrian geologist who made an expedition to this spot in 1872. One of the thermometers registered 15 degrees as the maximum and the other registered the minimum of 70 degrees below freezing. This value would be the lowest temperature experienced during the last thirty years.

WATER FOR HOUSE AND STABLE

Plan Whereby Single Well May Do for Both.

To supply both the house and stable with water it is very often necessary to have two separate wells. If the distance is not too great and the house stands on higher ground, a single well may serve for all purposes. The plan illustrated here provides for the building of a concrete reservoir around the house well and the laying of a pipe which will carry the water to the stable on the lower level. To find how much fall there is, take an ordinary spirit level and place it level on the place for the cistern, then sight over the level to the place where the water is to be carried. The depth of the cistern must be governed somewhat by the fall.

In the accompanying diagram it will be seen that the cistern is placed around the well. This is a four inch well with a steel casing. Where the fall and other conditions make it possible this will be found the best location, it is out of the way and the cover serves as a well platform. No force pump is needed to fill it.



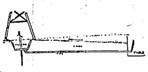
If the well happens to be at the foot of a hill a cistern can be built upon the side of the hill and the water forced into it. The pipe that is used to fill it with may also be used to empty it.

In constructing a cistern the first and most important is the digging of the hole. Great care must be taken to make it perfectly round and smooth. It is best to dig the hole nearly the size wanted and then finish it later when there is less danger from soiling the edge. The bottom should be left as nearly level as possible; a little lower at the outlet.

After the hole has been dug a frame must be put in to hold the soft concrete in place until it has hardened. To make this frame, dig a little ditch around in the bottom of the cistern about six inches from the outside and set the bottoms of the frame board in it. A frame to hold the top of the boards in place can be made of short boards trimmed so that when the ends are nailed together they will make a circle. Put this frame in about two-thirds of the way up from the bottom. When this has been well braced it is ready for the concrete.

The best brands of cement should be used. The sand should be clean and sharp and free from all foreign matter. The gravel should not be coarse; the largest stones being not over two and one-half inches in diameter.

In mixing concrete for general use, the following proportions are perhaps best. One part of cement to three parts of sand and five parts of gravel.



Underground Pipe to Supply Stable.

For best results mix the gravel and sand together and then part of the mixture into the motar box, then put in some cement, more sand and gravel, more cement, and so on until the desired amount has been mixed. Add water enough to make it a rather thin mortar, then shovel into the frame. Do not mix up a very large amount at once.

When within four inches of the top the cover joists should be imbedded in the cement of the side walls, making the wall level with the top of the joists.—Montreal Herald.

Fillers in Concrete Wall.

1. How much Portland cement, stone and gravel will be required to build a 9 foot wall 70 feet by 35 feet. 2. Which is the best wall, the one built of gravel and cement alone, or the one containing cement, gravel and stone filler, and why?

It would take Portland cement 69 barrels, gravel 82 yards, stone fillers 21 yards. 2. A concrete wall built with gravel and cement, without using stone fillers is a good wall, but where stone fillers are to be had, it is policy to use them, for when they are thoroughly bedded in the concrete they do not weaken the wall and by using them there would be a great saving of cement. One-fifth of the wall can be fillers and in a wall two feet thick even more fillers can be used with safety. The above estimate is based on one-fifth fillers and figured solid, so whatever openings are in the wall are to come out of these figures. A barrel of Portland cement mixed eight parts gravel to one part cement with stone fillers will build forty cubic feet of wall.

World's Biggest Bridge.

The biggest bridge in the world is to be in Quebec. The Quebec cantilever bridge now building over the St. Lawrence river will have a single span of 1,800 feet. The Williamsburg suspension bridge over the East river has a span of 1,600 feet, only five feet greater than that of the Brooklyn bridge. Aside from suspension bridges, whereof these are the greatest, there is the Forth railway bridge with two spans of 1,710 feet each.

Picked Up a New One.

"Patching and darning, as usual, are you?" said the caller.

"Yes," answered Mrs. Lapsling. "I tell Samuel I save him a good deal of money by being so mendacious."

"How do you do?" said Miss Gaddie, who had just opened a millinery establishment. "Did you know I was interested in business just now?"

"Why, yes," replied Miss Knox, "I supposed you were, as usual, but I didn't know whose."

Longest Bridge in the World.

The longest bridge in the world is that crossing the Danube at Czernavoda, with a length of 12,705 feet; followed next by the Galveston bay bridge, in Texas, with 11,197 feet. The Firth of Forth bridge, near Queenspring, in Scotland, ranks eighth, and the Brookly bridge ninth.

A CURE FOR DEBILITY

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills A Reliable Remedy for the Weak, Ailing and Bloodless.

When the body is weak and the blood thin it is sometimes difficult to find the cause unless a wasting illness has preceded, or the sufferer happens to be a girl on the verge of womanhood.

Obscure influences, something unhealthful in one's surroundings or work, may lead to a slow impoverishment of the blood and an enfeeblement of the whole body. When a serious stage has been reached there seems to be nothing that will account for it.

Mr. C. E. Legg, of Tipton, W. Va., has found a successful method of treating weakness and bloodlessness. He says:

"I used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for weakness caused by a lingering malarial fever that began in the spring of 1896. The worst effects of this were indigestion and a bad state of my blood. I was anæmic, as the doctors say. People generally would say that I didn't have blood enough, or that I didn't have the right kind of blood; mine was too thin. My kidneys and liver were out of order. I was badly annoyed by sour risings from my stomach. There was a good deal of pain, too, in my back and under my right shoulder blade."

"How long did these troubles last?"

"For over two years. For four months of that time I was under the care of a physician, but his medicine did me no good. Meanwhile I learned of the cures that had been wrought by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

"You owe your cure to these pills?"

"I certainly do, and I also know that they are helping others to whom I have recommended them. They have real merit and I know of nothing that would take their place."

The Wrong Inference.

Prof. Barrett Wendell of Harvard lightened with an anecdote an English lecture.

"There was a certain instructor," he said, "who was always impressing upon his students the need of perspicuity.

A young man came to him one day to get back an essay that had been submitted.

"'A very good essay,' said the professor, as he returned the paper, 'but, Mr. Smith, you should write always so that the most ignorant person can understand every word you say.'

"The young man looked up anxiously.

"'What part of my essay was not clear to you, professor?' he asked."

Considerate Daughter.

A certain young man told his best girl the other night that if she didn't marry him he'd get a rope and hang himself right in front of her house.

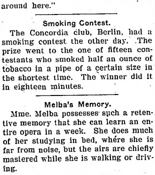
"Oh, please don't do it, Harry," she said. "You know father has always said he doesn't want you hanging around here."

Smoking Contest.

The Concordia club, Berlin, had a smoking contest the other day. The prize went to the one of fifteen contestants who smoked half an ounce of tobacco in a pipe of a certain size in the shortest time. The winner did it in eighteen minutes.

Melba's Memory.

Mme. Melba possesses such a retentive memory that she can learn an entire opera in a week. She does much of her studying in bed, where she is far from noise, but the airs are chiefly mastered while she is walking or driving.



Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

Is a powerful, invigorating tonic, imparting health and strength in particular to the organs distinctly feminine. The local, womanly health is so intimately related to the general health that when diseases of the delicate womanly organs are cured the whole body gains in health and strength. For weak and sickly women who are "worn-out," "run-down" or debilitated, especially for women who work in store, office or schoolroom, who sit at the typewriter or sewing machine, or bear heavy household burdens, and for nursing mothers, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has proven a priceless benefit because of its health-restoring and strength-giving powers.

As a soothing and strengthening nervine, "Favorite Prescription" is unequaled and is invaluable in allaying and subduing nervous excitability, irritability, nervous exhaustion, nervous prostration, neuralgia, hysteria, spasms, chorea, or St. Vitus's dance, and other distressing nervous symptoms commonly attendant upon functional and organic disease of the womanly organs. It induces refreshing sleep and relieves mental anxiety and despondency.

Cures obstinate cases. "Favorite Prescription" is a positive cure for the most complicated and obstinate cases of "female weakness," painful periods, irregularities, prolapsus or falling of the pelvic organs, weak back, bearing-down sensations, chronic congestion, inflammation and ulceration.

Dr. Pierce's medicines are made from harmless but efficient medical roots found growing in our American forests. The Indians knew of the marvelous curative value of some of these roots and imparted that knowledge to some of the friendlier whites, and gradually some of the more progressive physicians came to test and use them, and ever since they have grown in favor by reason of their superior curative virtues and their safe and harmless qualities.

Your druggists sell the "FAVORITE PRESCRIPTION" and also that famous alterative, blood purifier and stomach tonic, the "GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY." Write to Dr. Pierce about your case. He is an experienced physician and will treat your case as confidential and without charge for correspondence. Address him at the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., of which he is chief consulting physician.

TERRIBLE SCALP HUMOR.

Badly Affected With Sores and Crusts —Extended Down Behind the Ears —Another Cure by Cuticura.

"About ten years ago my scalp became badly affected with sore and itching humors, crusts, etc., and extended down behind the ears. My hair came out in places, also. I was greatly troubled; understood it was eczema. Tried various remedies so called, without effect. Saw your Cuticura advertisement, and got the Cuticura Remedies at once. Applied them as to directions, etc., and after two weeks I think, of use, was clear as a whistle. I have to state also that late last fall, October and November, 1904, I was suddenly afflicted with a bad eruption, painful and itching pustules over the lower part of the body. I suffered dreadfully. In two months, under the skillful treatment of my doctor, conjoined with Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, I found myself cured. H. M. F. Weiss, Rosemond, Christian Co., Ill., Aug. 31, 1905."

Tough.

"That steak looks pretty thin to me," observed the customer, who was watching the butcher cut it off.

"Wait till you bite into it," said the butcher, "and you'll think it's thick enough!"

That a teacher in our public school asked a class to construct a sentence containing the words "bitter end" and the most startling result was from a small boy who wrote "Jones' cat ran under our porch and my dog bit her end."

That a story is going the rounds to the effect that one of Thief River Falls' young married women went into a local hardware store the other day and asked to buy some sauerkraut, spinach and succotash seed. The hardware dealer sold her some bird seed and she is going to try and raise popular songs this summer.

That the story is told of how Oliver Wendell Holmes, who was a very large man, was to deliver a lecture at the celebrated Dartmouth college. A few hours before the lecture it was found impossible for Holmes to meet his engagement and Rufus Choate consented to lecture in his stead. On his way Choate, a small man, met a friend who said, "I understand you are going down to fill Holmes place." "Fill it!" ejaculated Choate, "I am going down to wiggle around in it for a little while." And that's the way the new editor of the COURIER feels in regard to the position so successfully occupied by John King in the past.

Durum (Macaroni) Wheat.

Jordan Independent: Durum wheat, perhaps better known among the farmers as macaroni wheat, is something that might profitably engage the attention of the agriculturists as seed time approaches. There is no need for this paper to enter into a discussion of the subject beyond making the above suggestion. Durum wheat has been talked for some years and has many friends. Its points of advantage or disadvantage as compared with the ordinary winter wheat, fife or bluestem are better known to most of our readers than they are to the writer of those lines.

But we belive it would be well for all grain raisers to look into the Durum wheat matter. The chief difficulty with this kind of grain in the past has been the difficulty of finding a market for it. At the present, Europe, ever on the alert for breadstuff, offers a market for a considerable quantity of this kind of wheat. The main obstacle in the way of finding a market for Durum in the past has been the difficulty of milling it. But now practical millers and mill machine manufacturers are turning their attention to the problem, so it may be a short time until flour from Durum wheat will be ground with no greater difficulty than flour from the ordinary wheat. When this time comes, there will be a market for Durum at every elevator.

Visiting Day for Parents.

The teachers of the several grades have displayed in their rooms samples of the work their pupils have been doing during the year. This work is not work done simply for exhibition but is taken from the regular written work of the year, some of it chosen because it was especially good and some because it was especially poor. It will be displayed so as to show the improvement of the pupils, and so that it can be easily and rapidly inspected.

The buildings will be opened and warmed on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday of next week. We hope the parents and all interested in our schools will visit the buildings on both sides of the river and see for themselves just what is being done. You can aid your pupils and us greatly by so doing. Do not let the week go by without seeing the display. —E. W. Chamberlain

A business man of N. Y. who has devised a plan for attaching a fifth wheel to his automobibile ,which with felt letters on its rims prints his name on the asphalt pavement every time it revolves, was called down. As the whitewash is not fed regularly to the wheel, the result is frequently a long white smear and caused the street cleaning department to serve a notice of warning on the novel advertiser. Every business man and everybody else ought to know the value of golden grain belt beer. It is an ideal family beverage pure delicous and nourishing. Its regular use is a health insurance. TWENTY-FOUR YEARS AGO

Items Taken From the Red Lake Falls Era, July 13, 1882.

Adolf Reichel has been appointed postmaster at La Fountain, this county.

The Catholic church is being painted this week, and adds much to the beauty of the structure.

The residence of Mr. H. B. Kaufer is nearly completed. Mr. H. B. Kaufer will soon have his family here, and be numbered among our permanent residents.

On Tuesday last Mr. Ernest Buse sold his dwelling to James Walters Mr. Buse will soon commence the erection of a new residence on his beautiful grounds.

Dr. Lemieux has purchased the first four lots of block one, in the new addition of Champagne & Dow to Red Lake Falls. Consideration, $400. The docter intends to build a residence thereon.

Work on bridges across the Red Lake and Clearwater rivers is progressing favorably. When completed they will be of incalculable value to the village and farmers in the surrounding country.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George LaBissoniere, of Red Lake Falls, fifteen years of age died on Saturday, the 8th. inst., at Winnepeg, of erysipelas. Her remains were buried in the Catholic cemetery in this village,

For the benefit of those who have business on either side of the river, the ferry across the Red Lake river has been made free until the bridges are completed. This is a good move in the right direction and meets with hearty approval by the people. Red Lake Falls is destined to become the great milling, manufacturing and commercial center of the Northwest. Its large number of magnificant water-powers, the vast pine and other timber adjacent, and the unsurpassed farming and stock-raising country surrounding the place, are the reasons put foward by all. The faith that exists is confirmed by the rapid manner in which lots are being sold.

Dr. John Watson, of Minneapolis is in the village, and is so highly pleased with the bright prospects here that he thinks of locating among us, and enter the practice of his profession. The Dr. is an intelligent and entertaining gentleman, and would be a valuable acquisition to the town

Order for Hearing Proof of Foreign Will.

STATE OF MINNESOTA } ss
County of Red Lake }
IN PROBATE COURT
Special Term, March 19, 1906.

In the matter of the Estate of Norman Perry Hall, deceased:

Whereas, certain writings purporting to be duly authenticated copies of the last will and testament of Norman Perry Hall, late of Cook county, Illinois, deceased, and the probate thereof in the Probate Court of Cook county, state of Illinois, have been delivered to this Court:

And, whereas, George Morinville has filed therewith his petition, representing among other things that said Norman Perry Hall lately died in said county of Cook, state of Illinois, testate, possessed of certain real estate, situated in said county of Red Lake, and that said petitioner is owner of said lands hereinbefore described, situated in Red Lake county, Minnesota, and praying that the said instrument may be admitted to probated, and that letters of administration, with the will annexed, be to C. R. Middleton issued thereon:

It is Ordered, that the proofs of said instrument, and the said petition, be heard before this Court, at the Probate Office in said county, on the 14th day of April, 1906, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, when all persons interested may appear for or contest the probate of said instrument:

And it is further ordered, that notice of the time and place of said hearing be given to all persons interested by publishing this order once in each week, for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in the Red Lake Courier, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Red Lake Falls in said county.

Dated at Red Lake Falls, the 19th day of March, A. D. 1906.

WOULD FORM A LEAGUE

Talking of a Base Ball League in Which Red Lake Falls is Mentioned.

Grand Forks Herald: The proposition for a Red River Valley Baseball league, to include East Grand Forks, is meeting with great favor in the cities of the valley and it seems to be a certainty. The situation in E. Grand Forks is very favorable and there is no question about this city being in it. A meeting of representatives of the different towns will probably be held in a week or so to make the final arrangements. Jean Kellher is hustling here to secure a team.

Al Thief River Falls Manager Murphy of the local baseball organization is ready to come into the league at any time, having his team about completed.

At Warren O. L. Tar alseth is canvassing the situation, and Warren will have a delegate at the next meeting, here next week, and will probably get a very stong team together.

At Red Lake Falls Harry Healy and Ernest Buse are interested in the project, and are being given every encouragement by the business men.

At Argyle Henry Tiedt is getting busy and will canvass the situation before the meeting here next week and report progress.

Stephen and Ada have been communicated with, but the status of things in these two towns cannot be learned for a few days yet. The business men of the various towns, however begin to realize that their particular town would suffer a black eye without a ball team in the valley league, and it is expected that every lively town will be in the game when the time comes.

School Exhibit.

The exhibition of work done by the pupils of the public schools during the year has not attracted the attention it ought to. The schools were open to visitors Tuesday and while the attendance on the north side was quite gratifying, there were but two visitors among parents at the high school building. The work itself is really excellent, well worth seeing by those who are interested in what their children are accomplishing in an educational way. Nicely contrated as it is, the work of the first part of the year and the better efforts of recent days, it shows an improvement creditable alike to teachers and pupils. The schools are open today and will be open again Saturday to all who care to make the visit.

Wild Flowers.

Yellowstone is truly one of the "Seven Wonders." As a place of grandeur and scenery it is unsurpassed by the famous Alps. Wild flowers abound there in great profusion.

In order to furnish the public with a souvenir within reach of all, the Northern Pacific railway has prepared a dainty publication, containing twelve specimens of some of the most beautiful wild flowers within the park, which have been pressed and nicely mounted in portfolio form.

This magnificent souvenir, which also contains six full page halftone illustrations, will be mailed prepaid upon receipt of 50c.

CONSTRCTION OF PUBLIC DITCHES

Viewers of County Ditch No. 25 Have Filed Their Report With County Auditor.

New Hearing to be Had on Judicial Ditch No. 5—Hearing on No. 4 Saturday.

In the matter of the petition of P. A. Eckstrom and others for a public ditch in Red Lake county, known as County Ditch No. 25, the board of viewers, composed of Gilbert Hoovi, Ingvald Husby and Otto Zaiser, has completed its labors and made its report, which has been filed with the county auditor.

The total estimated benefits of the ditch are given as $11,293.59 and the total estimated cost of construction, including the damages awarded at $6,389.74.

The ditch will commence at the unmeandered lake in the northern part of section 29 in Sanders township and run southeast to the section line between sections 28 and 29; thence south to the dividing line between Sanders and Black River townships; thence directly west to the Black river. The course is approximately seven miles long.

Four townships are affected by estimated benefits and damages as follows: Sanders, damages $140, benefits $205; Black River, damages $86.77, benefits $140; Polk Center, damages $76.77, benefits $290; Bray damages $76.77, benefits $250.

The number of acres in the four towns above mentioned estimated to be benefitted, and covering practically all the land within a mile on either side of the ditch, is 8,470.42 and is owned by 68 individuals. In only one or two instances are any damages assessed and the total amount of such damages is only $75.

The matter will probably be taken up for consideration by the board of county commissioners at their next regular meeting, which will be May 7.

Judicial Ditch No. 5.

In the hearing at Erskine last Saturday before Judge Watts on Judicial Ditch No. 5, there were 144 opposed to construction and 49 in favor. Judge Watts said that with such a large majority in opposition he would not uphold the construction. A call for a new hearing has been ordered on the ground that the one Saturday was illegal in that the original papers and orders were improperly drawn. The next hearing will not be had until late in the fall and perhaps not until next year.

Judicial Ditch No. 4.

A hearing on Judicial Ditch No. 4 will be held at Crookston next Saturday. It has been dragging along during the past two years but unless there is an overwhelming majority against it there is every reason to believe that its construction will be ordered.

PAY FOR COUNTY COMMISSIONERS

Attorney General Renders Opinion In Interpretation of the New Code.

Draw Slated Salary and Mileage for Not to Exceed Six Meetings a Year.

To county commissioners and to those who may be thinking of becoming candidates for the offices at the next election, the opinion of the attorney general on the subject of the commissioners' compensation under the new code, may not be uninteresting. The opinion has been issued in circular form to county auditors.

The salary is fixed at $100 a year and the code being silent as to the time of payment, this compensation may be paid quarterly or monthly or at such other times as may be agreeable to the officials directly interested. They are entitled to ten cents mileage for each mile "necessarily travelled in attending the meetings of the board, or in discharge of official duties under the direction of the board; but no commissioner shall receive mileage for attending more than six meetings of the board in any official year." In travelling to and from the county seat to sign warrants the chairman of the board is not entitled to mileage or additional pay of any kind.

The chairman of the county board is entitled to a per diem of $3 for his services as a member of the board of auditors, and that each member of the board of county commissioners is entitled to a per diem of $3 and mileage for attendance upon the meetings of the board of equalization.

Automobile Borax Train.

Borax is now hauled out of Death Valley in an automobile train. Formerly trains of 20 mules each had to do this work and their suffering was terrible. The sand cut into the skin like amonia and the heat is almost more than man or beast can bear. Now the driver of the automobile train sits in a glass cage and the heat is his only discomfort, A crew of four men do the work of twelve hundred mules and two hundred drivers at an annual saving of $100,000. The automobile which used to be a luxury has now become a necessity. Among the necessities of life is golden grain belt beer. It is a necessity to health, strength and happiness. Order of your nearest dealer or be supplied by Alex Thompson, Crookston.

St. Hilaire and Plummer, Too.

There is some talk of St. Hilaire and Plummer taking a hand in the county seat scrap snd making an attempt to steal the cheese while the cats are fighting. We only hope that Rhoda and Highlanding will not get mixed up in the muss, as that would bring us in and as we have had several years hard drilling on county seat scraps (and got the worst of it at last by his 'onor the supreme court,) we would prefer to go way back and sit down and let others have all the honor and glory they can get out of it.—Sunbeam.

TEACHERS ELECTED FOR COMING YEAR

All of This Year's Corps Were Chosen by the Board Without Exception.

The Board Also Gives a Small Raise in Salary to All But Two.

The teachers of the public schools having served during the present year, have all been re-elected by the board of education which held a meeting for the purposes of election last Saturday night. In all but two instances the teachers will receive an increase in salary. The two exceptions are are Mrs. J. J. Doe and and Miss Ellen B. Brady who are now receiving the limit for the grades they are teaching. The teachers and the salaries they will receive for next year are as follows:

	Salary	Increase
E. W. Chamberlain, Supt ...	$ 1150 00	$50.00
Eila C. Hanson, Principal...	70 00	5 00
Alice Coughlin..............	50 00	2 50
Ada E. Foote	47 50	2 50
Mrs. J. J. Doe............	50 00
Ellen B. Brady...........	50 00

Eliza M. Trudo..........	50 00	2 50
H. I. Tonning...........	57 50	2 50
Grace S. Allen..........	55 00	5 00

The last three mentioned were reelected without having made application for the positions and it is doubtful if they will remain. Particularly Miss Allen who will visit Europe this summer and does not expect to return in time for the opening of school.

ARE YOU TO SOW FLAX?

Minnesota No. 25 Flax Yields 26 Per Cent More Than Common Varieties.

The new vatiety of flax originated by the Minn. Experiment Station in cooperation with the U. S. Dept., of Agriculture, and distributed in 1905 to the farmers of Minnesota, has proven a very valuable variety for Minnesota. A pamphlet recently issued by the Experiment Station giving the results of the 1905 tests, shows this new flax to have yielded 3.1 bushels or 26 per cent. more than the common varieties grown by the farmers. These figures are based on the results of tests reported by 48 farmers in different sections of the state, who grew this flax and their common varieties under similar conditions.

Every bushel of the flax grown in 1905 should be used for seed in 1906. Every farmer who is raising flax should get some seed of this variety and increase his yield, for an increase of 26 per cent. is certainly worth while. It means a much larger increase in profits for the cost of growing is exactly the same.

The reports also show the new flax to be from five to ten days earlier than common varieties, which gives a considerable advantage in escaping damage from various sources, and in getting ahead of the weeds.

For a portion of the land sown to grain, flax is probably as profitable a crop as can be grown. That is, it yields as much in money value per acre as does any of the grain crops. Twine is now being made of flax straw which promises to make a market for considerable of this otherwise waste product.

Flax should not be grown on the same piece of ground oftener than once in seven years to ten years. If this precaution is taken there will be but little danges from flax wilt. Flax is an especially desirable crop to grow on late spring breaking. This will always make it a favorite crop where it is desired to leave the grass land for fall and spring pasture and break it up in June for a crop the same year.

There are over four thousand bushels of Minn. No. 25 flax available for seed in Minnesota. It has been grown by farmers in nearly every county in the state, and is offered by them for sale at reasonable prices. A card to the Experiment Station will bring you a list of farmers who have seed of this variety for sale.

Fully 10,000 people witnessed the hanging of Tom Young in Williamson county, thirty miles north of Austin, Tex. The execution occurred on the open prairie and the spectators came from a radius of fifty miles, hundreds being there with their families in wagons. Young was convicted of assaulting and murdering a sixteen-year-old girl whom he had adopted.

Unless Gov. Cummins commutes the sentences of Louis Busse and E. Ames Smith, under sentence of death April 20, they must hang. The legislative board of pardons decided that it could do nothing in the matter, leaving it entirely in the hands of Gov. Cummins. Both are wife murderers.

Charles C. May, former president of the Big Bend National bank of Davenport, Wash., was sentenced to serve five years in the penitentiary. He was convicted of making false reports. He will be released on $5,000 bonds pending an appeal.

Casualty List.

The steamer Kaministiki, lying at her docks at Port Arthur, Ont., was burned to the water's edge. The loss will be fully $12,000.

The buildings on the state convict farm in Rankin county, Mississippi, were partially destroyed by fire, causing a loss of about $75,000.

DOWIE STORMS LIKE CAGED LION

APOSTLE HURLS MAD CURSES AND THREATS AT HEADS OF REBELS.

RENOUNCES WIFE AND SON

SAYS MASS OF MEMBERSHIP IS LOYAL AND TALKS OF ARMED WARFARE.

San Luis Potosi, Mex., April 8.—Full of unholy anger at the way things are going in Zion City, uttering frantic denunciations of Overseers Granger and Voliva, threatening vengeance and retaliation toward every deserter of his cause, and renouncing both his son and wife for their wavering in the hour of need, John Alexander Dowie reached here last night.

He is apparently in the best of health, eats heartily and seems in every way vigorous enough to make a fight for his rights when he finally arrives in Zion City. In the meantime he is storming like a caged lion.

Too nervous to be seated for one minute, he constantly paces up and down his state room, muttering to himself, or shouting his threats to John A. Lewis, manager of the Mexican colony, who accompanies him.

Renounces His Kin.

When seen, Dowie said:

"Granger and Voliva are bewitched by the devil. Evil spirits possess them and they are in danger of hell fire. I have called down upon their unworthy heads the wrath of Almighty God, and he will accomplish their downfall. My wife has gone over with the devil-charmed deserters, as has my son, in defiance of every commandment of God and man. I have renounced them, and repentance in sackcloth and ashes alone can secure forgiveness."

Talks of Armed Warfare.

Dowie was almost too angry to talk of business affairs. But when questioned closely, he said:

"I cancelled the power of attorney held by Voliva on Saturday. Every step he has taken has been illegal. I will regain every dollar of my property. I have every confidence that the great mass of membership of the Church of Zion is loyal to their apostle, and with the chosen one of God to lead them will even bear arms in the righteous cause, if necessary. I will come into my own and, as God's chosen hand, deal out vengeance to the unworthy."

Dowie's legal advisers are en route from Chicago and probably will be with the apostle to-night. When he can be quieted he dictates to Mr. Lewis the plans he expects to adopt, but the details of these he will not divulge. But it is certain that if his presence does not rout his enemies, a bitter legal battle will at once be begun.

Can Prove Charges.

Chicago, April 8. — In an interview last night General Overseer Voliva, who has supplanted Dowie at Zion City, said that when the former leader of the Christian church arrived he would be accused of the following:

Extravagance of the most shameful kind; misrepresentation; exaggeration; mismanagement; polygamous teachings in private; tyranny; injustice and indiscretion.

Dowie will be treated fairly, according to Overseer Voliva, and will be given every opportunity to reply.

Voliva stated he had abundant proof to substantiate everything that has been charged against the deposed leader of Zion.

CONVICTED OF THEFT.

Prominent Real Estate Man of Stevens Point.

Stevens Point, Wis., April 8.—R. H. Butterfield, a prominent real estate man and politician, was yesterday convicted of burglary on evidence of convicts in the state prison. The charge was that he stole a tract index worth thousands of dollars from the abstract office of Robert McDonald, to drive out competition, through Alfred Roe and Thomas Young, now serving sentences. He hired them to do the stealing, they said.

Aids Montana College $100,000 Endowment Fund.

Deer Lodge, Mont., April 8.—Word has been received here that Andrew Carnegie has subscribed $25,000 toward the $100,000 endowment fund being raised for Montana college. This makes $50,000 already subscribed, Dr. D. K. Pearson of Chicago having given $25,000. The college authorities are confident that the entire sum will now be raised before fall.

Superior, Wis., April 8.—John D. Shanahan yesterday tendered his resignation as a member of the Wisconsin Grain commission to Gov. Davidson. The [illegible] Kimball [illegible] He has been indorsed by the Duluth and Superior boards.

FUGITIVE MURDERER CAUGHT

WOMAN HUNTING FOR EGGS MAKES DISCOVERY THAT IS WORTH $500.

Hayfield, Minn., April 8.—Frank McVey, confessed murderer of Marshal Ole Havey of this city, who escaped from the Mantorville prison on Thursday after being sentenced to Stillwater prison for life, was captured last night by E. B. Scripture, a farmer who lives between this city and Dodge Center.

Mrs. Scripture went out to the barn to gather eggs last evening about 6 o'clock. She saw something move under the hay in the loft and at once went out and called the hired man and several neighbors.

McVey surrendered without a struggle. He was hatless and his clothes were torn to pieces.

Scripture telephoned the county attorney and was told to take McVey to Mantorville immediately. The prisoner was taken under a strong guard to the county seat.

Frank McVey was indicted on Wednesday by the grand jury for murder in the first degree. The prisoner was immediately arraigned and by stipulation he pleaded guilty to murder in the second degree and was sentenced by Judge Buckham to Stillwater for life.

A reward of $500 will be paid to Scripture, the prisoner's captor.

HUNTING ACCIDENT FATAL.

Accidental Discharge of Gun Kills South Dakota Man.

Britton, S. D., April 8. — Corval Spencer, aged twenty-three years, was shot and killed accidentally while hunting geese in a slough twelve miles west of Britton. Spencer and Roy Duffy had gone to the slough at night with guns and lanterns and had succeeded in killing a number of geese. While picking the birds out of the water, Spencer handed his gun to Duffy, when it was discharged and the shot tore a great hole in Spencer's breast, just over the heart. The wounded man was removed to his home, where he died shortly afterward.

RICH GIRL BEGS IN STREET.

Marinette Lass Refuses to Quit Mendicant Life.

Marinette, Wis., April 8.—Although her parents are well-to-do and give her a pleasant and comfortable home, Cora Liptak, twelve years old, seems determined to become a professional mendicant. Three times has she run away from home and three times been arrested for begging and sent back to Marinette. Yesterday she was arrested at Oconto after she had received considerable money from charitable people to whom she told a pathetic tale about being a poor orphan. She has been brought back to her home here.

DENIES HE'S DEAD.

Man Disproves Second Identification of Dead Highwayman.

Butte, Mont., April 8.—Apparently positively identified as Herman Bransfield, the highwayman who was shot and killed by Chief Deputy John Wyman a short time ago has been buried in a nameless grave. The real Bransfield saw in the papers that he was supposed to be dead and took immediate steps to show that the statement was incorrect. This is the second time the dead bandit seemingly has been identified, and the authorities decided to bury the body without waiting further.

COW ITCH MAN AGAIN IN TOILS.

Is Charged With Getting Money Under False Pretenses.

La Crosse, Wis., April 8.—Leo Moseley, who was recently tried and acquitted at Viroqua on the charge of having sprinkled "cow itch" on the floor of a hall where dancing was in progress, much to the subsequent discomfiture of the dancers, has been arrested here on a charge of obtaining money under false pretenses. The "cow itch" episode, which occurred at Baraboo, is said to have cost Moseley his position as a traveling salesman.

GIRL FALLS ON PITCHFORK.

Tines Pierce Her Side and Death May Result.

Erskine, Minn., April 8. — While playing about the barn with a number of companions, the six-year-old daughter of J. Bradltey, living near here, fell upon the upturned prongs of a pitchfork. The tines of the implement entered her right side and inflicted serious injuries and there are grave fears for her recovery.

Hangs With Apron Strings.

Green Bay, Wis., April 8. —Presumably prompted by family troubles, John J. Lewandowsky, aged thirty-three years, hanged himself with his wife's apron strings.

Pinned Down by Rocks.

Lead, S. D., April 8.—Thomas Griffin, a Homestake employe, was seriously injured while working on the 700-foot level. A large mass of rock pinned him down for an hour and a half before he could be released.

State's Money Up.

Stillwater, April 8.—The state has deposited $14,500 here as the purchase price of the site for the new prison. The citizens' committee is helping to make out deeds and the entire transaction will soon be closed.

MINERS OFFER TO ARBITRATE

IF OPERATORS ACCEPT 160,000 MEN WILL RETURN TO WORK AT ONCE.

MAY FLATLY REFUSE OFFER

PROPOSITION COMES AS A GREAT SURPRISE TO THE MINE OWNERS.

New York, April 7.—The hard coal miners of Pennsylvania yesterday proposed to the operators that all disputes be referred to arbitration, the tribunal to be composed of the board of conciliation, created by the anthracite strike commission in 1903, with Judge George Gray of Delaware, or any person he may appoint, as chairman and umpire. If the operators accept and a convention of mine workers approves the plan the 160,000 men now idle in the anthracite fields will return to work at once.

Comes as Surprise.

While it had been reported for several days that the miners might ask that the differences be arbitrated, the proposition was a great surprise to the mine owners, as they did not believe the union leaders were ready to leave the controversy to a third party at this time.

That the operators will accept the miners' proposal as submitted is not generally believed. In fact it is intimated they may flatly refuse the offer on the ground that existing conditions are the result of arbitration. The employers promised to give President Mitchell and his men an answer on Monday, when another meeting of the two subcommittees will be held.

Operators May Not Accept.

Philadelphia, April 7. — In the anthracite region the arbitration proposition of the miners is regarded in varying lights. Those operators who could be induced to venture an opinion expressed the belief that it will not be accepted. Various reasons for its rejection are advanced, one being the disinclination of the operators to leave the solution of technical mining problems to an umpire who might prove incompetent. "Judge Gray may be all right, but some one else may be all wrong," was the way one operator expressed it.

Situation Is Unchanged.

The situation in the coal fields remains unchanged. Occasional disturbances are reported, but they are inconsequential. As a result of the attacks made on the breaker of the Fernwood colliery, the Erie company, which owns the land occupied by the mine workers, has ordered them to vacate the property. The miners are said to have shot out nearly every window in the breaker.

Is Becoming Normal.

Pittsburg, April 7. — Gradually the situation in the soft coal fields is becoming normal, especially in the Pittsburg district. Forty-three of the mines of the Pittsburg Coal company are in operation, and with the adjourning of the district convention here yesterday it is expected that within a few days more all miners in this district will be busy. Twenty-two companies have signed the scale.

Independents May Weaken.

The independent operators who on Tuesday night formed an organization against the granting of the scale will hold another meeting to-night, and it is expected that they will decide to sign. Several of the independent companies which refused to join the others Tuesday signed the scale yesterday. News from other sections of the bituminous fields is of an encouraging nature.

DOESN'T WANT A CITY OFFICE.

Gen. Chaffee Prefers Not to Serve Under McClellan.

New Orleans, April 7.—Gen. A. R. Chaffee yesterday afternoon denied positively that he was to accept a position in New York.

"I have not received an offer of a public office and do not care for office under Mayor McClellan's administration," he said yesterday.

Gen. Chaffee is here with Mrs. Chaffee and their daughter, Miss Helen, after a pleasure trip to Cuba and Mexico.

MORE ST. LOUIS LOTS SINK.

New Strip Has Sunk Four Feet in Twenty-Four Hours.

St. Louis, April 7.—The area of the sinking ground in the southwestern part of the city is extending. A strip of ground extending through the yards of three residences sunk four feet yesterday. The cause has not yet been explained.

WANTS HEAVY DAMAGES.

Suit for $100,000 for Alleged False Arrest of Lawyer.

Lexington, Ky., April 7.—A suit for $100,000 damages was filed here by Clyde Shropshire, an attorney of this city and vice consul to Paris under the Cleveland administration, against the Fayette National bank for false arrest on a forgery charge. Shropshire was arrested at the bank's instance on an allegation that a note for $400, signed by his wife. He denies this.

A bulletin issued by the department of commerce and labor shows that the trade of the United States with Mexico in the fiscal year 1905 aggregated in value $92,[illegible],000, as compared with $[illegible] in 1895 and $[illegible] in 1885.

President Roosevelt was asked to give his interest and support to an international exposition in Tampa, Fla., in January, February, March, April and May of 1908, to commemorate the beginning of the Panama canal. The president was not enthusiastic.

Complete reorganization of the coast artillery and the separation of the field and coast artillery is contemplated in a bill by Representative Hull of Iowa, chairman of the house committee on military affairs, introduced at the request of Secretary Taft and the chief of staff, Lieut. Gen. Bates.

Foreign Notes.

Mrs. Roosevelt, accompanied by her children, Ethel, Archie and Quentin, arrived at Havana last week on board the Mayflower.

The Russian consul at Seistan, Persia, reports that owing to the riots there quarantine regulations are no longer enforced and that the plague is increasing and spreading northward.

Sad news from India says that, owing to the failure of rain, crops are in such bad condition that a famine is imminent. Already the price of corn has risen, and in some districts there is no fodder for the cattle.

Chicago, April 8.—In an interview last night General Overseer Voliva, who has supplanted Dowie at Zion City, said that when the former leader of the Christian church arrived he would be accused of the following:

Extravagance of the most shameful kind; misrepresentation; exaggeration; mismanagement; polygamous teachings in private; tyranny; injustice and indiscretion.

Dowie will be treated fairly, according to Overseer Voliva, and will be given every opportunity to reply.

Voliva stated he had abundant proof to substantiate everything that has been charged against the deposed leader of Zion.

CONVICTED OF THEFT.

Prominent Real Estate Man of Stevens Point.

Stevens Point, Wis., April 8.—R. H. Burchfield, a prominent real estate man and politician, was yesterday convicted of burglary on evidence of convicts in the state prison. The charge was that he stole a tract index worth thousands of dollars from the abstract office of Robert McDonald, to drive out competition, through Alfred Roe and Thomas Young, now serving sentences. He hired them to do the stealing, they said.

Aids Montana College $100,000 Endowment Fund.

Deer Lodge, Mont., April 8. — Word has been received here that Andrew Carnegie has subscribed $25,000 toward the $100,000 endowment fund being raised for Montana college. This makes $50,000 already subscribed, Dr. D. K. Pearson of Chicago having given $25,000. The college authorities are confident that the entire sum will now be raised before fall.

QUITS GRAIN COMMISSION.

Shanahan Resigns and Kimball Is Named on Badger Board.

Superior, Wis., April 8. — John D. Shanahan yesterday tendered his resignation as a member of the Wisconsin grain commission to Gov. Davidson. The governor has nominated Byron Kimball of this city for the position. Kimball is now assistant secretary and chief weighmaster. He has been indorsed by the Buffalo and Superior boards.

FTGITIVE MURDERER CAUGHT

WOMAN HUNTING FOR EGGS MAKES DISCOVERY THAT IS WORTH $500.

Hayfield, Minn., April 8.—Frank McVey, confessed murderer of Marshal Ole Havey of this city, who escaped from the Mantorville prison on Thursday after being sentenced to Stillwater prison for life, was captured last night by E. B. Scripture, a farmer who lives between this city and Dodge Center.

Mrs. Scripture went out to the barn to gather eggs last evening about 6 o'clock. She saw something move under the hay in the loft and at once went out and called the hired man and several neighbors.

McVey surrendered without a struggle. He was hatless and his clothes were torn to pieces.

Scripture telephoned the county attorney and was told to take McVey to Mantorville immediately. The prisoner was taken under a strong guard to the county seat.

Frank McVey was indicted on Wednesday by the grand jury for murder in the first degree. The prisoner was immediately arraigned and by stipulation he pleaded guilty to murder in the second degree and was sentenced by Judge Buckham to Stillwater for life.

A reward of $500 will be paid to Scripture, the prisoner's captor.

HUNTING ACCIDENT FATAL.

Accidental Discharge of Gun Kills South Dakota Man.

Britton, S. D., April 8. — Corvel Spencer, aged twenty-three years, was shot and killed accidentally while hunting geese in a slough twelve miles west of Britton. Spencer and Roy Duffy had gone to the slough at night with guns and lanterns and had succeeded in killing a number of geese. While picking the birds out of the water, Spencer handed his gun to Duffy, when it was discharged and the shot tore a great hole in Spencer's breast, just over the heart. The wounded man was removed to his home, where he died shortly afterward.

RICH GIRL BEGS IN STREET.

Marinette Lass Refuses to Quit Mendicant Life.

Marinette, Wis., April 8.—Although her parents are well-to-do and give her a pleasant and comfortable home, Cora Liptak, twelve years old, seems determined to become a professional mendicant. Three times has she run away from home and three times been arrested for begging and sent back to Marinette. Yesterday she was arrested at Oconto after she had received considerable money from charitable people to whom she told a pathetic tale about being a poor orphan. She has been brought back to her home here.

DENIES HE'S DEAD.

Man Disproves Second Identification of Dead Highwayman.

Butte, Mont., April 8.—Apparently positively identified as Herman Bransfield, the highwayman who was shot and killed by Chief Deputy John Wyman a short time ago has been buried in a nameless grave. The real Bransfield saw in the papers that he was supposed to be dead and took immediate steps to show that the statement was incorrect. This is the second time the dead bandit seemingly has been identified, and the authorities decided to bury the body without waiting further.

COW ITCH MAN AGAIN IN TOILS.

Is Charged With Getting Money Under False Pretenses.

La Crosse, Wis., April 8.—Leo Moseley, who was recently tried and acquitted at Viroqua on the charge of having sprinkled "cow itch" on the floor of a hall where dancing was in progress, much to the subsequent discomfiture of the dancers, has been arrested here on a charge of obtaining money under false pretenses. The "cow itch" episode, which occurred at Baraboo, is said to have cost Moseley his position as a traveling salesman.

GIRL FALLS ON PITCHFORK.

Tines Pierce Her Side and Death May Result.

Erskine, Minn., April 8. — While playing about the barn with a number of companions, the six-year-old daughter of J. Bradley, living near here, fell upon the upturned prongs of a pitchfork. The tines of the implement entered her right side and inflicted serious injuries and there are grave fears for her recovery.

Hangs With Apron Strings.

Green Bay, Wis., April 8. — Presumably prompted by family troubles, John J. Lewandowsky, aged thirty-three years, hanged himself with his wife's apron strings.

Pinned Down by Rocks.

Lead, S. D., April 8.—Thomas Griffin, a Homestake employe, was seriously injured while working on the 700-foot level. A large mass of rock pinned him down for an hour and a half before he could be released.

State's Money Up.

Stillwater, April 8.—The state has deposited $11,600 here as the purchase price of the site for the new prison. The citizens' committee is helping to make out deeds and the entire transaction will soon be closed.

MINERS OFFER TO ARBITRATE

IF OPERATORS ACCEPT 160,000 MEN WILL RETURN TO WORK AT ONCE.

MAY FLATLY REFUSE OFFER

New York, April 7.—The hard coal miners of Pennsylvania yesterday proposed to the operators that all disputes be referred to arbitration, the tribunal to be composed of the board of conciliation created by the anthracite strike commission in 1903, with Judge George Gray of Delaware, or any person he may appoint, as chairman and umpire. If the operators accept and a convention of mine workers approves the plan the 160,000 men now idle in the anthracite fields will return to work at once.

Comes as Surprise.

While it had been reported for several days that the miners might ask that the differences be arbitrated, the proposition was a great surprise to the mine owners, as they did not believe the union leaders were ready to leave the controversy to a third party at this time.

That the operators will accept the miners' proposal as submitted is not generally believed. In fact it is intimated they may flatly refuse the offer on the ground that existing conditions are the result of arbitration. The employers promised to give President Mitchell and his men an answer on Monday when another meeting of the two subcommittees will be held.

Operators May Not Accept.

Philadelphia, April 7. — In the anthracite region the arbitration proposition of the miners is regarded in varying lights. Those operators who could be induced to venture an opinion expressed the belief that it will not be accepted. Various reasons for its rejection are advanced, one being the disinclination of the operators to leave the solution of technical mining problems to an umpire who might prove incompetent. "Judge Gray may be all right, but some one else may be all wrong," was the way one operator expressed it.

Situation Is Unchanged.

The situation in the coal fields remains unchanged. Occasional disturbances are reported, but they are inconsequential. As a result of the attacks made on the breaker of the Fernwood colliery, the Erie company, which owns the land occupied by the mine workers, has ordered them to vacate the property. The miners are said to have shot out nearly every window in the breaker.

Is Becoming Normal.

Pittsburg, April 7. — Gradually the situation in the soft coal fields is becoming normal, especially in the Pittsburg district. Forty-three of the mines of the Pittsburg Coal company are in operation, and with the adjourning of the district convention here yesterday it is expected that, within a few days more all miners in this district will be busy. Twenty-two companies have signed the scale.

Independents May Weaken.

The independent operators who on Tuesday night formed an organization against the granting of the scale will hold another meeting to-night, and it is expected that they will decide to sign. Several of the independent companies which refused to join the others Tuesday signed the scale yesterday. News from other sections of the bituminous field is of an encouraging nature.

DOESN'T WANT A CITY OFFICE.

Gen. Chaffee Prefers Not to Serve Under McClellan.

New Orleans, April 7.—Gen. A. R. Chaffee yesterday afternoon denied positively that he was to accept a position in New York.

"I have not received an offer of a public office and do not care for office under Mayor McClellan's administration," he said yesterday.

Gen. Chaffee is here with Mrs. Chaffee and their daughter, Miss Helen, after a pleasure trip to Cuba and Mexico.

MORE ST. LOUIS LOTS SINK.

New Strip Has Sunk Four Feet in Twenty-Four Hours.

St. Louis, April 7.—The area of the sinking ground in the southwestern part of the city is extending. A strip of ground extending through the yards of three residences sunk four feet yesterday. The cause has not yet been explained.

WANTS HEAVY DAMAGES.

Suit for $100,000 for Alleged False Arrest of Lawyer.

Lexington, Ky., April 7.—A suit for $100,000 damages was filed here by Clyde Shropshire, an attorney of this city and vice consul to Paris under the Cleveland administration, against the Fayette National bank for false arrest on a forgery charge. Shropshire was arrested, at the bank's instance, on an allegation that he cashed at that institution a note for $400, signed by his wife. He denies this.

INTENTIONAL DUPLICATE EXPOSURE

NEW RATES WOULD RUIN RAILROADS

THEY REDUCE TARIFF ON LOCAL FREIGHT THAT IS NON-PROFITABLE.

WOULD NOT HELP CONSUMER

St. Paul, Minn., April 2.—That the adoption of the proposed rate schedule affecting certain classes of freight in Minnesota would result in a loss of twenty-six per cent to some of the railroads, and that the roads of the state would lose nearly a million dollars a year in earnings, without at all benefitting the consumer, was the contention made—and supported by a startling array of facts and figures—at the hearing given the representatives of the roads by the railroad commission last week. The commission sat for four days and the railroads made an exhibit of the cost of doing business and the revenue derived, such as has not before been made before any commission. The hearing was given in pursuance of a resolution passed by the last legislature.

C. A. Severance, chief counsel for the railroads, in his opening Monday, asserted that the premise upon which the resolution of the legislature was based—that the Iowa rates should apply to and would reduce the rates in Minnesota — was fallacious. He showed that there was no long haul within the state of Iowa, that it was a paper rate, that freight subjected to the long haul went out of the state. There are no considerable jobbing or market centers in Iowa. What little jobbing there is done in Iowa calls for a haul of sixty to 100 miles. In Minnesota it is different. One of the great jobbing centers of the country is comprised in the Twin Cities. He said it would be shown by witnesses—and it was—that the charges collected in the state of Iowa were about the same as, or higher, than in Minnesota. "The long distance haul in Iowa is a myth," he said.

He cited the fact that it had been the practice of the Minnesota railroads to cut down as ~~far as possible~~ the tariff on grain, thus adding directly to the price received by the producer for it. The price of the grain is fixed at Duluth and Minneapolis and the price received by the farmer is that, less the freight rate. "If the farmer is of the opinion that the man who runs the country elevator is absorbing too much of the price of the grain," said Mr. Severance, "he can ship his own grain, so that a low rate on grain is necessarily reflected in the price that is received by the man who raises the grain. The same is practically true of coal, for the consumer can join with his neighbors and ship it from a terminal. But if the rates that are in controversy here are reduced I think I am safe in saying that there is not a consumer of merchandise in this state who will get an appreciable benefit." Some pointed testimony was aduced on this point later.

The testimony of A. B. Stickney was almost sensational in the positive statements made and the sweeping nature of them. He went exhaustively into the subject of rates and expenses. He ridiculed the Iowa rates, declaring that they were made under the domination of a governor who was daft on the subject of railways and rates and declared that the rates were based on a valuation of $10,000 per mile of railroad. "And," said Mr. Stickney, "when I wanted to build a road through a farm belonging to that same governor he wanted to charge me $8,000 per mile for right-of-way alone." By diagrams he proved that the Iowa rate did not produce results for the consumer. Going into the application of the rates proposed in this state Mr. Stickney said:

"I have prepared a diagram of the commissioners' rates extended to a distance of 2,000 miles, which would more than cover the distance between St. Paul and the Pacific coast, the distance from St. Paul to Seattle or Tacoma being about 1,900 miles.

"Now, the rates which are now in existence on the Great Northern and Northern Pacific roads from St. Paul to Seattle and Tacoma, are as follows:

2	2.60
A	1.60
B	1.25
D	95
E	85

"The rates which the commissioners' tariff, extended, would make, would be as follows:

A	.976
B	.759
C	.665
E	.044

"From this comparison, it will be seen that if the schedule proposed by the Minnesota commission were extended, and put in force from St. Paul to the Pacific coast, it would reduce the present rates about 27.7 per cent on first-class, and about 48.2 per cent on Class "E," and on all the intermediate classes proportionately.

"Now I want to ask the commissioners if they believe the rates between St. Paul and the Pacific coast ought to be reduced, say an average of 38 per cent? Let me show you what such reductions would mean:

"During the panics of 1873 and 1893 the earnings of the railways fell off to such an extent that, probably, 75 per cent of the railway mileage of the United States passed under the control of the courts in the hands of receivers. I have prepared a diagram of the earnings of all the railways of this country, which shows at a glance the decrease of earnings in those two great panics.

"This diagram shows that the railway earnings reached their highest point, $526,000,000, in the year 1873. Then they fell off year by year until they reached their lowest point, $473,000,000, in the year 1877. The decrease was 10.05 per cent.

"Then, in the panic period of 1893, curiously enough, these earnings reached their highest point, $1,207,000,000, in the year 1893, just twenty years from 1873. Then they made one drop to the lowest point, $1,067,000,000, in 1894. This decrease was 11.6 per cent, and again placed, approximately, 75 per cent of the railroad mileage of the United States in the hands of receivers.

"Thus, it will be seen that the difference between rate prosperity and bankruptcy for railway companies is at a loss of only 10 to 12 per cent of their earnings."

H. A. Gray, controller of the Northern Pacific, testified that if his road was forced to adopt the rates proposed it would suffer an annual loss on its Minnesota business of $210,829.44 and on its Minnesota-Dakota business $15,866.52 or 18 per cent on the total business of the two classes. Applying Mr. Stickney's statement to this the effect must be disastrous. Mr. Gray proved his statement by such a showing of actual transactions that the commissioners were confessedly astonished. He proved to demonstration that the expenses of transporting local freight was between six and seven times the cost of transporting through freight. His evidence was largely statistical and conclusive.

It was shown by the testimony of Mr. Stickney, Mr. Gray, General Superintendent Strickland of the Omaha, Assistant General Superintendent Sewall, and General Freight Agent R. G. Brown, of the Rock Island, and others that in transporting less than carlots, which is practically always the case in the classifications affected by the proposed schedule, the cost is immensely greater than in transporting carloads, the terminal charges being the same, the car capacity less, the cost of handling greater; that the rate charged now is less on local freight than is charged on through freight in the proportion of mileage in Minnesota on freight shipped through to the West, to Spokane and other points. It was demonstrated that if the Minnesota rates were reduced under the proposed schedules the state would receive less money in the form of the four per cent gross earnings tax on a car shipped from Duluth to Moorhead than it would on the revenue from a through car running over the same mileage but consigned to a point in Montana.

R. I. Farrington, second vice president of the Great Northern, in his testimony went exhaustively into details as to the cost of transporting local and less-than-carload lots of freight as compared to hauling through freight and testified that the rates proposed by the commission would cut the revenue of his company in this state $300,000 a year while it would result in a saving of nothing to the consumer. This latter, the most striking feature adduced by the examination, was exemplified in detail in the testimony of Theodore H. Stoeffel, contracting freight agent for the Milwaukee.

Mr. Stoeffel testified that he had made up a list of specific shipments of commodities out of St. Paul, paper, hats and caps, dry goods, groceries and hardware; that he had gone to the shippers and secured valuations on the shipments, naming several of the biggest houses shipping the goods. In each case he had taken shipments to different points to cover various distances in mileage. He produced the original way bills, the values attached. In six shipments made to various points the total value of the hats and caps shipped amounted to $1,046.01 and the total freight on all the shipments was $7.20—or seven mills on the dollar of value.

A reporter with a turn for statistics figured at once that if a man living out in the country bought a cap out of any of those shipments and paid a dollar for it he would be paying seven mills freight charge and if the freight charge was wiped out entirely he would not be much ahead. The fact was called to the attention of the commission.

Mr. Stoeffel produced the way bills of six shipments of dry goods to various points in the state; the total value of the commodities was shown to be $1,072.87, the total freight charges, $9.31—or eight mills on the dollar of valuation. A shipment comprising: one box of groceries, three bundles of paper, one box canned goods, one box canned syrup, two bags sugar, total weight 500 pounds, was sent to Le Sueur Center, Minn., sixty-five miles, for 88 cents, and when the item was read there was more figures on how the groceryman could spread the saving on freight, if the rates were reduced, so that his customers would get the benefit.

The tesimony was conclusive that no possible good could come to the consumer by the reduction of rates on the commodities under discussion while the railroads would be very seriously affected.

Freight Traffic Manager Broughton of the Great Northern showed in his testimony that the tariff on grain from Minnesota points into Minneapolis was from one third to almost one half less than the rates from Nebraska points to Omaha, from Kansas points into Kansas City, and from Iowa and Illinois points into Chicago, for the same distance.

It was shown that, in the aggregate, the loss to the railroads by the proposed reduction of rates on the various classifications affected would be about a million dollars a year; that the railroads were put to a much greater expense to handle these classes of commodities than other classes shipped on a long haul in carloads; that the consumer could not benefit by the reduction because of the insignificance of the freight charge compared to the valuation of the freight, and that to reduce the revenue of the roads would make it impossible for them to make lower rates—as, as was testified, is their constant endeavor—on such freight as grain, coal and lumber where the benefit to the producer or consumer would be direct and appreciable.

The hearing was adjourned Thursday to be resumed later.

The State DAY BY DAY

DAIRY PRODUCTS MOVE.

Expected That More Than Ever Before Will Be Shipped East.

With the coming of moderate weather, Minnesota butter and eggs are being shipped to Eastern cities by the carloads. During the cold months these products were being transported in shipments of less than carloads, but from now on until the ground freezes again great activity will be displayed in the shipment of both butter and eggs.

Butter already has begun to move out of Minnesota at the rate of 150,000 to 175,000 pounds a week, and in a few weeks that quantity will be almost doubled. During June and July the movement will be in full swing. Out of the 80,000,000 pounds of butter made in Minnesota last year, it is estimated that at least 75 per cent of the product was shipped to Chicago, New York and other big cities in the East.

Minnesota butter is finding favor in the East because of its excellent quality and condition when it arrives at its destination. The Gopher product is as good when it gets into the consumer's hands as when it leaves the creameries. The transportation of butter from Minnesota as now conducted, is one of the great achievements of railroad enterprise. The refrigerator cars which convey the butter to the East are iced at the point of shipment and at St. Paul, and on an average about every 200 miles until the product arrives at its destination.

WOODSMAN FIGHTS ROBBERS.

Band of Crooks Believed to Be Working Minnesota Town.

There has been an epidemic of crime at Bemidji the past few days. Two men at the Great Northern station were robbed of $111, one losing $100 and the other $11. The thefts were committed while the west-bound train was standing at the station. One of the men robbed had just purchased a ticket from the agent and was boarding the train when a man crowded up to him, and, extracting his pocketbook, successfully escaped. The other victim was relieved of his money in the same manner.

In the evening a bold attempt was made to hold up o woodsman named Nichols, on Beltrami avenue. Nichols had just come out of the woods and had considerable money which he had incautiously displayed while in a salaan. Two chance acquaintances induced him to go out with them, and when a dark place was reached they seized him, while a third man attempted to take away his money. He fought so desperately, however, and made such an outcry that the robbers were frightened away.

It is believed that there is an organized band of crooks operating in the vicinity of Bemidji.

STUDENT VOTE BARRED.

Under a ruling just obtained from the attorney general's office, nearly 100 young men who are studying at Gustavus Adolphus college at St. Peter will be denied the right of suffrage if the ruling is enforced.

The decision is an interesting incident in the warmest city campaign St. Peter has ever known. The Citizens' League is making a determined fight for "a better St. Peter." The league made the "lid" the issue of its campaign, and so close is the contest that it was admitted that the student body at Gustavus Adolphus college held the balance of power. There are about 350 students at the institution, but not more than 100 have reached the voting age.

Opponents of the Citizens' league appealed to the attorney general for an opinion. One was written by R. A. Stone, assistant attorney general, who holds that students not actual residents of the city are not entitled to the ballot, and in consequence nearly all of them will be challenged.

Officers of the Citizens' league say misrepresentations were made to the attorney general, and they will make an effort to poll the college vote.

College Student Is Gone.

Ole Osmundson, son of a farmer of Mallory, Minn., has been missing since Sunday, March 18. The young man had been attending a college in Grand Forks and went home March 17 to spend Sunday. He left Mallory the following evening, buying a ticket for Grand Forks. He did not return to school and nothing has been heard of him since. His parents had no knowledge of his disappearance for a week. When he failed to return for the next Sunday visit they inquired here, but the young man had not been seen at the college. His father is of the opinion that he may have gone West. He is making an effort to find him and has enlisted the aid of the authorities.

Philip S. Converse of Detroit has been arrested on an allegation of perjury, alleged to have been committed in the bankruptcy proceedings against Mrs. Converse last January. Mr. Converse appeared before Commissioner Richardson, waived examination and gave a bond for his appearance at the next term of the United States court at Fergus Falls.

Jeremiah Pelkey died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. John Hood, in the town of Roseville. Had he lived until April 17 he would have been 101 years old.

TO DRAIN PRAIRIE COUNTRY

System of Ditches Planned for Western Lands.

A comprehensive system of ditches, which will drain prairie lands instead of swamps, has been planned in the flat country from eight to twenty-five miles west of Fergus Falls, and the survey work is in charge of Deputy County Surveyor Martin Alberg of Otter Tail county and City Engineer Blegen of Fergus Falls. The ditches extend from the western townships of Otter Tail county, completely across Wilkin, and the system already planned contemplates the construction of about eighty miles of ditches. It is estimated that these ditches will redeem 100,000 acres of land, and the cost of their construction will probably run up to $125,000 to $150,000.

None of the land that is to be drained is to be classed as swamp land in the ordinary sense of that term. In fact, in favorable years it has raised some of the best crops ever harvested in the state. But in 1904 and 1905 it has shared the fate of a great many other portions of the Red river valley and the grain has been under water the greater part of the season. Thousands of acres have been utterly ruined, and even where the grain was worth cutting it has been impossible to place binders in the field. Conditions have come to such a pass that farmers are deserting the farms, and drainage petitions are poring in by the dozens.

The prairies are so flat that the surveyors find a fall of only two feet to the mile, and there are many localities that can only be drained by ditching every quarter-section. It is also necessary to construct ditches of unusual width to carry off the water.

The surveys that are now being made contemplate one main ditch extending completely across Wilkin county and emptying into the Red river near Breckenridge. This ditch will be six feet deep and eighteen feet wide at its junction with the river.

Another ditch will be run along the county line between the towns of Carlisle and Orwell, Otter Tail county, and the towns of Andrea and Foxhome, Wilkin county. This ditch will be about eleven miles in length.

Dozens of branch ditches will be constructed in these towns and the towns of Nordick, Nelson, Connelly and Sunnyside. The town of Nelson has become so thoroughly demoralized that only fourteen votes were cast at the last election.

It is probable that other valley counties will adopt similar systems in the near future, as these counties suffer more or less nearly every year on account of water lying on the fields in the spring. The delay in seeding is often a serious matter, and when rain falls all summer and throughout the harvest season, as has been the case in the last two years, it is simply impossible to raise crops in many localities.

$12,500 FOR COLLEGE.

Carnegie Promises Donation to Another Minnesota Institution.

Prof. R. Rogstad, addressing the members of the Moorhead chamber of commerce, announced that Andrew Carnegie had promised the trustees of Concordia college $12,500, conditioned upon the raising of an additional sum sufficient to erect a $50,000 man building for the college. The sum of $20,000 had already been subscribed fo the purpose, and with Mr. Carnegie's donation, there remained the sum of $17,500 still to be raised. The commercial club at once appointed a committee to assist in raising the required amount. It is anticipated that the entire amount necessary to make Mr. Carnegie's gift available will be raised without difficulty.

CLEAR COLLEGE'S DEBT.

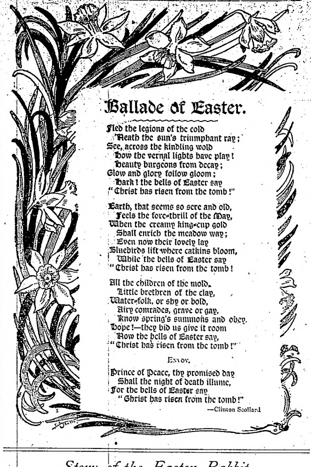
Farmers Are Helping Out Park Region Luther College.

Rev. O. N. Fosmark has returned to Fergus Falls from the vicinity of Wendell, where he has been soliciting among the farmers in the interest of the Park Region Luther college at Fergus Falls. He returned with $700 as the result of three days' work.

The college was erected at a cost of approximately $50,000, and the indebtedness against it has been reduced to about $6,000. The money for its erection was raised entirely among the farmers and the people of Fergus Falls. There was no endowment, and no large amounts have ever been subscribed, but hundreds of farmers have contributed $100 apiece, and it will be only a few months until the institution is free of debt.

At a meeting at Welcome held to vote on the question of issuing bonds in the sum of $11,000 for the purpose of building a new school house, 78 votes were cast, 75 being in favor of the bonds and 3 against them. This will give Welcome a chance to build a high school. Bids for a new school will be called for at once.

H. M. Haines, while operating a wood sawing machine, lost two fingers of his right hand. He walked to the hospital in Paynesville and had the hand dressed.



Ballade of Easter.

Fled the legions of the cold
'Neath the sun's triumphant ray;
See, across the kindling wold
How the vernal lights have play!
Beauty burgeons from decay;
Glow and glory follow gloom;
Hark! the bells of Easter say
"Christ has risen from the tomb!"

Earth, that seems so sere and old,
Feels the fore-thrill of the May,
When the creamy king-cup gold
Shall enrich the meadow way;
Even now their lovely lay
Bluebirds lift where catkins bloom,
While the bells of Easter say
"Christ has risen from the tomb!

All the children of the mold,
Little brethren of the clay,
Water-folk, or shy or bold,
Airy comrades, grave or gay,
Know spring's summons and obey.
Hope!—they bid us give it room
Now the bells of Easter say,
"Christ has risen from the tomb!"

ENVOY.

Prince of Peace, thy promised day
Shall the night of death illume,
For the bells of Easter say
"Christ has risen from the tomb!"

Story of the Easter Rabbit.

Once more the Easter Rabbit has arrived to fulfil his annual mission. Only a day his merry reign will last, and then—such is the inexorable decree—he must return to the abode where Santa Claus, fairies, brownies and other mysterious friends of little folk hold goodly company.

With what joyous anticipation eager eyes have watched for his appearance at the confectioners' windows, how many busy little hands have constructed nests of moss and twigs for his reception, or have framed notes of invitation in the most endearing terms to this generous little guest! Ah, indeed, the Easter Rabbit has won the hearts of all, and bids fair to vie even with the venerable Christmas saint in popularity.

And now he is here, and has no doubt, responded most graciously to all requests and has filled the nests and pockets of the child world to overflowing with his gayly colored gifts.

But who is this cheery stranger, at whose modest knock the doors of palace and hut alike are opened with a hearty welcome? We merely know he is of German descent, but his true origin and significance time has hidden from most of us, and to lift the veil we must wander back thousands of years into the very heart of the Fatherland.

It is still winter; lakes and streams are icebound, and the snow seems loath to withdraw its glistening mantle from the bleak and dreary fields. Yet in the heart of the Pagan mother is joy; she has heard to-day the note of a songbird and has seen the willows stretch forth their silver hooded buds; there is no doubt Ostara, the goddess of spring, is on the way. Gladly she hastens home with the good tidings, gathers her children around her and whispers to them:

"The hare of Ostara has been here, little ones. Do you know what that means? We must prepare for the Osterfestival. Father is already in the forest, gathering wood for the fire that shall greet the kind goddess at her arrival."

"But how did the little hare know, mother dear."

"Ah, my child," said the mother smiling, there was no need of it. My grandsire told me the story of Ostara's hare when I was not older than thou art now. Listen to me, little ones, and I will tell you what he said.

"Long, long years ago, when the earth was still young, a fearful winter visited this land. Ice and snow would not cease, and man and beast perished from cold and hunger. Ah, how grieved the gentle goddess Ostara was when she looked down from on high and beheld the misery of her children! Well she knew that before long her reign would begin, and grass and flowers spring up wherever her foot touched the ground, and the air become fragrant with her breath. But, alas! hope had died within the hearts of the people, and she longed to comfort them. Oh, for a fleet messenger who would spread the news of her coming over the sorrow stricken land, tell the buds to come forth and the birds to build their nests and lift their voices in a chorus of joy, and bid men to mourn no longer, but look upon all these signs and know that New Life was at hand.

"Thus the goddess sighed, but no one heard—no one but the little hare, who had always been sharp, wonderfully sharp, of hearing. He pricked up his long ears and listened, and then he was off with a bound, and sped through the country as though he had wings on his feet. Soon his message was given to each and all, and when shortly after the goddess held her triumphant entry in the German lands she was welcomed and honored as never before by the grateful people. Yet the happiest of all was the swift footed hare whom fair Ostara appointed her messenger for ever and aye."

Ages have passed since this simple story was told, the goddess of spring has been forgotten, but her name still lives in the great Christian festival of this season (Ostara, Ostern, Easter). Easter fires flame on all the hilltops of Germany, and the hare, or Easter Rabbit, with the first tokens of spring, the eggs and the budding willow branches, are held in high favor as the symbolic heralds of a higher and spiritual revelation.

Welcome, then, thou faithful little messenger! Welcome, also, in this country! Gladden the hearts of the children with thy bright and varied gifts, and to those who long for a wider vision whisper the good tidings of a new and everlasting life, first proclaimed at the empty grave of our Savior.

VARIOUS FLOWERS OF EASTER.

Every Christian Land Has Its Special Emblem of the Day.

Every country has its flowers especially given to Easter, whether spotless white or tinted in opal hues like the wings of Fra Angelico's angels. The entire church calendar may indeed be counted in bloom from the Candlemas lily in February to the Glastonbury thorn on Christmas day.

The Easter flower of two centuries ago for the little English girl was the yellow daffodil, and she bore its golden bloom to the service with a glad devotion. It was the Lent lily, and she watched eagerly for the first green blades to pierce the earth, or remembered a bank where it grew in wild profusion and went to seek it there, full of delight when its yellow bells greeted the sunshine.

The little Dutch maiden carried handfuls of anemone, the first flowers that come after the cold and snow. The Dutch maiden calls it Paas Blumtje, because it blooms at Easter. But the Pingster-Bloem, the flower of Whitsunday, our pink azalea, is even dearer, and parties of young people gather it to adorn the homes.

In Italy the day is called Pasquata rosata and the rose is dedicated to its services. All the countryside flushes pink with blooming roses.

In Germany the peony is sacred to Easter and to Whitsunday. This flower was believed by the Greeks to be of divine origin, and to have come from the moon. It was thought to possess great puritive properties and to ward off evil spirits when planted near the house. The physician Pacon used it in treating the Greeks wounded at the siege of Troy, and gave it his name.

All over our country the lily is claimed for Easter, and the name is given to one species which we call Easter lily. This pure white blossom is noted in early paintings. The lily of the annunciation was always placed beside the madonna or in the hand of the Angel Gabriel, and the shimmering purity of its satin vesture seems to make it especially suited to speak of that new life that comes from the dark shadows of the grave.—Miss DuBois in the Interior.

A Pretty Easter Gift.

Gild a small basket, trim the edge with rosettes of white baby ribbon and fill with white wadding sprinkled with diamond dust. Blow out the contents of two eggs through a small opening in the ends, gild or cut stars from gilt paper and decorate, fill the eggs after decorating with sachet powder and paste white paper over the ends, gilding it, making perforations in the paper so that the powder can be shaken out. Place the eggs in basket and send the gift, daintily wrapped in white paper, tied with narrow white ribbon. This is a sweet and dainty Easter gift for some friend.

WE have Sjoblom's "key," have you?

SOMEBODY please Osterize John Alexander Dowie and let it go at that.

THE Minneapolis Journal had an editorial recently under the caption, "The Hen Wins." She must have been laying for some one.

They regulate railroad rates in Canada, but then, Canada has no such monumental grafters as buy their way into the United States senate.

MANY a hungry office seeker among the republicans is wishing he knew which of all the mentionees could possibly come the nearest to defeating Gov. Johnson.

THE Republicans meet at Duluth June 13 to nominate a state ticket. Fortunately the 13th is not on Friday, so there is no compound hoodoo to contend with.

PRES. ROOSEVELT would call a halt in the mud-slinging of the magazines. He would do equally well if he could head off the slobbery gush they indulge in over some of our public men.

WITH Block against Johnson it would look as tho some men were born great; some had greatness thrust upon them; and the rest came from St. Peter—including the editor of this paper.

AFTER all was there much difference between Jefferson Davis escaping at the close of the Civil war dressed as a woman and Rockefeller assuming the same disguise to avoid the subpoena server?

ONE can scarcely read the editorial columns of the Princeton Union without becoming convinced that Bob Dunn hates all mankind with the one redeeming feature that he hates himself too.

WITH such a deversified crop of republican candidates and the dubiousness of political weather it will be difficult for our friends to know which should be the more assiduously cultivated.

VESUVIUS in eruption again? That's nothing, the people of Italy ought to come here and see the United States senate get busy, except for the fact it would be exposing their wordly possessions to a far greater danger.

THE Brainerd Tribune is offered free for six months to every newly married couple. That ought to be an inducement and were we not already on the Tribune's exchange list, we would be tempted to close with such an offer.

The Brown's Valley Tribune intimated that Frank Day went down to New York to get pointers from Tammany. But Frank Eddy thinks that any man who can direct a campaign resulting in the election of a Democratic governor in an overwhelming Repulican state can give Tammany a whole lot of pointers.

THE formal announcement of Julius Block's candidacy for the governorship has been made. Also does John G. Lund of Minneapolis say he is a candidate. Now will the others, Jacobson, Lord, Cole, Somerville, Dfment, Hanson, Stephens, Randall and Staples please get busy.

CANDIDATE BLOCK's platform demands just freight and passenger rates. It might be well to inquire from which standpoint the justness is to be demanded. Even the railroad are in favor of just and equitable rates, but somehow their ideas conflict with the opinion of the people.

A facetious gentleman made the remark that our United States senators must have been plumbers at some time in their lives. They do work so slow.—Mankato Free Press,

And many of them horticulturists as they keep their hand in by persistent grafting.—Martin County Sentinel.

You might say both as they are always looking for plums.

How would it do, just for a change, to take up some new man for governor, one who has never sucked the public teat, never held a public office, never stood for trusts and corporations, knuckled down to any class or clique. A man clean, honest, loyal and independent. One who would be with and for the people all the time.—Anoka Union.

You might find such a man as that among the democrats but never, never among the republicans of Minnesota.

JULIUS BLOCK's capacity for running is perhaps well illustrated by a little incident of some twenty years ago. They had organized a militia company in that little old town of St. Peter which, at day's decline, reposes peacefully in the shadow of the lunatic asylum. Block was a member of the company. So, by the way, was Governor Johnson. So, also, incidentally, was the writer. One evening we were out drilling. Col. Jerry Donahower was the captain and gave the command "double time." Pursuant to the order, the company started off at a comfortable dog trot. Nearing the confines of the parade ground, the order for quick time was given. We were all pretty raw and, mistaking the meaning of the order, we redoubled our efforts until it became a race to the swift. When it was all over, lo, it was found that Julius Block led all the rest.

Sturdy and strong of limb and fleet of foot is Julius Block but the political race is not to those possessed of such qualities alone.

LATE LOCALS.

William Sampson of Crookston was in the city yesterday.

Marrige licenses have been issued during the week as follows: Olaus K. Sevre to Tilda Thorson John Alfred Anderson to Anna O. Vigen.

Crookston Journal: Miss Hulda Bergstom departed this morning for Red Lake Falls where she will spend the easter vacation with Miss Florence Regan, formerly of this city.

The Tennis club held a meeting last night in anticipation of the coming season of sport. The principal subject of discussion was the removal of grounds from where they formerly played to some other part of the city but no final action was taken.

Supt. McAnulty is in the city today in the interests of the seed grain contest. He is meeting with excellent success and has already secured donations to be given as prizes in money and valuable articles from different stores to the amonnt of $225.

There will be special Easter services at the Presbyterian church next Sunday. At 5:30 in the morning there will be a sunrise service in charge of the Endeavor societies, concluding with an address by the pastor. At the regular morning service the choir will give an Easter cantata entitled, "The Cross and the Crown." At 7:30 in the evening the Sabbath school will give an Easter concert of songs, class drills and recitations. The public is most cordially invited to attend.

Chas. Brady Sr. and son Chas. Brady J., of Red Lake Falls, arrived in this city the first of the week the former to bid on the Ripple school building which is to be put up this season, by the way receiving the contract. Mr. Brady Jr. is one of the best sprinters in the state and no mean base ball player, and it pleases us to note that he is to remain here, probably for the summer, in which event he would be splendid addition to our excellent base ball team—Grand Rapids Independent.

In the chambers of the district court this morning Judge Watts issued an order awarding Sheriff Dan Linnihan the state award of $200 for catching a horse thief in the person of one Stentz. Linnihan is sheriff of Red Lake county which is in the same judicial district as Polk being under Judge Watts. Some time ago it was the general impression about the city that a sheriff was not qualified to receive state money in that form some attorneys holding that they were but performing their public duty in the act. By the ruling that was just made by the court it seems that idea was a wrong one and that sheriffs will be allowed the same opportunity as others in getting the state money in pursuing and capturing horse thieves.—Crookston Times.

Many so-called Webster Vest Pocket Dictionaries have been put upon the market, but until now there has been no authentic dictionary of this class, abridged directly from "Webster's International." Such a vest pocket manual has just been issued, entitled "Webster's Little Gem Dictionary." It is scholarly and strictly reliable, being the best, most concise, and most complete of its kind. The main vocabulary includes by actual count more words than are found in any other pronouncing dictionary of its scope although some books make exorbitant claims to the contrary. The "Little Gem" also contains a very full and up-to-date Gazetteer of the world, many valuable tables and lists, and also twelve pages of colored maps, seldom published in a book of this size. It is just the guide you need to answer your many questions with accuracy. All copies are supplied with the marginal index and will be sent postpaid on receipt of price. Dr. Conrad Adler of Berlin, Germany, spent many yeers in the leading hospitals of Europe, studying appdndicitis and stomach diseases. The prescription with which he cured thousands of these cases is now put up in bottles under the name of "Dr. Adler's Treatment," and sent to this country direct from Berlin. It is not a patent medicine but Dr. Adler's own prescription as used by himself for all his patients. It is the only known cure for appendicitis and chronic stomach diseases, and we are glad of our good fortune in getting this remedy for the people of this vicinity. Large bottles for a dollar at W. MERCURY MAKES WRECKS NOT CURES

Thousands who have had their health ruined by Mercury testify that it makes wrecks instead of cures in the treatment of Contagious Blood Poison. While it may mask the disease in the system for awhile, when the treatment is left off the trouble returns with renewed violence, combined with the disastrous effects of this powerful mineral. Mercury, and Potash, which is also a common treatment for Contagious Blood Poison, eat out the lining of the stomach and bowels, produce chronic dyspepsia, cause the teeth to decay, make spongy, tender gums, affect the bones and muscles, and leave its victims complete physical wrecks. Another effect of this treatment is mercurial Rheumatism, the worst and most hopeless form of this disease. There is but one certain, reliable antidote for this destructive poison, and that is S. S. S. It is the only medicine that is able to go into the blood and cure the disease permanently. S. S. S. does not hide or cover up anything, but so completely drives out the poison that no signs of it are ever seen again. S. S. S. is made entirely of roots, herbs and barks, and while curing Contagious Blood Poison, will drive out the effects of any mineral treatment. We offer a reward of $1,000 for proof that S. S. S. contains a particle of mineral of any kind. Book with instructions for self-treatment and any medical advice wished furnished without charge.

I suffered greatly from Contagious Blood Poison. I consulted physicians who prescribed Mercury. Nothing did me any good—in fact the treatment proved more harmful than beneficial. A friend told me that S. S. S. had certainly cured him, and I immediately commenced its use, and in a short while I could find no trace of the disease. This was two years ago, and I can truthfully say I am entirely cured.

Absolutely Pure

Made from Pure Grape Cream of Tartar

In baking powder Royal is the standard, the powder of highest reputation; found by the United States Government tests of greatest strength and purity.

It renders the food more healthful and palatable and is most economical in practical use.

Housekeepers are sometimes importuned to buy alum powders because they are "cheap." Yet some of the cheapest made powders are sold to consumers at the highest price.

Housekeepers should stop and think. Is it not better to buy the Royal and take no chances—the powder whose goodness and honesty are never questioned?

The warrant had been assigned to Isaiah Gervais who occupies a 160-acre farm just west of the city.

Edward L. Healy of Red Lake Falls passed thru the city this morning. Mr. Healy is the man who proposed to give Grand Forks a commercial electric light, the light to come from his power house at Red Lake Falls, where there are excellent facilities afforded, he claims for the manufacture of the juice. Mr. Healy has a petition ready to present to the Grand Forks city council as soon as the new members are in office. The proposition of furnishing electricity for the city of Red Lake Falls will therefore soon be considered.—Crookston Times.

RHEUMATISM CURED

The Disease Yielded Readily to Dr Williams' Pink Pills After Other Treatment Failed.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure rheumatism because they supply the necessary elements to the vitiated blood and enable nature to cast out the impurities and effect a cure. Mrs. A. Baker, of No. 119 Fitch street, Syracuse, N. Y., will furnish living evidence of the truth of this statement. "There has been rheumatism in my family ever since I can remember," she says. "My grandmother was a great sufferer from muscular rheumatism and my mother also had the disease in a mild form. About a year ago I had a hard cold and rheumatism caught me in my left knee. There were sharp pains, confined to the neighborhood of the knee and they seemed to go right into the bone. The pain I suffered was intense and I also had dizzy spells.

"The doctors called my trouble sciatic and sciatic rheumatism. When I didn't get better under their treatment my brother-in-law suggested that I try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I bought three boxes, and, by the time I had taken them, the pain and dizziness had entirely left me. I wanted to make sure of a cure so I bought three more boxes, but I didn't take quite all of them as I found that I was entirely cured.

"Before I took the pills the pain was so severe that I had to cry at times and when I was cured I was so thankful and grateful and I am glad to recommend them to every one who suffers with rheumatism."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have cured severe cases of anæmia, sciatica, nervousness, partial paralysis, locomotor ataxia and St. Vitus' dance that have not responded to other modes of treatment. All druggists sell Dr. Williams' Pink Pills or they will be sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

Why He Didn't Prosper.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., in an address on the subject of success, said:

"I will illustrate my meaning with an incident that happened in a Western mill.

"A huge, brawny chap applied to the foreman of the mill for work. Though there were no vacancies, the foreman took him on—he told so piteous a tale of woe—and set him to shoveling coal in the mill yard.

"In the afternoon the foreman went to see how the new hand was doing. He found him, in company with an old hand—a lean veteran of sixty—shoveling coal into a cart. But the old hand worked faster than the new one, shoveling in two shovelfuls of coal to the new hand's one.

"'Look here,' said the foreman to the brawny stranger, 'this is hardly fair. Pete is throwing two shovelfuls into the cart to your one.'

"'Yes, boss,' replied the new hand, 'and I told the fool about it, too.'"

Too Brutal.

In a discussion of the brutality of football Morris Wood, the skating champion, said the other day:

"One of my friends told me that last fall as he was walking down a certain street he saw a crowd collected, and in the center two lads fighting like mad.

"The older lad, as my friend approached, downed the younger one, and then began to kick him.

"To this treatment the younger lad objected lustily.

"'Here, Jack,' he shouted, squirming under the kicks, 'mind what yer about. This is only a fight. It ain't football.'"

DECAYED STARCH.

A Food Problem.

An Asheville man tells how right food did that which medicines had failed to accomplish.

"For more than 15 years," he says, "I was afflicted with stomach trouble and intestinal indigestion, gas forming in stomach and bowels and giving me great distress. These conditions were undoubtedly due to the starchy food I ate, white bread, potatoes, etc., and didn't digest. I grew worse with time, till, 2 years ago, I had an attack which the doctor diagnosed as appendicitis. When the surgeon operated on me, however, it was found that my trouble was ulcer of the pancreas instead of appendicitis.

"Since that time I have had several such attacks, suffering death, almost. The last attack was about 3 months ago, and I endured untold agonies.

"The doctor then said that I would have to eat less starchy stuff, so I began the use of Grape-Nuts food for I knew it to be predigested, and have continued same with most gratifying results. It has built me up wonderfully. I gained 10 pounds in the first 8 weeks that I used Grape-Nuts, my general health is better than ever before, my brain is clearer and my nerves stronger.

"For breakfast and dinner, each, I take 4 teaspoonfuls of Grape-Nuts with cream, a small slice of dry toast, an egg soft boiled and a cup of Postum; and I make the evening meal on Grape-Nuts and cream alone—this gives me a good night's rest and I am well again." CHAPTER X.

Prisoners.

When General Salvarez learned of the failure to blow up the castle, he did not for a moment doubt that his enemies were in possession of the secret passage.

There was nothing left for him to do but hurry back to his troops, and make what preparations he could to withstand an attack, for it was almost certain that the royalists would follow up their victory, and attempt to destroy the force under his command.

And Salvarez reasoned correctly.

Shortly after the scene between Philip and Don Juan, a portion of the mob, called the royalist army, was led out by Gomez, who had with him, in immediate command of their respective followers, Francisco and Mattazudo.

Between Gomez and Mattazudo there had arisen a violent hatred, but Gomez feared the power of the Zambos too much to attempt to injure the half-breed then.

About the same time that Gomez left the castle, Don Juan Garza, accompanied by the two men he had chosen to accompany him, left also, and set out toward the Carib's hut.

Garza and his two companions had not gone far when two forms emerged from a hiding-place, and like noiseless shadows, glided after them.

Not a word was spoken by either party during the journey.

Reaching the Carib's hut, Don Juan found the Indian sitting on a log before his door, smoking a rude stone pipe, and enjoying, in his own fashion, the cool evening.

"I am here again, Ramana," said Don Juan.

"I see you," replied the Carib.

"I must have the truth about my daughter."

"I have told it to you twice. I have not seen your daughter."

"Ramana, listen to me. You behold in me a broken-hearted father. My happiness is in your hands. How can you still be cruel? Where is my child?"

"I know not."

"Ramana, are you loyal to the king?"

"When he is king I will be loyal to him," replied the Indian. "It matters not to us who may be our rulers. One kind is as bad as another. We had lands—they took them from us. One government follows another. Each one is as bad as the last. We have nothing left, yet we are expected to be loyal."

"Restore my daughter to me, Ramana, and the king will restore your lands. I swear it."

"I would give you your daughter if I had her. But I have not. I have not seen her."

"Will you come and tell that to the king?"

"The king! Has the Spaniard who calls himself king sent for me?"

"Yes. My daughter was to wed the king. He is anxious about her, too, Ramana."

"I will go," said the Indian. "There is some mystery here. The other said she was to wed him. The half-breed is the one."

They left together, and Medworth and Tempest started to follow them. Then a sudden thought arrested Arthur and he turned back motioning for Tempest to follow him. Instead of following Don Juan and Ramana back to the castle they remained hidden near the hut. Medworth's idea in doing this was that if Ramana was lying Lola might be somewhere near.

They waited some little time and, hearing no sound, peered into the open door of the hut.

There was no one there.

The hut was such a rude, ill-made thing that it seemed hardly possible that there could be a hiding-place connected with it.

Satisfying themselves that no one was inside, they withdrew again into the shadows and waited.

After a time they heard voices, and two persons came walking slowly toward the hut. They were both Indians, and were speaking in Spanish, yet in so low a tone that the listening Americans could not understand what they said.

But when they reached the hut and found it empty, one turned to the other and said:

"Ravona, the hut is empty. Where are the old ones?"

"It is strange," said the one called Ravona. "My father and mother are very old. They do not go far from their hut at night."

Just then the sharp hiss of a woman's voice was heard, and an old Indian hag came from a clump of woods about a hundred yards away.

"Oh, there you are," said Ravona. "We missed you. Where is the old one?"

"I left him here. Strange things are being done now."

"What do you mean?"

"A girl was stolen from the castle. First Gomez comes to find her and says Mattazudo the half-breed brought her to Ramana. But Ramana has not seen her. Then the half-breed comes himself and demands her. What a liar that half-breed is. Perhaps some one has been after Ramana."

"I saw the half-breed," said Ravona, "while the sun was still high, by the river."

"He has hid the girl, it is certain," said the old woman. "I would not give much for her chances in the half-breed's hands."

"Where could he hide her?" asked Ravona's companion.

"There is a place," replied Ravona, "but I thought only my father and myself knew it. It is near the river. It is a cave."

"Then go there," said Ravona's mother. "If the half-breed is at his tricks again, defeat him. The girl must be hungry. Take food with you."

"Have you any?"

"Plenty. Ramana is a great hunter."

The three went inside the hut, and in a moment the crackling of fire could be heard. Then came the appetizing odor of cooking meat.

It seemed an interminable wait to Medworth, but the food was ready at last, and Ravona, accompanied by his companion, came from the hut, carrying a pot of steaming, savory stew.

They struck into a narrow path leading toward the river, and the Americans kept as close to them as they could without being themselves discovered.

After traveling thus a while, Ravona passed before a thick network of vines and parted them. He and his companion pressed their way through.

Behind this barrier was the entrance to a cave, and Medworth poked his head through the vines just in time to see the two Indians disappearing into the cave.

"Come on!" said Medworth.

They followed the Indians in.

The cave was a large one. A lantern, hung on a peg stuck in a crevice, threw a gloomy light around.

On a couch of furs, reclined a girl, sobbing, her position being such as to indicate that she was fastened there.

"The half-breed's work," said Ravona.

At the voice, the girl raised her head.

"Lola!" cried Medworth, rushing to her past the Indians.

"Arthur! my Arthur!" she exclaimed. "You here—in Venezuela?"

"I am here," he said, joyfully; "and so is my old friend, Tempest."

"Never mind me," said Jack; "cut those cords."

"Who are you?" now demanded Ravona.

"Friends of this senorita," replied Tempest. "We have been looking for her."

A glance at Lola, whose head was nestled against Arthur's breast, proved to Ravona that Tempest spoke the truth.

"Then I am not needed," he said. "But beware of Mattazudo. See, I leave you the food. There is plenty. Adios."

"Where am I, Arthur?" asked Lola, when the Indians had gone.

"You are in a cave near the river. Who brought you here?"

"I do not know. A dark-skinned man came to me and said my father sent him to guide me to a place of safety until after the battle. He brought me here and bound me. I screamed and struggled, and begged him to release me, but he would not. Oh, how frightened I was! I thought I was going to be killed."

"Well you are in the hands of friends now, Miss Lola," said Tempest, "and I'll answer for the neck of the next man who lays a hand on you."

"Come," said Arthur, "you have not touched the supper the Indian brought."

He tenderly assisted her out of the cave and they started toward the castle, Lola carefully guarded between her two companions.

Suddenly the sound of firing was heard.

"The battle is on," said Medworth. "I hope Salvarez is successful."

As they progressed the firing grew louder and nearer, until they paused in alarm.

"Listen!" said Lola. "Was that not a woman's scream?"

"Surely it is," said Medworth.

The shrill scream of a woman in distress was distinctly heard.

"Stay here," said Tempest. "I'll be back."

He darted away, and they heard his voice and the sound of fighting.

Then a girl came rushing toward them with streaming hair.

"Save me!" she cried. "Our army is lost!"

It was Jacinta, the daughter of Salvarez.

The rushing forms of men closed in around them, and a voice called:

"Seize them!"

In another instant, Tempest, Lola, Jacinta and Medworth were seized upon, and, under the command of Pedro Francisco, were conveyed prisoners to the Castle of Salvarez.

CHAPTER XI.

A Puzzled Spaniard.

Philip was pacing to and fro in the Council Room. His head was bent. His hands clasped behind him. He was evidently in deep thought. As he passed a high barred window he paused and looked out. His gaze wandered to the distant fields and well-tilled acres of Salvarez.

It was a splendid, a magnificent estate.

As far as the eye could see the land belonged to Salvarez. And Salvarez was now a prisoner, one of fifty survivors of the bloody battle that destroyed the defenders of the Republic.

A footstep was heard, the door opened, and Gomez came in.

"Things go our way," he said, smiling. "Venezuela is ours."

"Part of it," replied Philip, not smiling.

"All of it. The soldiers of Salvarez are nearly all killed. Salvarez himsef is a prisoner. There is now no reason to delay pushing on to the north and planting our standard beyond the Orinoco. Our friends are waiting for us there. Caracas must fall at last."

"At last. But there is something to be done here before we cross the Orinoco. What is the sentiment of the people near us, now that Salvarez is crushed?"

"Judging from the reports we are receiving, the entire country south of the Orinoco is loyal to you."

"Then I must delay my coronation no longer."

"I would not delay it another day."

There was a pause, a strained silence.

"Gomez," said Philip, bending a keen gaze on the General. "I want the truth about that mysterious affair of Lola Garza."

"I thought it was mysterious no longer. The girl is found. What is her story?"

"I have not yet heard. Garza is with her now. I will send for him at once."

Garza was sent for, but before he arrived Francisco came in. He was there when Don Juan entered.

"You sent for me?" said Don Juan.

"I did," said Philip. "You were with your daughter. How is she?"

"Alas, she is not well. The cave in which she was confined by that half-breed scoundrel was damp, and as she was bound hand and foot, she became thoroughly chilled. The result is now that she has a bad fever, which alternates with severe chills."

"That is bad. Have you heard from her own lips the story of her abduction?"

"Yes. Ah, what a scoundrel that Mattazudo is. Yes, he went to her, telling her that it was my wish for her to accompany him to a place of greater safety until after the battle. She believed him, and followed him to a cave up the river about a mile, where he bound her, and, heedless of her cries for mercy, left her, telling her to be quiet until he came for her. She was found there by the two Americans, who, it appears, have followed us here for no other purpose than to rescue my daughter from myself. That is a strange case. As if I had not my daughter's welfare at heart. But they are prisoners, and my poor girl is safe; so what matter?"

"It matters to me," said Philip. "As for the Americans, they have done no harm; but I will not have the scoundrel Mattazurdo around me. Gomez, I shall be crowned king at ten o'clock to-day."

"Good! Your triumph will then be complete."

"At 10:30 I shall order Mattazudo's execution."

"To be shot?"

"To be shot."

"Your majesty!" gasped Francisco. "The safety of your crown depends——"

"Say no more. When Lola Garza shall have recovered sufficiently, she will become my wife, and Queen of Venezuela. The safety of the Queen must be assured. In no other way can this be done than by shooting the rascal who carried her away once, and who, no doubt, would try to do so again."

"Quite right," said Gomez, with a gleam of hate in his eyes.

It may perhaps be necessary to interject a short explanation here to show the reason Gomez was pleased at the prospect of Mattazudo's death. Yet it seems almost unnecessary, for the reader must already have seen the duplicity toward Gomez with which Mattazudo acted.

Don Juan, having answered all the questions Philip chose to ask, turned to go.

Bavarians Keep Dogs.

Bavarians are not extravagant, but no family is so poor that it can not afford to keep a dog. Dogs are everywhere in Munich, and every tram car passing has a string of dogs after it—dogs whose owners are passengers. At the entrance of the large shops groups of sedate, patient dogs can be seen waiting for their masters. In the cafes the dogs are prominent. Everybody takes his animal with him—sometimes two or three—and, after the dogs have lapped their beer or saucer of coffee—for the dog fares like his master—there is a great scampering and shuffling under the chairs and tables, but no one seems annoyed at the melee. It is from the banks that dogs are rigidly excluded, and a porter is placed at the door of each bank for the purpose of checking your pet, like an umbrella or a parcel. The Munich dog, mostly a dachshund, is intelligent and good-natured. He romps with the cats without biting them, carries umbrellas and canes much larger than himself, and is never disobedient, except when he has indulged in too much beer.

Origin of a Celebrated Jest.

When Mr. Evarts, who was my near relative and a man with whom I could take a liberty, came into the Senate, I said to him that we should have to amend the rules so that a motion to adjourn would be in order in the middle of a sentence, to which he replied that he knew of nobody in this country who objected to long sentences except the criminal classes.—Senator Hoar in Scribner's.

Gardeners mind their peas and Chinamen mind their queues.

WORRIES ARE MANY

WHEN JOHN CHINAMAN BUILDS HIMSELF A HOME.

Innumerable Precautions Necessary Lest Ill Fortune Be the Lot of the Inhabitants—Much Time Consumed in Preliminaries.

When a Chinaman has decided to build himself a house the first person he consults is not an architect, but a sort of wizard.

This individual examines the site and marks the exact spot for the front door. In China front doors must never face due south, though a partly southern aspect is highly desirable. Only the houses of the emperor and of high governing officials may front the south.

The wizard, or geomancer, next prescribes the exact size of the front door. An inch too much or too little might have disastrous consequences.

A screen of wood or of bricks must be erected about three yards in front of the door. This is to keep out any evil breath. Not human breath, nor malaria, nor bad odors; but some mysterious and fatal something which is only to be kept out by that screen.

The wizard next locates the spot for the kitchen fireplace. This also must not face south, because the south represents fire; and the kitchen fire and the south fire, working together, would be so powerful that the house would just naturally burn up.

Having settled the question of place, the wizard figures out a time when work may be begun with some degree of safety. For instance, if the earth god should be at home when the workmen began digging they might stick a spade into his august cranium and then there would be the devil to pay. The family living in that house would lie out.

The would-be builder must also find out whether it is a year when he may with safety begin anything. There are lots of these unlucky years. A man must not be married, for instance, when his age is 24 or 26, or any even number.

Having picked out a favorable year, John must next consider his two lucky months, for there are only two out of the twelve which are favorable to his undertaking new things. Then his yellow road days or good ones must be determined. There are more black road days than yellow ones, so the auspicious moments for starting his house are finally reduced to a pretty limited number.

But that isn't all. The lucky days of the whole family must next be figured out, compared with John's own yellow road days and the result boiled down. The proper moment for putting the front door in place, for building the kitchen fireplace and so on are then decided on, and, after waiting perhaps several months for the auspicious day to arrive, John can at last begin work.

Hard On the Twins.

Superstitions in Little Italy are many and remarkable. Tony is a bootblack—a Neapolitan—who has the run of certain large office buildings down town and who is much petted by the patrons of both sexes, many of whom are regular customers.

The other morning as he deftly whisked his polishing cloth across the toes of a feminine patron Tony held forth as follows:

"My modder great woman. She always have wonderful dreams. Last night—meedle of the night—maybe twalve, maybe two o'clock, she dream she whippa my two lil sisters—what you call 'em, tweens? You know eet awful bad luck to dream someding you can do and don' do eet. My modder learn that in home Italy. She shump up, pull ze tweens from ze bed and whippa 'em bot' hard, firs' one, den ze odder. Den go back to sleep. Zat how noddings bad won't happen to us to-day."

"But, Tony," cried the unsuperstitious listener, "how dreadfully uncomfortable for your little sisters!"

"Dasso," acquiesced the boy with a grin. "But I can't help. S'pose she might have dreamed of me?"—New York Press.

Wanted It Kept Fresh.

He took a seat in the middle of the car and proceeded leisurely to dig the fire out of the end of his cigar. The glowing coal of tobacco he dropped on the floor and trampled. The rest of the cigar he held in his hand.

It was a genuine cabbage—and made of skunk cabbage, at that Moist and stale, it gave out a stench that converted the car into a rolling asphyxiation chamber. Women gasped for breath and strong men coughed. The animal remained pleasantly oblivious.

At last a stout passenger in the opposite seat spoke pointedly.

"My friend," he said, "would you just as soon light that thing again?"—Newark News.

The Unlucky Number.

There were half a dozen candidates for the postoffice at Alexandria, Va. The row was settled a day or two ago by the appointment of a fine old fellow who has been in the office there for years.

One of the unsuccessful candidates based his claims on direct descent from George Washington and on the further important fact that he has thirteen children. He thought that would appeal to the President.

"Durn it," he said, when he heard that the President had appointed some one else, "I always knew thirteen was an unlucky number."

EX-MAYOR CRUMBO RECOMMENDS PE-RU-NA.

"My Endorsement of Pe-ru-na is Based On Its Merits."

—Ed. Crumbo.

ED. CRUMBO, Ex-Mayor of New Albany, Ind., writes from 511 E. Oak street:

"My endorsement of Peruna is based on its merits.

"If a man is sick he looks anxiously for something which will cure him, and Peruna will do the work.

"I know that it will cure catarrh of the head or stomach, indigestion, headache and any weary or sick feeling.

"It is bound to help anyone, if used according to directions.

"I also know dozens of men who speak in the highest terms of Peruna and have yet to hear of anyone being disappointed in it."

Mr. Crumbo, in a later letter, dated Aug 25, 1904, says:

"My health is good, at present, but if I should have to take any more medicine I will fall back on Peruna."

Narrow Escape.

"I can cure you, I believe," said the young doctor, "but you must drink no coffee—"

"I never do drink coffee," interrupted the patient.

"Ed, don't interrupt me. As I was saying, you must drink no coffee but purest Mocha. You must drink a little of that every morning."

The Resemblance.

"When Crittick was discussing my new tragedy with you," said De Riter, "I overheard him remark that it reminded him of Shakespeare. Of course, that was rather extravagant, but—"

"Not at all," replied Kandor, "he was discussing the plot. Shakespeare always stole his plots, you know."

A LIVING DEATH.

Vividly Described By a Citizen of Sioux Falls, South Dakota.

Andrew Johnson, 411 West Twelfth St., Sioux Falls, S. D., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills saved my life. My doctor, from a careful analysis of the urine and a diagnosis of the case, told me I could not live six weeks. I was struck down in the street with kidney trouble, and for a whole year could not leave the house. I lost flesh, my eyes failed me, I bloated at times, my back hurt and I suffered a living death. There seemed no hope until I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. Then I began to improve. The pain left gradually, the swellings subsided, I gained appetite and weight, and to make a long story short, I got well."

Arnold Daly, the actor, was talking about George Bernard Shaw.

"Mr. Shaw is a vegetarian," he said, "and I once attended a vegetarian banquet in London at which he was the guest of honor. The fare was excellent.

"Mr. Shaw, of course, had to make an address, and I well remember one thing he said. He said that they who persevered in vegetarianism soon became as fond of vegetables as a certain Scot was fond of—was fond of—"

He faltered and said that this Scot was one day observed to limp painfully. A friend stopped him and said:

"What? Lame?"

"Temporarily," the Scot replied. "I went home sober last night and my faithful dog grippit me by the leg."

Retort Courteous.

"If I was your wife," said the irate mother-in-law, "I'd give you poison."

The Best Guaranty of Merit Is Open Publicity.

Every bottle of Dr. Pierce's world-famed medicines leaving the great laboratory at Buffalo, N. Y., has printed upon its wrapper all the ingredients entering into its composition. This fact alone places Dr. Pierce's Family Medicines in a class all by themselves. They cannot be classed with patent or secret medicines because they are neither. This is why so many unprejudiced physicians prescribe them and recommend them to their patients. They know what they are composed of, and that the ingredients are those endorsed by the most eminent medical authorities.

The further fact that neither Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, the great stomach tonic, liver invigorator, heart regulator and blood purifier, nor his "Favorite Prescription" for weak, over-worked, broken-down, nervous women, contains any alcohol, also entitles them to a place all by themselves.

Many years ago, Dr. Pierce discovered that chemically pure glycerine, of proper strength, is a better solvent and preservative of the medicinal principles residing in our indigenous, or native, medicinal plants than is alcohol; and, furthermore, that it possesses valuable medicinal properties of its own, being demulcent, nutritive, antiseptic, and a most efficient antiferment.

Neither of the above medicines contains alcohol, or any harmful, habit-forming drug, as will be seen from a glance at the formula printed on each bottle wrapper. They are safe to use and potent to cure.

Not only do physicians prescribe the above, non-secret medicines largely, but the most intelligent people employ them—people who would not think of using the ordinary patent, or secret medicines.

Every ingredient entering into the composition of Dr. Pierce's medicines has the strongest kind of an endorsement from leading medical writers of the several schools of practice. No other medicines put up for like purposes has any such professional endorsement.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation. Constipation is the cause of many diseases. Cure the cause and you cure the disease. One "Pellet" is a gentle laxative, and two a mild cathartic. Druggists sell them, and nothing is "just as good." Easy to take as candy.

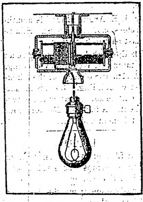
SHOWING THE WORLD'S PROGRESS

Wireless Telegraphy on Trains.

Train telegraphy without wires is the English way. The system was conceived by Sir Oliver Lodge and Dr. Alexander Muirhead. Their biggest problem has been with the aerial wire. In order to make tests under the most disadvantageous conditions an old car was used as a receiving station. The aerial wires were carried on porcelain insulators, the height of the wires varying from nine to fifteen inches above the curvature of the roof. From the roof the wires are carried in a small cable through a special insulated fitting to the interior of the van to the receiving instrument; here the message is written by a Lodge-Muirhead siphon recorder. The transmitting station is situated in a hut near Derby with an installation of apparatus for sending the message into the air. Outside the cabin is the aerial wire, which follows conventional lines, being supported upon masts forty feet from the ground and connected with a spark gap and coil for increasing the strength of the electrical impulse discharged from the transmitting instruments at the station. The experimenters find the greatest difficulty is due to the large amount of electrical energy required to obtain successful conversation on account of the short aerial wire used at the receiving station.

Portable Electric Light.

A Chicago man has devised an attachment which can readily be connected with the ordinary electric light fixture, enabling the light to be carried to various parts of the room. The casing which holds the apparatus has a screw-threaded nipple at the top, the nipple fitting into an ordinary electric bracket. Mounted on a shaft within the casing is a roller, which winds and unwinds, similar to a shade roller. Wrapped around the roller is the electrical wire connecting with the incandescent globe. The lamp can be carried from place to place as desired, the roller unwinding.



Portable Light.

When it is desired to shorten the wire the latter is allowed to unwind itself upon the roller. Such a simple attachment would be useful in many contingencies.

Height a Pump Will Draw.

An ordinary suction pump will not, in theory, draw water through a height of more than 34 feet. In practice it rarely operates through a height of 28 feet. The principle on which it is based is that the pressure of the air equals the weight of a 34-foot column of water, and if the atmospheric pressure is removed at any point, the water will rise to that height. The work which the suction pump does is to remove the atmospheric pressure, and it can be thus seen that the water will not rise more than 34 feet. In order to get the water to a higher level a force pump is used. This pushes the water up through a pipe or tube, and the height through which it will work is limited only by the motive power which drives it. The average atmospheric pressure is about 14 1-2 pounds to the square inch.

World's Highest Dock.

What is probably the highest dock in the world has recently been completed at Port Florence, on the Victoria Nyanza, in Uganda, at an altitude of 3,700 feet above the sea level. The dock has been constructed to accommodate the Nyanza fleet plying on the lake in conjunction with the Uganda railway. It measures 250 feet in length by 48 feet wide and 14 feet deep. It is excavated out of the solid rock by native labor, and occupied twelve months in construction, at a cost of $20,000. Both the time occupied and the cost of the undertaking were increased owing to plague visitations, which seriously interfered with the work.

Shorthand Typewriter.

M. Bivort of Paris has just patented a shorthand typewriter, which is described by Dr. Alfred Gradenwitz in the April number of Technical World magazine. From one to three syllables of a word are printed in plain type at each stroke of the keys. It is said that 50 words a minute can be written after a few days' practice, while a normal speed of from 125 to 150 words a minute is obtained in less than two months. Speeds of 200 words a minute and more are not unusual among expert operators. Since no conventional symbols but plain types are employed the notes are readable by any one familiar with the process.

A Soap Expert.

Prof. Eugene Girard, the pure food expert, said, recently, of food adulterations:

"It is a pity that the sense of taste can't detect the impurities in our food. This sense, which often causes us discomfort in the most wholesome circumstances, will thrill us with delight when we are eating a deadly mixture of copperas, sodium sulphate and salicylic acid. A strange sense!

"And yet—"

Prof. Girard smiled.

"And yet it is subtle enough in some ways.

"I remember sitting in a barber shop one day to have my hair cut.

"A man lay back in a velvet chair. He said in a muffled voice:

"'You have changed your brand of soap, haven't you?'

"The barber, looking pleased, replied:

"'Yes; how did you know?'

"'The taste is richer,' replied the man."

Doubt.

"George writes," said Mrs. Gayman, with an incredulous smile, "that he couldn't get back from New York last night because of very urgent business."

"Ah," remarked her old schoolmate from Boston, who was visiting her, "then that was an epistle from him the postman just left?"

"Well, you might call it an epistle, but it certainly isn't gospel."

SAVED BABY LYON'S LIFE.

Awful Sight From That Dreadful Complaint, Infantile Eczema—Mother Praises Cuticura Remedies.

"Our baby had that dreadful complaint, Infantile Eczema, which afflicted him for several months, commencing at the top of his head and at last covering his whole body. His sufferings were untold and constant misery, in fact there was nothing we would not have done to have given him relief. We finally procured a whole set of Cuticura Remedies, and in about three or four days he began to show a brighter spirit and really laughed, for the first time in a year. In about ninety days he was fully recovered. Praise for the Cuticura Remedies has always been our greatest pleasure, and there is nothing too good that we could say in their favor, for they certainly saved our baby's life, for he was the most awful sight that I ever beheld prior to the treatment of the Cuticura Remedies. Mrs. Maebelle Lyon, 1826 Appleton Ave., Parsons, Kan., July 18, 1905."

Appropriate Answer.

Cholly Sappy—Er—really, Miss Kandor, don't know why you should tweat me as you do. Why do you say you "don't like my face?"

Miss Kandor—Because.

Cholly Sappy—"Because?" There's no reason in that.

Miss Kandor—Well, there isn't any in your face, either.

Women in Our Hospitals

Appalling Increases in the Number of Operations Performed Each Year—How Women May Avoid Them.

Miss Ruby Mushrush
Mrs. Alice Berryhill

Going through the hospitals in our large cities one is surprised to find such a large proportion of the patients lying on those snow-white beds women and girls, who are either awaiting or recovering from serious operations.

Why should this be the case? Simply because they have neglected themselves. Female troubles are certainly on the increase among the women of this country—they creep upon them unawares, but every one of those patients in the hospital beds had plenty of warning in that bearing-down feeling, pain at left or right of the abdomen, nervous exhaustion, pain in the small of the back, dizziness, flatulency, displacements of the organs or irregularities. All of these symptoms are indications of an unhealthy condition of the female organs, and if not heeded the penalty has to be paid by a dangerous operation. When these symptoms manifest themselves, do not drag along until you are obliged to go to the hospital and submit to an operation—but remember that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has saved thousands of women from surgical operations.

When women are troubled with irregular, suppressed or painful periods, weakness, displacement or ulceration of the organs, that bearing-down feeling, inflammation, backache, bloating (or flatulency), general debility, indigestion, and nervous prostration, or are beset with such symptoms as dizziness, lassitude, excitability, irritability, nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, "all-gone" and "want-to-be-left-alone" feelings they should remember there is one tried and true remedy.

The following letters cannot fail to bring hope to despairing women.

Miss Ruby Mushrush, of East Chicago, Ind., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I have been a great sufferer with irregular periods and female trouble, and about three months ago the doctor, after using the X-Ray on me, said I had an abcess and would have to have an operation. My mother wanted me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as a last resort, and it not only saved me from an operation but made me entirely well."

Mrs. Alice Berryhill, of 313 Boyce Street, Chattanooga, Tenn., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"Three years ago life looked dark to me. I had ulceration and inflammation of the female organs and was in a serious condition.

"My health was completely broken down and the doctor told me that if I was not operated upon I would die within six months. I told him I would have no operation but would try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. He tried to influence me against it but I sent for the medicine that same day and began to use it faithfully. Within five days I felt relief but was not entirely cured until I used it for some time.

"Your medicine is certainly fine. I have induced several friends and neighbors to take it and I know more than a dozen who had female troubles and who to-day are as well and strong as I am from using your Vegetable Compound."

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once removes such troubles. Refuse to buy any other medicine, for you need the best.

Mrs. Pinkham, daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham, invites all sick women to write her for advice. Her advice and medicine have restored thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Succeeds Where Others Fail.

Most people would far rather listen to undeserved praise than to merited criticism.

HIGH CLASS DRUGGISTS AND—OTHERS.

The better class of druggists, everywhere, are men of scientific attainments and high integrity, who devote their lives to the welfare of their fellow men in supplying the best of remedies and purest medicinal agents of known value, in accordance with physicians' prescriptions and scientific formulæ. Druggists of the better class manufacture many excellent remedies, but always under original or officinal names and they never sell false brands, or imitation medicines. They are the men to deal with when in need of anything in their line, which usually includes all standard remedies and corresponding adjuncts of a first-class pharmacy and the finest and best of toilet articles and preparations and many useful accessories and remedial appliances. The earning of a fair living, with the satisfaction which arises from a knowledge of the benefits conferred upon their patrons and assistance to the medical profession, is usually their greatest reward for long years of study and many hours of daily toil. They all know that Syrup of Figs is an excellent laxative remedy and that it gives universal satisfaction, and therefore they are selling many millions of bottles annually to the well informed purchasers of the choicest remedies, and they always take pleasure in handing out the genuine article bearing the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—printed on the front of every package. They know that in cases of colds and headaches attended by biliousness and constipation and of weakness or torpidity of the liver and bowels, arising from irregular habits, indigestion, or over-eating, that there is no other remedy so pleasant, prompt and beneficial in its effects as Syrup of Figs, and they are glad to sell it because it gives universal satisfaction.

Owing to the excellence of Syrup of Figs, the universal satisfaction which it gives and the immense demand for it, imitations have been made, tried and condemned, but there are individual druggists to be found, here and there, who do not maintain the dignity and principles of the profession and whose greed gets the better of their judgment, and who do not hesitate to recommend and try to sell the imitations in order to make a larger profit. Such preparations sometimes have the name—"Syrup of Figs"—or "Fig Syrup" and of some piratical concern, or fictitious fig syrup company, printed on the package, but they never have the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—printed on the front of the package. The imitations should be rejected because they are injurious to the system. In order to sell the imitations they find it necessary to resort to misrepresentation or deception, and whenever a dealer passes off on a customer a preparation under the name of "Syrup of Figs" or "Fig Syrup," which does not bear the full name of the California Fig Syrup Co. printed on the front of the package, he is attempting to deceive and mislead the patron who has been so unfortunate as to enter his establishment, whether it be large or small, for if the dealer resorts to misrepresentation and deception in one case he will do so with other medicinal agents, and in the filling of physicians' prescriptions, and should be avoided by every one who values health and happiness. Knowing that the great majority of druggists are reliable, we supply the immense demand for our excellent remedy entirely through the druggists, of whom it may be purchased everywhere, in original packages only, at the regular price of fifty cents per bottle, but as exceptions exist it is necessary to inform the public of the facts, in order that all may decline or return any imitation which may be sold to them. If it does not bear the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—printed on the front of every package, do not hesitate to return the article and to demand the return of your money, and in future go to one of the better class of druggists who will sell you what you wish and the best of everything in his line at reasonable prices.

A LIVING DEATH.

Vividly Described By a Citizen of Sioux Falls, South Dakota.

Andrew Johnson, 411 West Twelfth St., Sioux Falls, S. D., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills saved my life. My doctor, from a careful analysis of the urine and a diagnosis of my case, had told me I could not live six weeks. I was struck down in the street with kidney trouble, and for a whole year could not leave the house. I lost flesh, my eyes failed me, I bloated at times, my back hurt and I suffered a living death. There seemed no hope until I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. Then I began to improve. The pain left gradually, the swellings subsided, I gained appetite and weight, and to make a long story short, I got well!"

Both the time occupied and the cost of the undertaking were increased owing to plague visitations, which seriously interfered with the work.

Shorthand Typewriter.

M. Bivort of Paris has just patented a shorthand typewriter, which is described by Dr. Alfred Gradenwitz in the April number of Technical World magazine. From one to three syllables of a word are printed in plain type at each stroke of the keys. It is said that 50 words a minute can be written after a few days' practice, while a normal speed of from 125 to 150 words a minute is obtained in less than two months. Speeds of 200 words a minute and more are not unusual among expert operators. Since no conventional symbols but plain types are employed the "notes" are readable by any one familiar with the process.

A Soap Expert.

Prof. Eugene Girard, the pure food expert, said recently of food adulterations:

"It is a pity that the sense of taste can't detect the impurities in our food. This sense, which often causes us discomfort in the most wholesome circumstances, will thrill us with delight when we are eating a deadly mixture of copperas, sodium sulphate and salicylic acid. A strange sense!

"And yet—"

Prof. Girard smiled.

"And yet it is subtle enough in some ways.

"I remember sitting in a barber shop one day to have my hair cut.

"A man lay back in a velvet chair. He said in a muffled voice:

"'You have changed your brand of soap, haven't you?'

The barber, looking pleased, replied:

"'Yes; how did you know?'

"'The taste is richer,' replied the man."

Doubt.

"George writes," said Mrs. Gayman, with an incredulous smile, "that he couldn't get back from New York last night because of very urgent business."

"Ah," remarked her old schoolmate from Boston, who was visiting her, "then that was an epistle from him the postman just left?"

"Well, you might call it an episle, but it certainly isn't gospel."

SAVED BABY LYON'S LIFE.

Awful Sight From That Dreadful Complaint, Infantile Eczema—Mother Praises Cuticura Remedies.

"Our baby had that dreadful complaint, Infantile Eczema, which afflicted him for several months, commencing at the top of his head and at last covering his whole body. His sufferings were untold and constant misery. In fact there was nothing we would not have done to have given him relief. We finally procured a whole set of Cuticura Remedies, and in about three or four days he began to show a brighter spirit and really laughed, for the first time in a year. In about ninety days he was fully recovered. Praise for the Cuticura Remedies has always been our greatest pleasure, and there is nothing too good that we could say in their favor, for they certainly saved our baby's life, for he was the most awful sight that I ever beheld prior to the treatment of the Cuticura Remedies. Mrs. Machelle Lyon, 1826 Appleton Ave., Parsons, Kan., July 18, 1905."

Appropriate Answer.

Cholly Sappy—Er—really, Miss Kandor, I don't know why you should tweat me as you do. Why do you say you "don't like my face?"

Miss Kandor—Because.

Cholly Sappy—"Because?" There's no reason in that.

Miss Kandor—Well, there isn't any in your face, either.

Women in Our Hospitals

Appalling Increases in the Number of Operations Performed Each Year—How Women May Avoid Them.

Miss Ruby Mushrush
Mrs. Alice Berryhill

Going through the hospitals in our large cities one is surprised to find such a large proportion of the patients lying on those snow-white beds women and girls, who are either awaiting or recovering from serious operations.

Why should this be the case? Simply because they have neglected themselves. Female troubles are certainly on the increase among the women of this country—they creep upon them unawares, but every one of these patients in the hospital beds had plenty of warning in that bearing-down feeling, pain at left or right of the abdomen, nervous exhaustion, pain in the small of the back, dizziness, flatulency, displacements of the organs or irregularities. All of these symptoms are indications of an unhealthy condition of the female organs, and if not heeded the penalty has to be paid by a dangerous operation. When these symptoms manifest themselves, do not drag along until you are obliged to go to the hospital and submit to an operation—but remember that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has saved thousands of women from surgical operations.

When women are troubled with irregular, suppressed or painful periods, weakness, displacement or ulceration of the organs, that bearing-down feeling, inflammation, backache, bloating (or flatulency), general debility, indigestion, and nervous prostration, or are beset with such symptoms as dizziness, lassitude, excitability, irritability, nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, "all-gone" and "want-to-be-left-alone" feelings they should remember there is one tried and true remedy.

The following letters cannot fail to bring hope to despairing women.

Miss Ruby Mushrush, of East Chicago, Ind., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I have been a great sufferer with irregular periods and female trouble, and about three months ago the doctor, after using the X-Ray on me, said I had an abcess and would have to have an operation. My mother wanted me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as a last resort, and it not only saved me from an operation but made me entirely well."

Mrs. Alice Berryhill, of 313 Boyce Street, Chattanooga, Tenn., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"Three years ago life looked dark to me. I had ulceration and inflammation of the female organs and was in a serious condition.

"My health was completely broken down and the doctor told me that if I was not operated upon I would die within six months. I told him I would have no operation but would try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. He tried to influence me against it but I sent for the medicine that same day and began to use it faithfully. Within five days I felt relief but was not entirely cured until I used it for some time.

"Your medicine is certainly fine. I have induced several friends and neighbors to take it and I know more than a dozen who had female troubles and who to-day are as well and strong as I am from using your Vegetable Compound."

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once removes such troubles. Refuse to buy any other medicine, for you need the best.

Mrs. Pinkham, daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham, invites all sick women to write her for advice. Her advice and medicine have restored thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Succeeds Where Others Fail.

Most people would far rather listen to undeserved praise than to merited criticism.

"Of course, I am sorry for you," said the girl with the cold storage heart, "but I really cannot wed you. It's so hard to be poor."

"Oh, I don't know," said the philosophical young man in the parlor scene. "It isn't half as hard as it is to get rich."

HIGH CLASS DRUGGISTS AND — OTHERS.

The better class of druggists, everywhere, are men of scientific attainments and high integrity, who devote their lives to the welfare of their fellow men in supplying the best of remedies and purest medicinal agents of known value, in accordance with physicians' prescriptions and scientific formula. Druggists of the better class manufacture many excellent remedies, but always under original or officinal names and they never sell false brands, or imitation medicines. They are the men to deal with when in need of anything in their line, which usually includes all standard remedies and corresponding adjuncts of a first-class pharmacy and the finest and best of toilet articles and preparations and many useful accessories and remedial appliances. The earning of a fair living, with the satisfaction which arises from a knowledge of the benefits conferred upon their patrons and assistance to the medical profession, is usually their greatest reward for long years of study and many hours of daily toil. They all know that Syrup of Figs is an excellent laxative remedy and that it gives universal satisfaction, and therefore they are selling many millions of bottles annually to the well informed purchasers of the choicest remedies, and they always take pleasure in handing out the genuine article bearing the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—printed on the front of every package. They know that in cases of colds and headaches attended by biliousness and constipation and of weakness or torpidity of the liver and bowels, arising from irregular habits, indigestion, or over-eating, that there is no other remedy so pleasant, prompt and beneficial in its effects as Syrup of Figs, and they are glad to sell it because it gives universal satisfaction.

Owing to the excellence of Syrup of Figs, the universal satisfaction which it gives and the immense demand for it, imitations have been made, tried and condemned, but there are individual druggists to be found, here and there, who do not maintain the dignity and principles of the profession and whose greed gets the better of their judgment, and who do not hesitate to recommend and try to sell the imitations in order to make a larger profit. Such preparations sometimes have the name—"Syrup of Figs"—or "Fig Syrup" and of some piratical concern, or fictitious fig syrup company, printed on the package, but they never have the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—printed on the front of the package. The imitations should be rejected because they are injurious to the system. In order to sell the imitations they find it necessary to resort to misrepresentation or deception, and whenever a dealer passes off on a customer a preparation under the name of "Syrup of Figs" or "Fig Syrup" which does not bear the full name of the California Fig Syrup Co. printed on the front of the package, he is attempting to deceive and mislead the patron who has been so unfortunate as to enter his establishment, whether it be large or small, for if the dealer resorts to misrepresentation and deception in one case he will do so with other medicinal agents, and in the filling of physicians' prescriptions, and should be avoided by every one who values health and happiness. Knowing that the great majority of druggists are reliable, we supply the immense demand for our excellent remedy entirely through the druggists, of whom it may be purchased, everywhere, in original packages only, at the regular price of fifty cents per bottle, but as exceptions exist it is necessary to inform the public of the facts, in order that all may decline or return any imitation which may be sold to them. If it does not bear the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—printed on the front of every package, do not hesitate to return the article and to demand the return of your money, and in future go to one of the better class of druggists who will sell you what you wish and the best of everything in his line at reasonable prices.

DO YOU KNOW

That it pays to advertise—in the Courier.

That too many men go out to look for work and stop there.

That the girl with the new dress can have a good time at any old kind of a party.

That a full moon is infinitely more attractive than a man in the same condition.

That every dog may have his day but the cats reserve the nights to themselves.

That it is funny how many people say they can do things but yet are never seen doing them.

That every one will surely want to hear the Orpheus Quintette's concert next Monday evening.

That a boy is always more eager to get up early on the morning he doesn't have to go to school.

That now is the season of the year when the good farmer gets busy tickling the soil and forgets politics.

That some one asks when Adam and Eve quit gamblig. It must have been when they lost their paradise.

That someone says a man would hardly ever have to know as much to be great as he thinks he knows without being it

That if a woman would be treated as a woman should be she must always be womanly, says the Martin County Sentinel,

That "Sunflower Philosophy" teaches us that beauty is worse than liquor; it intoxicates both the holder and the beholder.

That these "simple" gowns we read about that women think so nice, are never half so simple as the chumps who pay the price.

That you shouldn't expect too much of anyone and perhaps they will reciprocate overlooking your short comings—or even long goings.

That after all there is no catalogue house on earth which offers you goods more cheaply for the same quality than the merchants of Red Lake Falls do thro the columns of the Courier.

That there is no contradiction in the statement that though a woman does not sit on her husband's lap as often as she did before marriage, she probably sits on him oftener.

That it has been said when a church changes preachers pretty often, the other churches look at it that "funny" way women look at a woman who is always advertising for a hired girl.

That the California man who vended microscopes and left five widows must have looked at matrimony through the wrong end of the glass to have regarded it as such a little thing.

That Hapgood says journalism is far more than litertaure in America. Infinitely more thought, eneregy, originality and interest go into the making of a single newspaper than of myriads of books.

That Capt, Kidd was burying his ill-gotten treasure,

"I can't give it away, of course," he said, "It's tainted,"

Cheered, however, by the reflection that by the time posterity had succeeded in finding the swag every particle of taint would have vanished, he dug the hole still deeper—Ex,

That this will do for a short ghost story: A London daily tells a short modern ghost story A man was traveling on a northbound train out of London. Opposite was a silent stranger, his only companion. Between London and Derby no word passed. Then as the train drew out of Derby he said pleasantly: "Good line, this, sir, eh?" The stranger replied: "I think it is a beastly bad line. I was killed on it two years ago."

That here is a bit of wisdom from Secretary Leslie M. Shaw, who avows that he has always practiced it himself: "Give your opponent every good word to which he is entitled. It never pays to run the other fellow down. Praise him, and you indirectly recommend yourself and your commodoties. Then if you are beaten, you maintain your own self-respect, for the victor, by your own testimony, is a decent and able man. I know a lawyer who thinks all the other lawyers in the town where he lives are second-rate pettifoggers, and he says openly and boastingly. Nevertheless, those same men beat him two-thirds of the time in the trial of cases, He sneers at them they whip him, so he sneers at himself, for the judgment of a community is based upon results."

Red Lake Falls Merchants Lead in the Offer of Prizes.

With the coming of seed time much interest is awakening in the seed grain contest which will be carried on all over the state. Each contestant is required to raise one-fourth of an acre of wheat, oats or corn according to the rules of the contest to be found in Rural School bulletin No. 2, which can be had from County Superintendent of Schools McAnulty of this city.

The state offers $3000 in prizes, and there will be three prizes of round trip tickets from each county to Minneapolis at the time of holding the exhibit. In Red Lake county the merchants of the several towns will contribute a large number of prizes and for this purpose the county will be divided into districts and the prizes distributes accordingly. In this county the contest will be under the direction of Supt. McAnulty, who has so far secured the following list of prizes:

TWINE OUTPUT HEAVY.

Warden Wolfer Says There Will Be a Surplus for Dealers.

Warden Wolfer of the state prison at Stillwater, who was at the state capital Friday conferring with the members of the state board of control relative to the prison management, declared that it is very probable that on May 1 there will be some twine on hand at the prison subject to orders directly from dealers. Other years the management has sold only to farmers in single or club orders during the early part of the season and begun selling only to dealers about July 1. By that time there was usually no twine left for the dealers, and if there was it was too late in the season to do them any good, for the farmers that had not purchased from the prison by that time had purchased from other sources.

The prison has more twine on hand than usual at this time of the year and will have still more before havest. This is due to the increased capacity of the works.

"The output of the Stillwater plant this season," said tne warden Friday at the capitol, "will approximate thirteen and a quarter million pounds. This is a considerable increase over former years, and isdue to the installation of additional machinery. A large portion of the product represents the higher grades of twine. The twine is made into six grades, and while club orders have cut deeply into the total supply, still there will be enough twine produced to care for all small cash orders that may come in directly from the farmers up to the close of the 1906 season, which is generally in this state about Aug. 15. The state plant can care for a moderate number of additional club orders, while in all probability there will be a surplus, owing to the additional quantity manufactured this season on May 1 from which orders directly from dealers in twine will [illegible]ed."

CUPID INVOKES HABEAS CORPUS

Young Lochinvar Woos Fair Maid With Assistance of the Law's Strong Arm.

Stern Father Relents and the Same Couple is Married Twice In One Day.

A young Lochinvar came out of the east and he came in peace but finding his pathway beset with a hostile parent he girded himself about with the shield and buckler, the might, majesty and dominion of the law, and thus accoutred he sallied forth to give successful battle to perverse conditions, to return victorious with the maiden of his choice, to marry her—not once but twice—and to live happily ever afterwards. Thus Cupid, that herald fair, who marshaleth the way to love, teaches again the story that locksmiths are a fit subject of his merriest laughter.

Stripped of its romanticism, Theodore Keipes, a young man of Cloquet, came to this city last Friday to meet and to wed Adeline Prudhomme in pursuance of an agreement mutally had between them at some prior time. Fair Adeline was not at the trysting place and instant inquiry revealed the fact that Joseph Prudhomme, father to Adeline, hearing of the approaching nuptials and being opposed thereto, had come in from his farm and taken his unwilling daughter back to his unwanted protection. He was not so much opposed to the marriage as his paternal thought suggested the performance of conditions precedent. Theodore had worked for him before upon the farm, he would have Theodore do so again this year and when the harvest days were over he would give Theodore his daughter and the splendid sum of $100. But Theodore was wise. He knew where he could acquire greater sums of the circulating medium. He also knew that he could have the daughter too. He declined the offer but when he came following the bent of his marital desires he found an obstacle in the parental interference. Still he persisted in his wisdom. He sought forth the lawyer man. F. A. Grady was also wise. They consulted together. A writ of habeas corpus would lie. It was prepared and signed by Court Commissioner A. F. Toupin. The writ was served and the parties all appeared before the commissioner on Saturday. Now Joseph Prudhomme is more familiar with the things upon the farm than he is with forms of law and when he saw it was a writ of habeas corpus he yielded and proclaimed Theodore might have the daughter. That there might be no further interruptions Theodore and Adeline were married then and there by Mr. Toupin and to make it still more binding and to have the sanction of the church they were remarried later in the day by Father Fayolle of St. Joseph's church.

Mr. and Mrs. Keipes are married for keeps, have been spending the week visiting friends in this vicinity and expect to leave shortly for their future home in Cloquet.

County Seat Removal Will Slumber Awhile.

Thief River Falls Attorneys Are Given A Surprise.

There was an interesting little session in Clerk of Court Perrault's office last Thursday in which Attorneys Grady and Stanton figured and in which the piece de resistence of entertainment was the county seat fight. It resulted in a surprise for Mr. Stanton and will be extremely disappointing to the Thief River Falls adherents. It was also amusing in the light of the comments of the papers of Thief River Falls that the Red Lake Falls attorneys didn't know when they were defeated. But this is the story:

During the last term of court the Thief River Falls attorneys secured a peremptory writ of mandamus compelling the county commissioners to act in the matter, but the writ fixed no date for the meeting of the commissioners and therefore it was of no effect. A new writ was prepared and Mr. Stanton appeared before the clerk Thursday to obtain his signature. Acting in accordance with the law, Mr. Perrault declined to affix his signature until a judgment had been filed. The judgment was produced and the clerk proceeded to transcribe it. The work required something over an hour and it was that hour that blasted the hopes of the Thief River Falls people of being able to load the court house on a dray and have it set up in their town, occupants and all, the very same day. The clerk had just finished entering the judgment when Mr. Grady stepped forward with a notice of appeal and a supercedias bond. They were filed next and when Mr. Stanton asked to have his writ issue he was informed that it could not be done as an appeal had been taken to the supreme court. There was an area of low barometer centering in the clerk's office for a few minutes and vows of vengeance and other things. There were also threats to go to Crookston and return immediately, if not sooner, and show these Red Lake Falls attorneys that the Thief River Falls attorneys were not to be trifled with.

But the nearest any one has come to showing the Red Lake Falls attorneys anything happened this morning when Mr. Stanton served on Messrs. Boughton and Grady an order to show cause why the appeal should not be set aside. A hearing on this order will be had in the supreme court next Tuesday.

Announcement.

About the first of May I shall retire from the hardware business in Red Lake Falls. The business will be conducted after that date by Sam E. Hunt and G. A. Kankel, who have bought my stock of hardware and fixtures and good will.

I wish to thank my friends and customers for the liberal patronage they have given me in the nearly 28 years of business in this city. Quite a number of my customers of today have been doing business with me steadily since I first started here in 1878.

I hope and trust that you will continue to do business with the young men, Hunt & Kankel, whom you will find agreeable, accomodating and competent business men and thoroughly reliable in every respect.

To those who are indebted to me I would urgently request that you call in and arrange for a settlement.

Wishing you one and all a prosperous year, I am

Sincerely yours,
—Frank E. Hunt.

ASSESSMENTS FOR DITCH BENEFITS

Dr. Conrad Adler of Berlin, Germany, spent many yeers in the leading hospitals of Europe, studying appendicitis and stomach diseases. The prescription with which he cured thousands of these cases is now put up in bottles under the name of "Dr. Adler's Treatment," and sent to this country direct from Berlin. It is not a patent medicine but Dr. Adler's own prescription as used by himself for all his patients. It is the only known cure for appendicitis and chronic stomach diseases, and we are glad of our good fortune in getting this remedy for the people of this vicinity. Large bottles for a dollar at W. A. Schreiter.

VESUVIUS CLAIMS OVER 500 VICTIMS

APPALLING LOSS OF LIFE IS CHARGED TO THE DEATH-DEALING VOLCANO.

PEOPLE IN PANIC OF FEAR

TERROR-STRICKEN THEY FLEE BY THOUSANDS IN ALL DIRECTIONS.

Naples, April 11.—Reports of fatalities consequent upon the eruption of Mount Vesuvius are coming in. According to information received late last night probably as many as 500 lives were lost. It is said that more than 200 perished in the district of San Guiseppe, while from the ruins of a church which collapsed owing to the weight of ashes on the roof, 49 corpses were extricated, and it is asserted that at Sorrento 37 persons were killed by falling houses.

A railway train from San Guiseppe for Naples was derailed owing to showers of stones from the crater.

Cavalry Is Halted.

Cavalry proceeding to the succor of the inhabitants of the devastated section have been unable to make progress, the rain, falling on the ashes a foot deep, having made it impossible for the horses to travel.

Yesterday was a day of terror for the cities, towns and country about Mount Vesuvius. At midnight the situation appears more assuring, the lava streams having diminished in volume, and in some directions have ceased altogether, while a copious railfall is cooling the lava where it remains stationary.

Town Destroyed.

This has caused the practical destruction of San Guiseppe, a place of 6,000 inhabitants. All except 200 of the people had fled from San Guiseppe and these 200 assembled in a church to attend mass. While the priest was performing his sacred office the roof fell in and about sixty persons were badly injured.

At Ottajano five churches and ten houses fell under the weight of ashes and cinders, which lie four feet deep on the ground. In the fall of the fall of the buildings about twelve persons were killed and many were injured. The village is completely deserted.

Terrible Devastation.

Reports from coast and inland towns depict terrible devastation. San Giorgio, Cremona, Portici, Resina and Torre del Greco have been almost completely abandoned. The inhabitants of Torre Annunziato are prepared to leave at a moment's warning. Somma Vesuviana is another village which has suffered most severely.

Although the eruption of the volcano is less violent than it was twenty-four hours ago the ashes are still falling in great quantities. Refugees from the threatened or destroyed villages are pouring into Naples by the thousands, arriving in every description of conveyance and on foot.

Fleeing in Every Direction.

The roads are crowded with processions of men and women carrying crosses and crying piteously. Special railway trains, warships and steamers are employed in conveying the homeless people to Naples, Rome and Castellammare, while numbers of people are fleeing over land in the direction of Caserta. Not less than 15,000 refugees have reached Castellammare.

King Victor Emmanuel and Queen Helena have further endeared themselves to the people by their activity in behalf of sufferers by the eruption, and the government is exerting itself for the relief of the destitute.

King and Queen on Scene.

The king and queen and their suites arrived at Naples yesterday morning from Rome. When the royal train reached the station the eruption of the volcano was almost at its worst, but both insisted upon leaving immediately for Torre Annunziata, the king declaring:

"If Torre Annunziato is in danger it is my duty to be there."

Traveling in automobiles, and accompanied by the duke and duchess of Aosta, and the Princess of Schleswig-Holstein, they set out for the afflicted districts.

About 150,000 refugees from the district of Somma Vesuviana have sought shelter here and elsewhere. The stream of lava, which has been threatening Torre Annunziato has remained stationary since Sunday evening so that the danger that the place would be overwhelmed appears to have passed.

SUGGESTS CHANGE OF DATE.

America's Message to Russia Anent The Hague Conference.

Washington, April 11.—The state department has suggested to the Russian government, through Ambassador Rosen, that the period suggested in the Russian note for the convention of the second Hague conference, namely, the early part of July, would be inconvenient to America and to some of the other countries of this hemisphere, which are expected to be represented at The Hague.

SHOWS NO SIGN OF LIFE

ONLY DESOLATION AND SLOWLY DECLINING PANIC NOW REMAIN.

Naples, April 15. — The period of danger has passed, and only desolation and slowly declining panic remain. Mount Vesuvius has ceased to give any sign of life. The volcano seems to have spent itself in one enormous convulsion. Director Matteucci, who heroically holds his post in the observatory, believes that the eruption has ended, and every outward indication confirms this view. No more rumblings come from the bowels of the earth, giving terrifying warning to the inhabitants. The volcano is hidden behind a thick curtain of smoke, which rises from the crater and then spreads and falls, enveloping a vast circle in semi-darkness. Naples is just beyond this circle, and yesterday the city was bathed in sunshine while the ugly, black pall hung to the westward over a belt midway between Rome and Naples.

Conditions Much Better.

Conditions here were much better. The weather was fine and the wind shifted so that the clouds of ashes from the volcano were carried toward Caserta. Apprehensions gave place to a smiling confidence in which there was little reflection of the terror which had prevailed for the past week. But in other quarters there is no escaping from the awful evidence of the volcano's fury. At Boscotrecase the exhumation of the dead is being carried on by soldiers, who, owing to the advanced state of decomposition of the corpses, are unable to work more than an hour at a time.

After the last great eruption which occurred in 1872, the land covered by cinders did not produce crops for seven years, and the losses in this respect alone averaged $20,000,000 yearly. It is believed that it will take ten years to bring the land under cultivation again.

TORNADO WRECKS BUILDINGS.

Several Persons Injured and Considerable Damage Done in Kansas.

Wichita, Kan., April 14.—A tornado struck Stafford, Kan., at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, resulting in injury to several persons and demolishing several houses. The storm came from the southwest, passed over the business part of the town without damage, first striking two blocks east of Main street. Here the home of Fred Tanner and the parsonage of the Congregational church were demolished. The Quaker church was blown down, the debris falling on the home of Mrs. Ella Granger, which was also destroyed. Mrs. Granger was injured, but not seriously.

The storm then lifted, but struck again in the northeast part of the town, demolishing several houses and damaging others.

Four miles west of Stafford another tornado blew down several farm buildings and seriously injured R. F. Silvers. This storm passed two miles east of Hudson, where other small damage is reported.

Two Killed in Texas.

Bertram, Tex., April 14.—Briggs, a town about eighteen miles north of here, was swept by a tornado about 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon and almost destroyed. Two persons are reported killed and thirty injured, six fatally.

All wires are down. The tornado was preceded and followed by a heavy rain and hail storm and crops were considerably damaged.

SCHOONER AN DFOUR LOST.

Attempt to Make Harbor Fails and the Storm Springs Seams.

Boston, April 13. — The Portland steamer Bay State, which arrived here last evening, brought news of the loss of the schooner Sallie B., Philadelphia for Bangor, and four of the crew. The vessel foundered in Massachusetts bay Tuesday.

The two survivors, Capt. H. L. Hopkins of Brewer, Me., and John Mulhein, a native of Finland, were rescued off Cape Porpoise.

The Sallie B. sailed from Port Johnson, N. J., a week ago with a cargo of coal for Bangor. She ran into a snowstorm Monday night and Capt. Hopkins tried to make Booth bay. But the heavy seas opened her seams and the crew was forced to launch the boat, all succeeding in getting in. The schooner went down a moment later.

Soon afterward a wave washed overboard Mate Campbell, Cook Arthur L. Gray and John Campbell. The three were lost. Capt. Hopkins and Seamen Mulhein and Nattieher saved themselves by holding on to a thwart. Later they bailed the boat and headed her into the seas. They suffered intensely from the cold and finally Nattieher's mind gave way. He died a few hours later.

CHEWS OFF CRUSHED ARM.

Man Caught in Machinery Frees Himself With His Teeth.

Sycamore, Ill., April 15. — Frank Rollins, engineer of the De Kalb-Sycamore company, was adjusting an oil cup on a big waterworks pump when his sleeve caught and his arm was drawn into the cog wheels, where it was ground so that it hung to his body by fragments. He was alone, and to free himself chewed off the ligaments. He then went to a nearby drug store, where he died from loss of blood.

TO ESTABLISH MAMMOTH BANK

FOR PURPOSE OF REGULATING RATES AND PREVENTING STRINGENCY.

PEACE HOVERS OVER ZION CITY

DOWIE CHANGES HIS MIND ABOUT TAKING MATTER INTO COURTS.

New York, April 15.—It was learned yesterday that a plan was under consideration to establish here a bank with a capital of $50,000,000 for the purpose of regulating money rates and preventing periods of money stringency and accompanying high rates of interest. The movement was given some impetus by the recent stringency in the money market. One suggestion was made that the stock of the National City bank be increased by $25,000,000 or $50,000,000 in order to give it sufficient control of the financial situation in Wall street to prevent the recurrence of extreme interest rates.

Trust Company Suggested.

Another suggestion was that a trust company be organized under the direction of the National City bank. Officials of the bank declared, however, that they were not taking more than a passing interest in the various plans. Bankers who have taken an interest in the movement assert that such an institution might regulate imports and exports of gold somewhat as does the Bank of England. A leading bank official said, however, that the only cure for such money evils as the local market has recently witnessed lies in the establishment of a central bank which shall be given the power of issue in times of emergency.

Questions Propounded.

A series of questions bearing on the project has been forwarded by the special currency committee of the New York State chamber of commerce to clearing house committees of the leading cities of the United States. The bankers are asked to notify the New York committee whether they believe that a central note issuing bank, similar to those in France, Germany, Austria-Hungary and other countries in Europe, with branches in leading cities and with the power to rediscount for national banks and state banking institutions, but not for individuals, would be a better solution of the present currency problem than a plan permitting all banks to issue notes against their resources."

APOSTLE WILLING TO RETIRE.

If Given 5 Per Cent of Property and Reinstated Temporarily.

Chicago, April 15. — Peace hovers over the warring factions that are endeavoring to secure control of Zion City. This statement was authorized by the legal advisers of both "Dr." Dowie and General Overseer Voliva. After an all-day's conference, Emil C. Wetten, representing Dowie, said:

"We are nearer a peaceful solution of this question than we have been at any stage of the proceedings. We have changed our minds about filing a bill in equity declaring void the transfer of the property at Zion City by Voliva to Deacon Alexander Granger, and will await further developments.

"As a matter of formality we filed a paper in the circuit court of Lake county declaring that the power of attorney granted to General Overseer Voliva by Dowie is void, inasmuch as Voliva has not acted in accordance with instructions given him for the execution of the powers.

"Dowie sent Voliva a telegram revoking the power of attorney. This telegram said:

"'Inform all Zion that your appointment is on the face of it temporary, and that your instructions do not permit you to change my policies in any particular.'"

Vindication; Resignation.

Jacob Newman, counsel for Voliva, said:

"We have documentary evidence that Dowie and his advisers admit that 95 per cent of the property belonged to the Christian Catholic church. He has, furthermore, acquiesced in the proposition that if given 5 per cent of this property, after he has been installed in temporary control, both ecclesiastical and financial, he will retire. In other words Dowie desires to be vindicated, reinstated with the full powers attending the 'first apostleship of the Christian Catholic church,' whereupon he will issue an edict declaring that 95 per cent of the property in Zion City belongs to the church and that 5 per cent belongs to him."

According to conservative estimates given out by the two factions this would give Dowie $1,000,000 and the church $19,000,000.

FIREBUG ESCAPES ARREST

By Blowing Off the Top of His Head With a Shotgun.

Columbus Grove, Ohio, April 15. — Clarence Frank, a confessed firebug, frustrated the plans of the police to put him under arrest at Leipsic Junction, Putnam county, yesterday, by blowing off the top of his head with a shotgun when officers were about to arrest him. Frank acknowledged that he was responsible for the blaze which threatened to destroy his home, a dwelling at Leipsic.

NEWS OF THE Northwest.

LAKE TARS ARE SCARED.

Vessels Open Season on Friday and the Thirteenth.

Duluth, April 15.—G. A. Tomlinson, a Duluth vesselman, dealt old sailors' traditions an awful blow when he opened the season of interlake navigation for his fleet on Lake Superior by sending three boats into commission, the Saxona and Sonora to Buffalo with grain and the Hoover & Mason to Fort William to load grain for Buffalo. It was not only Friday, but the 13th of the month, and this desperate combination of so-called unlucky day and number made some of the old sailors gasp at Mr. Tomlinson's temerity. But it was Good Friday, and one old sailor said that this fact "may help some" in avoiding disaster to the boats this season.

It is recalled that the Zenith City went into commission on Friday, Sept. 13, some years ago on her maiden trip, and she has been a very lucky boat. The owners and managers of lake boats do not take much stock in the old traditions of the sailors, but the air in the forecastle is heavy with it.

WHOLESALE GRAFT CHARGED.

Former Supervisor Strauss Talks to Milwaukee Grand Jury.

Milwaukee, April 15. — Wholesale methods by which the county is said to have been mulcted by indicted supervisors was testified to in the municipal court yesterday by ex-Supervisor Edward F. Strauss in the trial of Fred Hartung, an assemblyman charged with accepting a $1,500 bribe. Strauss said that the money had been divided among twenty-three members of the county board. The district attorney demanded the names and court was adjourned before the question could be answered.

MILL CITY MAN HELD UP.

M. A. Stevens, a Drummer, Is Beaten and Robbed by Thugs.

Yankton, S. D., April 15. — M. A Stevens, a traveling man whose home is in Minneapolis, was severely injured as the result of being held up by two thugs in this city. Stevens was returning to a hotel in company with two strangers, one of whom represented himself as a commercial man, when one of the men knocked him insensible and robbed him of $35. A man arrested on suspicion has confessed to receiving part of the stolen money. A search is being made for the second man.

ENGINE KILLS ROBBER.

Runs Down Man With Package of Dynamite.

Bozeman, Mont., April 15.—An unidentified man about twenty-five years old was struck by a Northern Pacific engine in the yards here early yesterday and so badly injured that he cannot live. On his person was found twenty-five pounds of dynamite, fuses, caps, two revolvers and a black mask. He was struck while near a water tank, and it is thought that his intention was to hold up the transcontinental train and dynamite the express car when the train stopped there for water.

LYNX ATTACKS MAN'S HORSE.

Beast Attacks Horse and North Dakotan Shoots It.

Minot, N. D., April 15.—John Tyler, a farmer living near Stanley, brought a lynx to Minot yesterday which he had killed north of Stanley. Tyler was riding toward town when suddenly a large animal made a lunge toward his horse, fastening on his haunches. The frightened animal lurched ahead and in a desperate struggle, managed to free itself from the lynx, which Tyler shot with a revolver. This is the first lynx ever seen in this section of the state.

TWO MEET VIOLENT DEATHS.

Trains Kill Men at Proctor and Cloquet.

Duluth, Minn., April 15. — P. E. Woods, chief pumpman for the Duluth, Missabe & Northern railway, was accidentally killed by an ore train at Proctor yesterday. He is survived by a widow and several small children.

John Oberg, a machine tender employed at a Cloquet sawmill, was killed by a train last evening while on his way home from work. Oberg was married and is survived by a widow and children.

KILLED IN TRAIN WRECK.

Rhinelander, Wis., April 15. — The North-Western freight, north-bound, was wrecked near McNaughton late last night. A woodsman was killed, and trains are obliged to take the old main line, via Monico Junction and Watersmeet to avoid the wreckage.

Safe Is Blown at Albert Lea.

Albert Lea, Minn., April 15.—One of the big safes in the warehouse and storeroom of the Thompson Seed company of this city was blown open last night. About $400 was taken. It was the work of professionals.

Train Stalled in Snow.

Aberdeen, S. D., April 15. — Thirty inches of snow is reported at Bowdle, S. D., and is still falling. A Milwaukee train is stalled near that town. In Aberdeen it has been raining steadily for two days.

JURY PAYS PRISONER'S FINE.

Members Pass the Hat to Help Convicted Man.

Green Bay, Wis., April 14. — It is rather a novel procedure for the members of a jury to pay the fine of a man they have just found guilty, but that is what occurred during the first term of the federal court held in this city since territorial days. Joseph Landwehr, charged with illegally cutting timber from the Oneida reservation, was found guilty and Judge Quarles sentenced him to pay a fine of $25. Moved to pity for the man's apparent poverty and hard luck, the jury, feeling that its duty had been performed in finding him guilty, proceeded to take up a collection among themselves for money with which to pay his fine. A fund of $17 was raised and Landwehr was able to furnish the balance himself and walked from the court room a free man, after thanking the jury.

CARVED UP IN ROW.

Railroad Laborer Almost Bleeds to Death From Wounds.

Billings, Mont., April 14. — Albin Hanson, a railroad laborer, became engaged in a difficulty with John Lindstrum in this city last evening and was slashed across the upper and back part of the head with a pocketknife, receiving a dangerous and probably fatal wound. The knife blade penetrated to its full length, from the back part of the man's ear through his cheek and down almost to his mouth, severing the temporal artery and the outer jugular vein, causing Hanson to come very near bleeding to death before the flow could be stopped.

$50,000 FIRE AT FARGO.

Explosion of Gas Causes Blaze in the Walker Block.

Fargo, N. D., April 14.—A gas explosion caused a $50,000 fire in the Walker block yesterday. Flames spread rapidly from the basement, where the explosion occurred. This was occupied by the North Dakota Newspaper Union. Walker Brothers & Hardy, job printers, estimate their loss at $35,000, with $30,000 insurance. The newspaper union's loss is about $5,000; fully insured. The offices of the Merchants' National Fire Insurance company and Architect Beebe, on the third floor, were badly damaged, and considerable loss resulted to books and fixtures.

IS CAUGHT WITH BAD MONEY.

Tagus (N. D.) Man Arrested for Passing Phoney Money.

Minot, N. D., April 14.—Dell Benton a young man residing at Tagus, has been placed under arrest on a charge of passing counterfeit money. Monday Benton purchased a railroad ticket to Berthold and tendered the agent a $5 bill in payment, receiving $4.30 in change. Later the agent discovered that the bill was bogus and swore out a warrant for Benton's arrest. When he was searched, it is said, ten other bills of the same denomination were found on Benton's person.

MAN SAVED; HORSES DROWN.

Bemidji Liveryman Has a Narrow Escape From Death.

Bemidji, Minn., April 14.—While attempting to drive across Mud lake, a team belonging to J. A. McAvoy, a Bemidji liveryman, broke through the ice. McAvoy was precipitated into the water, but managed to cling to the ice. He had considerable difficulty in pulling himself out, as the ice was so rotten that it broke beneath his weight. Finally, however, he succeeded in reaching the shore, but the horses, a valuable pair, were drowned.

DEFEAT SCHOOL PROPOSITION.

Citizens Say Building Planned Is Too Small for the City.

Chisholm, Minn., April 14.—Because the citizens think the amount not adequate for the erection of a building of sufficient size, the proposition to bond the school district and make application to the state board for a loan of $6,500 for the erection of a school building here, was defeated at the special election held last night.

Lawyer Is Pardoned.

Helena, Mont., April 14.—After serving nearly all of his sentence of one year in the state penitentiary for grand larceny, J. Samuel Castleberry, a Bozeman lawyer, was released yesterday, the state board having approved the governor's pardon. Castleberry was convicted for withholding funds of the Continental Life Insurance company, of which he was an agent.

Glyndon, Minn., April 14.—Mrs. Peter H. Anderson, who was terribly burned in a kerosene explosion that killed her daughter-in-law and infant grandson, died yesterday.

Famous Resort Destroyed.

Thomasville, Ga., April 14. — The famous resort hotel, The Piney Woods, was burned last night. Flying sparks fired the south portion of the town. Three blocks of samal stores were swept away. Loss, $90,000.

Lies in Lake All Winter.

New London, Minn., April 14.—The body of Archie Amy, who was drowned in Stauffer's lake, six miles north of here, last fall, was recovered yesterday.

SPRING VALLEY CHURCH IS TO HAVE GOLDEN JUBILEE

First Congregational Society Will Be Fifty Years Old on May 24.

PIONEER CHURCH OF SPRING VALLEY.

First Congregational society's house of worship which has been meeting place since 1868.

The First Congregational church of Spring Valley, which is to celebrate its fiftieth anniversary on May 24, was organized on that date in the year 1856 by Rev. Ira Tracy, a returned missionary from China, with the following fifteen charter members: Washington Lloyd and wife, Daniel S oville and wife, J. G. Bouldin and wife, Job Strong and wife, Joseph B. Thayer, Joseph R. Kellogg, Mrs. Eleanor Kellogg, Mrs. Olive Higby, Mrs. Lydia Scoville, Mrs. Mary Cummings and Mrs. Charity Billings. All of them are deceased except one, who is not now a member or resident of this place. Services at first were held in stores, barns, private houses, the hotel and school house. In the year 1868 a part of the present structure was erected, and the church has been enlarged twice since that date.

W. L. Kellogg has been its clerk forty-three years. The church has had seventeen pastors, the present one, Rev. Everett Lesher, assuming charge on Jan. 1, 1903. The total roll of membership has been 704, of whom 461 united on confession of faith and 244 by letter. Eighty-nine deaths have occurred. The present membership is 236.

CARVER COUNTY SOLDIER'S MONUMENT.

Memorial erected at Waconia is only tribute of its kind contributed by a county of Minnesota.

The Carver county soldiers' monument was erected in the public park at Waconia in 1890. At its dedication Judge Rhea of Minneapolis was the principal orator. The monument is of white bronze, cost about $2,000, and is twenty-five feet high and six feet square at the base. On one side of the shaft is inscribed:

"Dedicated by the citizens of this county in honor of the men who served in the Union army during the Civil war, 1861-1865."

On the plates above the rough surface are the members of four G. A. R. posts of this county. On the plates above are inscribed the names of more than 800 soldiers who enlisted and resided in Carver county. The shaft is surmounted by a life-size figure representing a soldier guarding the flag.

BUILDING BOOM FOR DULUTH.

Northeastern Corner of the State Preparing to Improve.

A building boom of large proportions will be seen in the northeastern corner of the state of Minnesota this summer. Duluth already gives signs of running close to the $5,000,000 mark for the year.

Not only this, but the range towns will all put from $50,000 to $100,000 in new buildings, and some of the larger towns may run higher than that. It will fall to Duluth to supply many of the contractors, much of the material and nearly all of the mechanics for the range building, and it promises to be about all Duluth can care for. There is much fear among builders that there may be considerable embarrassment to find men before the year is out.

The larger part of the building in Duluth will be of residences. There are some jobbing houses to go up and some office buildings to be added to; also an Elks' clubhouse of seven stories, 50x140 feet, a Young Men's Christian association house 100x140 feet and probably five or six stories, and other large blocks to be built.

BARBER RANG UP THE TIP.

New Yorker Tells How They Do Things in Boston.

"When I tipped a barber in Boston," remarked a New Yorker who doesn't travel much, "he rang it up on the cash register just as he had the price of the shave. He wasn't the boss, either.

"Signs of 'suites to let' were common, but not one flat or apartment to let.

"Motorists speed faster there than in our city limits, and do not seem to fear arrest.

"Bostonians are rougher and with less cause on their elevated road than we are on the subway, elevated or Brooklyn bridge.

"Boston men do not give up seats to women on the surface lines. Even in the Back bay cars women hang on straps, in theater gowns, and men read newspapers seated.

"At the theaters no one ever breaks the rule about not tipping the boy in the coat room except New Yorkers."

Congress.

Resume of the Week's Proceedings.

Monday.

Washington, April 10.—Mr. McLaurin and Mr. Morgan addressed the senate yesterday on the railway rate question, the former advocating legislation and the latter opposing.

Notwithstanding that this was District day in the house and that body resolved itself into a committee on council for the purpose of making laws for the District of Columbia, general interest was shown in the bills requiring non-resident pupils to pay tuition and regulating the employment of child labor.

Tuesday.

Washington, April 11. — For more than four hours yesterday Mr. Bailey held the undivided attention of the senate with a speech in reply to Mr. Spooner and Mr. Knox, and just before its conclusion there was a significant suggestion from Mr. Hale indicating the possibility of an understanding and an early vote on the railway rate bill. The day was one of the most notable in the recent history of the senate. Very few senators were absent at any time during the day and every seat in the galleries, public, private, senatorial, diplomatic and executive, were held by its occupants with marked tenacity.

There were comparatively few interruptions during the day and there was no effort at applause until the close of the discussion, when there was a spontaneous burst of handclapping in the galleries. Mr. Bailey set out with the one end in view of establishing the soundness of his contention that congress has power to deny to the inferior United States courts the right to suspend the order of the interstate commerce commission pending the final disposition of cases arising under the proposed law. This he undertook to do by citing innumerable decisions of the courts and quoting many other authorities.

The house for seven hours yesterday had under consideration the postoffice appropriation bill, but only in a few instances were the provisions considered. A humorous speech was made by J. Adam Bede (Minn.), and Charles A. Towne (N. Y.) spoke in behalf of the Jamestown exposition.

Wednesday.

Washington, April 12.—In the senate yesterday Mr. Aldrich expressed the opinion that the end of the general debate on the railway rate bill would become apparent before the end of the present week, then an agreement on a day to vote would be reached. The statement was made in response to a request by Mr. Tillman for such an agreement. There was no other discussion of the rate bill during the day owing to the fact that no senator was prepared to speak. It was announced that Mr. Spooner would reply to-day to Mr. Bailey's speech.

The session was almost entirely devoted to the consideration of the conference report on the bill providing for the final settlement of the affairs of the five civilized tribes of Indians. No conclusion was reached.

After nearly ten days of general debate with the postoffice appropriation bill as a vehicle for the discussion of a wide range of subjects, the house late yesterday reached the consideration of the bill itself, but little progress was made.

Thursday.

Washington, April 13. — After a brief speech by Mr. Latimer in support of the house railroad rate bill Mr. Foraker took the floor on the measure and consumed practically all the remainder of the day session of the senate. He spent some time in the discussion of some amendments he had suggested to the bill and then entered upon the consideration of the entire question of railroad rate regulation, urging again the unconstitutionality of the pending bill from various points of view.

The feature of yesterday's proceedings in the house of representatives was the speech made by Mr. Cockran (N. Y.), who, under an agreement made on a previous day, was given an hour to elucidate the subject of "general debate" on appropriation bills.

Friday.

Washington, April 14.—Owing to the fact that none of its members were prepared to speak on the railroad rate bill that measure was temporarily laid aside in the senate yesterday, permitting the devotion of the entire time to the consideration of other bills on the calendar. Of these more than 300 were passed, most of them being private pension bills.

In the house the postoffice appropriation bill was completed after a roll call on the Southern fast mail subsidy provision, which was returned.

NO PARDON FOR MALCHOW.

President Turns Down Application of Former Hamline Professor.

Washington, April 13. — President Roosevelt yesterday refused to pardon Dr. A. W. Malchow, formerly professor of medicine in Hamline university, St. Paul, who was sentenced to two years in prison for sending obscene literature through the mails. The case grew out of a publication by Dr. Malchow, which, it is alleged, was intended to be used in medical studies.

SKIN ERUPTIONS 35 YEARS.

Suffered Severely With Eczema All Over Body—A Thousand Thanks to Cuticura Remedies.

"For over thirty-five years I was a severe sufferer from eczema. The eruption was not confined to any one place. It was all over my body, limbs, and even on my head. I am sixty years old and an old soldier, and have been examined by the Government Board over fifteen times, and they said there was no cure for me. I have taken all kinds of medicine and have spent large sums of money for doctors, without avail. A short time ago I decided to try the Cuticura Remedies, and after using two cakes of Cuticura Soap, two boxes of Cuticura Ointment and two bottles of Cuticura Resolvent, two treatments in all, I am now well and completely cured. A thousand thanks to Cuticura. I cannot speak too highly of the Cuticura Remedies. John T. Roach, Richmondale, Ross Co., Ohio, July 17, 1905."

Where Looks Don't Count.

"I visited Miss Marie Corelli when I was in Stratford," said a young woman. "She lives in a quaint house of dull red brick. She is very pretty and very rich and she likes Americans.

"Miss Corelli was full of fun. She talked about woman's over-regard for appearances. She said that she herself was too prone to think that, if appearances were all right, everything was right.

"Once, in her childhood, Miss Corelli said she was yachting on the English coast.

"As the yacht sped along there was a sudden swerve, and the helmsman said:

"'By Jove, I believe she's broken her rudder.'

"'Oh, well,' said the young girl, 'what does it matter? It's under water, and I'm sure nobody will notice it.'"

He sprinted down the pier, his eyes fixed on the ferryboat only two or three feet out from the pier. He paused but an instant, and then cheered on by the amused crowd, made a flying leap across the intervening stretch of water and landed safely on the deck.

A fat man happened to be standing on the spot where the other landed, and they both went down together.

When the newcomer had sufficiently recovered his breath he apologized to the fat man. "I hope I didn't hurt you," he said. "I am very sorry. But, anyway, I caught the ferry!"

"But, you idiot," said the fat man, "the boat is coming in!"

A WOMAN DOCTOR

Was Quick to See That Coffee Poison Was Doing the Mischief.

A lady tells of a bad case of coffee poisoning and tells it in a way so simple and straightforward that literary skill could not improve it.

"I had neuralgic headaches for 12 years" she says, "and have suffered untold agony. When I first began to have them I weighed 140 pounds, but they brought me down to 110. I went to many doctors and they gave me only temporary relief. So I suffered on, till one day in 1904 a woman doctor told me to drink Postum Food Coffee. She said I looked like I was coffee poisoned.

"So I began to drink Postum and I gained 15 pounds in the first few weeks and I am still gaining, but not so fast as at first. My headaches began to leave me after I had used Postum about two weeks—long enough I expect to get the coffee poison out of my system.

"Now that a few months have passed since I began to use Postum Food Coffee, I can gladly say that I never know what a neuralgic headache is like any more, and it was nothing but Postum that cured me. Before I used Postum I never went out alone; I would get bewildered and would not know which way to turn. Now I go alone and my head is as clear as a bell. My brain and nerves are stronger than they have been for years." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

STATE DEVELOPMENT.

Many republican papers of the state are urgfng state development as an issue for the coming campaign. The proposition is interestingly idiotic except as it shows a hopeful sign when republicans turn from forty years of looting the state to expressing the wish for a betterment of our political and moral conditions.

A party in power is perhaps properly chargeable with the mismanagement of public affairs and as the republicans have been in almost continuous domination in Minnesota for over forty years. it is doing them no injustice to charge them with participation in responsibility for the vast evils the state has suffered. Not even they, themselves, will deny that during the years of their supremacy the state has been robbed of countless millions to enrich a few lumbermen without compensation; that our mineral wealth has been handed over to the steel trust and that thousands of acres of our fair domain have been sold to syndicates and timber thieves at an inadequate price are often at a far less than honest men have bid for the same lands.

State development as a republican state issue? It is what the reform forces of Minnesota have been working for for years past and if the republicans are sincere let them take off their coats and go to work for it. The harder they work the less of an issue it will be and the further it will go toward dissipating the noisome odor of republican mismanagement.

Congressman Landis of Indiana gives it as his opinion that the Cosmopolitan magazine should be barred from every self-respecting home for David Graham Phillip's "Treason of the Senate." Now, the criticisms Phillips makes of Aldrich, Depew, Platt, Gorman, and the other agents of the trusts are believed to be true. If they are, then quite naturally the people want to be informed. Somebody is going to get his fingers burned by attacking Phillips, Steffens, Tarbell, Hapgood and the other "men of the muck rake."

When a quondam senselessly partisan paper like the Pioneer Press says, "the public doesn't care a continental whether its officials are republicans or democrats, so long as they are honest, able and independent in their action," it is a good sign that the public is coming around to the democratic way of thinking and the days of trust domination of politics are numbered.

Let us make state development one of the burning issues of the next campaign.—Redwood Falls Gazette.

Poppycock. With every person in the state, irrespective of party, boosting its development, wherein lies the necessity of making it a political issue?—Princeton Union.

The law forbidding the publication of accounts of the execution of capital offenders has been declared constitutional by a Ramsey county court. The test was made by the St. Paul papers which published accounts of the hanging of William Williams. An appeal will be taken to the supreme court.

Since Block's platform has been announced there is said to be great confusion in the ranks of the other candidates. and the Democrats, too, are alarmed. Block is going to regulate all the political ills at one fell swoop, and there is nothing left for the rest of the folks to do.

The Dunn element has no time for Block, Jacobson or Lord. If Bob has control of the convention the knowing ones say that the nominee will be either Dunn himself or Peter E. Hanson, the dark horse legatee of his influence.

Why this pronounced coldness made manifest by the voters of Minnesota toward any and all candidates for governor?—Anoka Union.

Perhaps the reason will be found in the present incumbent of the governor's office.

If Bill Grimshaw doesn't watch out Julius Block will capture his job as a resolution writer.

Uncle Tom's Cabin.

Generations of play-goers have enjoyed "Uncle Tom's Cabin." the story that moved the world and added chapters to history. But it remained for Manager Washburn, of the great Stetson's company, to place the old-time drama in a modern stage setting. While the text of Harriet Beecher Stowe's Masterpiece is preserved in its entirety in the Stetson production, there aro other features introduced that makes the piece a novelty even to those who have laughed with Topsy and wept with Eva years ago. In the Stetson company there are two Topsies, two Marks who have a great field for the intermission of fun. This entertainment will appear at the opera house on Saturday, April 21.

LATE LOCALS.

Owing to the heavy rains last Thursday and Friday and the rapid raise in the Clearwater and Red Lake rivers some little apprehension was felt for the safety of the E. L. Healy dam in the Red Lake but the actual damage was confined to the washing out of the bank near the flume. A little prompt action by Mr. Healy and a crew of men prevented any serious break and with the subsiding of the water, the danger quickly passed. The water was still very high Sunday and large crowds found pleasure in watching it go over the dam.

Dr. Tupper, one of the most prominent and influential professional men of Thief River Falls is very low with pneumonia. Monday afternoon he took a sudden turn for the worse and Dr. Smith of Crookston was telephoned and left that city at four o'clock on a special train. He found the patient in a very serious condition, but a decided change for the better has taken place. While his condition is still very serious Dr. Tuppor it is now believed has better than a fighting chance for recovery, a fact that will be most welcome to his friends in this city as well as Thief River Falls.

The republican county committee met in this city Tuesday evening at the instance of the chairman, Dr. Watson, and formulated a call for a county convention to be held in Red Lake Falls June 6 at 11 o'clock in the morning to elect nine delegates to the state convention at Duluth which will be held June 13. The primaries preceding the county convention will be held at usual places in the county June 2. The two places made vacant on the committee by the removal of D. A. McDonald and C. A. Fvller from Thief River Falls were filed by the appointment of C. L. Dobner and C. A. Fulier of the same place.

The recital given by the Orpheus Quintette Monday evening was an unusual success and surprise in its splendid results even in this music loving community. The ordinary forms of praise are inadequate in giving expression to the pleasure the large audience enjoyed. It would also be difficult to choose one number from the carefully selected program and say it was better than the others, so great was the excellence of all. It was made up of an intrumentation and a class of music seldom heard in Red Lake Falls before and never excelled. The Quintette was composed of Messrs Miller, Tracy, Be.thon, Tonning and Healy, playing first and second violins, violincello, viola and piano. It was their first appearence and every one has suggested it is to be hoped not the last. After the recital the floor was cleared and the rest of the evening given over to dancing, participated in and enjoyed by a goodly number of the younger people of the city.

Balloon Racing.

James Gordon Bennett, the automobile race promoter, has offered a cup to be given to the winner of a balloon race which will be pulled off during the coming summer. The race will be managed by the Aero club of France and is to be an annual affair. The cup is not to become the property of any club until it is won three times in succession. In the first three races a prize of $2,500 will be given to the pilot of the winning balloon. A cup of golden grain belt beer taken daily with meals will do more toward building up muscles and brain tissue than hours of exercise and study. Order a case of your nearest dealer or be supplied by Alex Thompson, Crookston.

SAN FRANCISCO IS DESTROYED

The telegraph tells the story of the destruction of San Francisco by an earthquake yesterday morning. The larger part of the town is in ruins, hundreds of people killed and property amounting to $40,000,000 destroyed. To add to the horror, what remains of the city is threatened by fire which there is no power to check. It is probably the greatest disaster of modern times.

The Catalogue Houses.

The Howell County Gazette, of West Plains, Mo., gives the following sensible advice to its readers, concerning the catalogue houses:

"When your catalogue comes from the mail order house, wait until you get home before removiug the wrapper: then wait until after supper when the chores are done; draw an easy chair to the table where the light will shine full on the pages, put on your glasses that no bargain may eacape your eye, and settle down for an hour of quiet enjoyment.

"What a wonderful book it is, to be sure—wonderfull for whau it does not contain, as well as for what it does. We miss some things we would be glad to see. Where is their offer to pay cash or exchange goods for your wheat, oats, corn, sheep or hogs 'free on board?' How much tax will they pay for improving roads and bridges, for the support of the poor, the expenses of the town, county and state? On what page is their offer to contribute money or services in the establishment and maintenance of a church or Sunday school for the moral tone of your community? What line of credit will they extend to you when your credit is poor, your money is gone, when through illness or misfortune you are not able to send 'cash order' for your groceries, clothing, farm tools and crockery? Where is their offer to contribute to your entertainment next 4th of July? "In what department do they explain to you the increasing value of your farm as a result of trading with them?

"If you find the inquiries satisfactorily answered, bring the answers in and most merchants will go to farming and let the town go to grass.

"Under such conditions no towns are needed further than to furnish a railroad station. an express office and a case for rural mail carriers — all of which may be covered by one roof."

The continued rain of the past few days has played havoc with a number of bridges across the county ditches throughout this part of the country. Mail Carrier Himley started out on Thursday to make his usual trip to Lillo and turned back from Garnes as it was impossible for him to get through. On coming home he found the bridge across the Garnes ditch washed out and he had to ford the stream which covered his buggy. Yesterday he did not start out at all as news had reached here of the washing out of all the other bridges along that ditch which is full to overflowing. Reports from the vicinity of the ditches in Terrebonne, Gervais, Emardville and Wyandotte say that a number of bridges and culverts are washed out and will have to be replaced as soon as the present heavy floods have abated sufficiently.—Plummer Pioneer.

S.S.S. FOR THE BLOOD

The purifying action and curative properties of this great remedy have made "S. S. S. For The Blood" a household saying, and thousands who are today enjoying perfect health owe their recovery from blood or skin diseases to this universally used blood medicine. S. S. S. is made entirely from roots, herbs and barks which possess not only cleansing and healing ingredients, but building-up and strengthening properties to keep the blood in perfect order. No one can be well when the blood is impure; they lack the energy and strength that is natural with health, the complexion becomes pale and sallow, the vitality is weakened and they suffer from a general broken down condition. When the waste or refuse matter, which nature intends shall be thrown off, is left in the system because of a sluggish, torpid condition of the expelling members, it is absorbed into the blood, making this vital stream weak, sour and acrid, and its condition is manifested by boils, pimples, rashes, blotches and other eruptions of the skin. S. S. S. goes into the circulation and removes every particle of blood taint or poison of every character, makes the blood fresh and strong and gives energy to the entire body. When the blood has been cleansed by S. S. S. all skin diseases and eruptions pass away and the smooth, clear skin, glowing with health, shows that the body is being nourished by rich, pure blood. Rheumatism, Catarrh, Sores and Ulcers, Scrofula, Contagious Blood Poison, etc., are all deep-seated blood disorders, and for their cure nothing equals S. S. S. It does not injuriously affect the most delicate parts of the body and can be taken with perfect safety by old or young. Book on the blood and any medical advice desired without charge.

Alum baking powders are unhealthful. Do not use them for raising food under any circumstances. So detrimental are alum baking powders considered, that in most foreign countries their sale is prohibited. In many States in this country the law compels alum powders to be branded to show that they contain this dangerous acid, while in the District of Columbia, Congress has prohibited the sale of all food that contains alum.

Alum baking powders are sold to consumers at from 10 cents a pound to 25 ounces for 25 cents, or 25 cents a pound, and when not branded may generally be distinguished by their price.

CHAPTER XI—(Continued).

"Say nothing about Mattazudo," said Philip. "I do not wish him to be alarmed, or he may escape my vengeance."

"I shall say nothing," said Don Juan.

Francisco went out with him.

"Where is the prisoner, Salvarez?" asked Philip of Gomez. "And the two Americans—where are they?"

"Salvarez is in the left wing of the castle, in a room from which he cannot escape. There is but one window, and that is strongly barred. There is but one door, and a sentinel paces before it. The prisoner's wife and daughter are with him. He requested it, and I saw no reason to refuse. The two Americans are in the right wing, confined in like manner."

"Have Salvarez brought in. Let us hear what he has to say."

Gomez went out, and in a few minutes returned with Salvarez.

The courageous General of the Republic walked with firm tread and unflinching gaze into the presence of his conquerors.

"You have sent for me," he said.

"Bow before the king!" said Gomez, with the intention of humiliating the republican.

"'Before the king!'" repeated Salvarez, with a sarcastic smile. "What king? I know no king."

"You see before you the King of Venezuela," said Gomez.

The lip of Salvarez curled.

"I am the King," said Philip, calmly.

"There is no king in Venezuela," replied Salvarez. "Long live the Republic!"

Philip's face flushed angrily.

"Beware! Do you defy me?" he said.

"I do not defy you; I am in your power," said Salvarez. "You have conquered me at arms, but you are not and never shall be king. The defeat of one small regiment does not overthrow a nation. The army of the Republic will drive you from the land."

"You do defy me. You shall acknowledge me king."

"Never."

"Then you shall die."

"I will die proclaiming the constitution."

"Take him away!" thundered Philip, now thoroughly angered. "I had meant to be generous to this man for his bravery, but he forfeits all right to my clemency. He is a rebel. He must die."

Salvarez was led back to the room which had become his cell.

Philip then sent for the two Americans, who were wondering what was to be done with them, now that they were so completely in the power of the enemy.

When the orderly opened the door and told them the king desired their presence, they rose and followed him, thinking that they might at least learn something now of the fate that was in store for them.

They had not been searched, and still possessed their revolvers.

They tramped through the halls to the Council Room. A lightning flash of intelligence passed between them as they recognized this as the room into which they had entered through the secret panel. Medworth counted the panels There it was—fifth from either end, and probably undiscovered still.

"You may go," said Philip to the orderly.

Then turning to the young men, he said:

"You are Americans?"

"We are," replied Medworth, in a tone that left no doubt that he was proud of the fact.

"How do you come to be mixed up in this affair?" asked Philip.

"We came here to rescue a young girl from a band of conspirators and villains," said Medworth, calmly.

Philip flashed an angry glance at the intrepid American.

"Have a care," he said. "Do not speak rashly. Do not anger me. You say you came here to rescue a girl from villains. What girl?"

"Don Juan's daughter," replied Medworth.

"Ah!" said Philip, with a sneer. "Then by 'villains' I suppose you mean myself and friends?"

"Yes. Even her father is one of them. You are another."

"Beware!" said Philip. "I have already sentenced one man to death for defying me."

"He wasn't an American," said Tempest. "You wouldn't like to get mixed up with the United States."

"Enough of this," said the king. "I sent for you to obtain information. It was you who discovered the cave where Don Juan's daughter was concealed?"

"It was," replied Medworth.

"How did you make the discovery?"

"In our own way," said Tempest; "and that is our secret."

"You must answer."

"Well, if I must, I must—a parrot told us where it was."

"A parrot!" exclaimed Philip, choking with rage. "I tell you——"

At that moment the door was thrown violently open and Mattazudo came running in. He fell on his knees before Philip.

"Your Majesty! Your Majesty!" he cried. "You will not have me shot! You will not kill me! I swear I was but obeying the orders of Gomez!"

Philip's face became like a thundercloud.

"Kill you?" he cried. "Who has told you that I would have you shot?"

"Oh, I heard it, your Majesty," wailed the half-breed. "My followers are strong; they are stronger than the followers of Francisco. If I am shot by your orders they will revolt. With them against you, you cannot cross the Orinoco."

"Where is Gomez?" demanded Philip, calling an orderly.

"I will find him, your Majesty," was the reply.

But before Gomez appeared, there was a loud shouting and shuffling of many feet approaching the Council Room.

"To the King! To the King!" cried a number of voices. "Mattazudo must be saved. He is our leader. If he dies, we go against the King. Long live Mattazudo! Long live the King!"

"Kill the pretender!" shouted an impassioned voice. "He is no king!"

"Kill him! Kill him!" shouted others.

"Stay that rabble!" shouted Philip, in great alarm. "Mattazudo, restore order. Tell them that if they remain loyal you shall be forgiven—you shall live."

"Ah, they might not believe me, your Majesty," said Mattazudo. "Will you not speak a word to them? Come, tell them that, and I promise you you will have no better troops than these."

The king stepped out into the hall with Mattazudo.

He faced the approaching mob.

"What is it you wish?' he asked.

"The life of Mattazudo. He is our leader," came the reply.

"Very well. I have not harmed him," said Philip. "He is my friend. See, I give him my hand. If he is loyal to me I ask no more. Is that enough?"

"Long live the King! Long live Mattazudo!" they cried; and with these words of rejoicing, they dispersed.

Philip returned to his Council Room. The Americans were not there. Philip called his orderly.

CHAPTER XII.

An Execution Delayed.

The prisoners—all that remained of the gallant band that fought for the Republic—were ruthlessly shot.

This was the first official act of Philip of Aragon after the crown had been placed upon his head. General Salvarez, the greatest of the prisoners, was not placed among them, but no less was the murderous wrath of his captors to descend upon his head.

True, Salvarez was a prisoner of war, and should have been treated with the consideration and dignity due his rank.

A certain honor was reserved for Salvarez, it is true—the honor of standing alone to meet his death.

And, as if to mock him, or to emphasize the irony of his fate, the man who was to command and carry out the execution of the republican general was his old neighbor, Pedro Francisco.

The loving wife and daughter of Salvarez were still with him in the room which was to be the last he should ever occupy in his own castle.

"I fear not for the country," replied Salvarez. "Give the President time to get his army here, and the monster will never live to see another day. It is not that which moves me. Ah, it is the thought of you!" The general rose from his chair and paced the length of the room. "For myself I care little. Years ago I consecrated my life to the Republic. In battle I would give it willingly. But it is hard to go thus and leave you, my dear ones, in the hands of these merciless scoundrels. There are no friends left. In whose hand can I leave you?"

"Alas!" said Dona Maria, "our friends are dead. Yet I do not fear for myself. If they take you, my general, I soon will follow you. By my own hand I will cheat these monsters of one victim of their license."

"But Jacinta!"

"She is young. She must—she must—"

"Must what?" sternly asked the general. "Give herself up to these despoilers? Rather, if she is a true daughter of the Republic, she—"

A heavy step interrupted the conversation.

Pedro Francisco entered.

His black, gleaming eyes glanced toward Salvarez and his wife, and then rested upon the beautiful, tear-stained face of Jacinta.

He beckoned for her to leave her father's side and come to him.

He led her to a distant corner, and bent to speak in her ear words that could be heard by herself alone.

"You can save your father's life," he said.

She glanced quickly and beseechingly at him.

"Jacinta," he said, "have you heard the order of the king?"

She bowed her head.

"Yes," she answered. "My father pays the penalty of his loyalty to his country—to your country—with his life."

"True," he said. "At noon today he is to be led out into his own garden, and bound, and stood face to a file of soldiers. An officer will give the word to fire. That officer is myself."

She started back. Her black eyes blazed scorn and hate upon him.

"You!" she hissed. "You! Oh, wretch, serpent, fiend!! You, who claimed to be a friend, will give the command that will send my father to his death!"

"You may prevent it, Jacinta."

"I? I can prevent it? How? I have already knelt in bitter humiliation before your pretender king, and begged for my father's life. He spurned me. How, then, can I save him?"

"I tell you I am to command the squad that is to shoot him. At noon nothing can be done. But if it can be postponed till midnight—if the execution could be held in the darkness, much could be done. His fetters could be loosened—he could be left free—the guns could be loaded blank—he could drop at the fire, and creep away."

"Ah, Pedro! You will do this? You will save my father's life? You love the Republic still!!"

"No, I am an enemy to the Republic. But I love you. For you, and you alone, I will do this, if you but say the word."

"Word!" Her bosom heaved with emotion. "What do you mean? What word?"

"Promise me that you will be my wife—it is all I ask."

She recoiled from him, clasping her hands over her heart. Panting, she looked at him helplessly.

"But I do not love you," she said.

"I know that," he answered. "You hate me. You despise me. You have said it a hundred times in your haughty way. But I do not care for that. I love you, and must have you. You have your choice—marriage and honor with me, your father's life saved, or—"

"Hush!" she said. "Do not speak of it again. I realize it all. But how do I know you will keep your promise? You may be as cruel as the others. You may not save my father's life."

He smiled.

"Grief has driven reason from you," he said. "Is it likely, when I wish to win your love, that my first step in that direction will be to murder your father? Besides, my part of the contract comes first. If I do not sacredly do my part, you need not keep your promise."

"But is it possible?" she asked. "The hour is already set for noon. Can it be changed to midnight?"

"I think it can. I have some influence with the king. I will ask this as a favor, and he will no doubt grant it. Can you not see, Jacinta, that I am risking my life for you?"

He turned away, and Jacinta, preserving a calm appearance, went back to her father.

"What had Francisco to say?" asked Salvarez.

"Nothing much, my father," she replied. "He spoke to me of—of—"

"Of something that will happen soon?" he asked, referring to his own death.

"No, father," she answered; "of something that will never happen."

The suspense was becoming unendurable. The girl dared not look at her father's calm countenance, lest she betray the true cause of her emotion. She dared not breathe her hopes—her fears.

"They delay," said Salvarez.

Jacinta heard the ticking of the watch in his hand.

With a tigerish fierceness she clutched and looked at it.

It was ten minutes after the hour of noon.

"Father!" she murmured, reeling. "Saved!" and she fell fainting into her father's arms.

A Ring-Necked Tribe.

An officer of native troops was on outpost duty at Fort Stedman, in the Shan Highlands, Burmah, and was sent on an expedition to a wild part of the interior, where presumably foot of white man had never trod before. Here he came across a tribe called "Paloungs." He observed the women were decorated with curious coils of brass around neck, arms and legs, and on inquiry found that it was a canon of unwritten law that all the higher-grade ladies be thus adorned. He was horrified to be an eye witness of the operation, the coils being put on a young girl of 12, who lay shrieking and firmly held to the ground while the rods were bent and hammered on. The neck coil has the effect of a gigantic spring, elongating the muscles into a curious deformity. Each well-born ringed lady has a child following her with a pannikin of water, when in hot sun, to sprinkle the coil, as the brass gets intolerably hot, and festers the skin into horrible sores. This is one of the most curious customs ever heard of and in spite of the pain is willingly adhered to, as showing high rank in the wearer.—London Sunday Magazine.

Memory Shown by Young Canaries.

"St. Andreasberg people know nothing of the canary of the encyclopedia, which can imitate perfectly the nightingale, or even enunciate some words in imitation of the human voice," declares Ida Shaper Hoxie, in telling about St. Andreasberg, "The Singing Village of Germany," in the Ladies' Home Journal. "The birds of one breed, subjected to the same influences, have songs that vary with the throat muscles and vocal chords of each individual. But so remarkable is the canary memory that a bird bred to a certain song, if removed from the cage in which he has heard it from his parent, when six weeks old, will later, when he himself begins to sing, give the same song though never having heard it in the intervening period."

A dollar unjustly gained cannot be justly kept.

An Unhealthy Sign.

Miss Olga Nethersole at a reception given in Philadelphia in her honor, told a quaint little story about actresses.

"There was a country girl," she began, "who laid down her knitting with a sigh one night and said:

"'Ah, mother, how I'd like to be one of those great actresses or singers on the stage.'

"'Would you?' said her mother, uneasily. 'I don't know. It's an unhealthy business, ain't it?'

"'Why, is it?' asked the daughter.

"'It must be,' said the mother. 'Don't you always see their names in the papers, telling how they've been taking tonics and patent medicines, and so on?'"

Cause for Thanks.

Congressman Gardner of Maryland tells a story of an English minister who was called to the bedside of a dying parishioner to offer him such final consolation as was posible.

"'Opkins," said the dominie, "you're a sick man."

"I am," replied Hopkins.

"You're going to die, 'Opkins," continued the other.

"I am," groaned Hopkins.

"You've been a bad man, 'Opkins."

"I have."

"You can't expect to go to heaven."

"I know it," said Hopkins.

"Then, 'Opkins, you'll have to go to the other place."

"Yes," said Hopkins, sighing deeply.

"Well," concluded the consoling pastor,' "you ought to be thankful that you've got somewhere to go."

The darkest cloud may have a silver lining, but the average man prefers his clouds gold lined and of a less somber hue.

Rise Liars,

And Salute Your Queen

Ho All Ye Faithful Followers of Ananias

GIVE EAR!

A Young Girl said to a Cooking School Teacher in New York: "If You make One Statement as False as That, All You have said about Foods is Absolutely Unreliable."

This burst of true American girl indignation was caused by the teacher saying that Grape-Nuts, the popular pre-digested food, was made of stale bread shipped in and sweetened.

The teacher colored up and changed the subject.

There is quite an assortment of traveling and stay-at-home members of the tribe of Ananias who tell their falsehoods for a variety of reasons.

In the spring it is the custom on a cattle ranch to have a "round up," and brand the cattle, so we are going to have a "round up," and brand these cattle and place them in their proper pastures.

FIRST PASTURE.

Cooking school teachers—this includes "teachers" who have applied to us for a weekly pay if they would say "something nice" about Grape-Nuts and Postum, and when we have declined to hire them to do this they get waspy and show their true colors.

This also includes "demonstrators" and "lecturers" sent out by a certain Sanitarium to sell foods made there, and these people instructed by the small-be-whiskered doctor—the head of the institution—to tell these prevarications (you can speak the stronger word if you like). This same little doctor conducts a small magazine in which there is a department of "answers to correspondents," many of the questions as well as the answers being written by the aforesaid doctor.

In this column some time ago appeared the statement: "No, we cannot recommend the use of Grape-Nuts for it is nothing but bread with glucose poured over it." Right then he showed his badge as a member of the tribe of Ananias. He may have been a member for some time before, and so he has caused these "lecturers" to descend into the ways of the tribe wherever they go.

When the young lady in New York put the "iron on" to this "teacher" and branded her right we sent $10.00 to the girl for her pluck and bravery.

SECOND PASTURE.

Editors of "Trade" papers known as grocers' papers.

Remember, we don't put the brand on all, by any means. Only those that require it. These members of the tribe have demanded that we carry advertising in their papers and when we do not consider it advisable they institute a campaign of vituperation and slander, printing from time to time manufactured slurs on Postum or Grape-Nuts. When they go far enough we set our legal force at work and hale them to the judge to answer. If the pace has been hot enough to throw some of these "cattle" over on their backs, feet tied and "bellowing," do you think we should be blamed? They gambol around with tails held high and jump stiff legged with a very "cocky" air while they have full range, but when the rope is thrown over them "it's different."

Should we untie them because they bleat soft and low? Or should we put the iron on, so that people will know the brand?

Let's keep them in this pasture, anyhow.

THIRD PASTURE.

Now we come to a frisky lot, the "Labor Union" editors. You know down in Texas a weed called "Loco" is sometimes eaten by a steer and produces a derangement of the brain that makes the steer "batty" or crazy. Many of these editors are "Locoed" from hate of anyone who will not instantly obey the "demands" of a labor union, and it is the universal habit of such writers to go straight into a system of personal villification, manufacturing any sort of falsehood through which to vent their spleen. We assert that the common citizen has a right to live and breathe air without asking permission of the labor trust and this has brought down on us the hate of these editors. When they go far enough with their libels, is it harsh for us to get judgment against them and have our lawyers watch for a chance to attach money due them from others? (For they are usually irresponsible.)

Keep your eye out for the "Locoed" editor.

Now let all these choice specimens take notice:

We will deposit one thousand or fifty thousand dollars to be covered by a like amount from them, or any one of them, and if there was ever one ounce of old bread or any other ingredient different than our selected wheat and barley with a little salt and yeast used in the making of Grape-Nuts, we will lose the money.

Our pure food factories are open at all times to visitors, and thousands pass through each month, inspecting every department and every process. Our factories are so clean that one could, with good relish, eat a meal from the floors.

The work people, both men and women, are of the highest grade in the state of Michigan, and according to the state labor reports, are the highest paid in the state for similar work.

Let us tell you exactly what you will see when you inspect the manufacture of Grape-Nuts. You will find tremendous elevators containing the choicest wheat and barley possible to buy. These grains are carried through long conveyers to grinding mills, and there converted into flour. Then the machines make selection of the proper quantities of this flour in the proper proportion and these parts are blended into a general flour which passes over to the big dough mixing machines, there water, salt and a little yeast are added and the dough kneaded the proper length of time.

Remember that previous to the barley having been ground it was passed through about one hundred hours of soaking in water, then placed on warm floors and slightly sprouted, developing the diastase in the barley, which changes the starch in the grain into a form of sugar.

Now after we have passed it into dough and it has been kneaded long enough, it is moulded by machinery into loaves about 18 inches long and 5 or 6 inches in diameter. It is put into this shape for convenience in second cooking.

These great loaves are sliced by machinery and the slices placed on wire trays, these trays, in turn, placed on great steel trucks, and rolled into the secondary ovens, each perhaps 75 or 80 feet long. There the food is subjected to a long low heat and the starch which has not been heretofore transformed is turned into a form of sugar generally known as Post Sugar. It can be seen glistening on the granules of Grape-Nuts if held toward the light, and this sugar is not poured over or put on the food as these prevaricators ignorantly assert. On the contrary the sugar exudes from the interior of each little granule during the process of manufacture, and reminds one of the little white particles of sugar that come out on the end of a hickory log after it has been sawed off and allowed to stand for a length of time.

This Post Sugar is the most digestible food known for human use. It is so perfect in its adaptability that mothers with very young infants will pour a little warm milk over two or three spoonfuls of Grape-Nuts, thus washing the sugar off from the granules and carrying it with the milk to the bottom of the dish. Then this milk charged with Post Sugar is fed to the infants producing the most satisfactory results, for the baby has food that it can digest quickly and will go off to sleep well fed and contented.

When baby gets two or three months old it is the custom of some mothers to allow the Grape-Nuts to soak in the milk a little longer and become mushy, whereupon a little of the food can be fed in addition to the milk containing the washed off sugar.

It is by no means manufactured for a baby food, but these facts are stated as an illustration of a perfectly digestible food.

It furnishes the energy and strength for the great athletes. It is in common use by physicians in their own families and among their patients, and can be seen on the table of every first-class college in the land.

We quote from the London Lancet analysis as follows:

"The basis of nomenclature of this preparation is evidently an American pleasantry, since 'Grape-Nuts' is derived solely from cereals. The preparatory process undoubtedly converts the food constituents into a much more digestible condition than in the raw cereal. This is evident from the remarkable solubility of the preparation, no less than one-half of it being soluble in cold water. The soluble part contains chiefly dextrin and no starch. In appearance 'Grape-Nuts' resembles fried bread-crumbs. The grains are brown and crisp, with a pleasant taste not unlike slightly burnt malt. According to our analysis the following is the composition of 'Grape-Nuts:' Moisture, 6.02 per cent; mineral matter, 2.01 per cent; fat, 1.60 per cent; proteids, 15.00 per cent; soluble carbohydrates, etc., 49.40 per cent; and unaltered carbohydrates (insoluble), 25.97 per cent. The features worthy of note in this analysis are the excellent proportion of proteid, mineral matters, and soluble carbohydates per cent. The mineral matter was rich in phosphoric acid. 'Grape-Nuts' is described as a brain and nerve food, whatever that may be. Our analysis, at any rate, shows that it is a nutritive of a high order, since it contains the constituents of a complete food in very satisfactory and rich proportion and in an easily assimilable state."

An analysis made by the Canadian Government some time ago shows that Grape-Nuts contains nearly ten times the digestible elements contained in ordinary cereals, and foods, and nearly twice the amount contained in any other food analyzed.

The analysis is familiar to practically every successful physician in America and London.

We print this statement in order that the public may know the exact facts upon which we stake our honor and will back it with any amount of money that any person or corporation will put up.

We propose to follow some of these choice specimens of the tribe of Ananias.

When you hear a cooking school teacher or any other person assert that either Postum or Grape-Nuts are made of any other ingredients than those printed on the packages and as we say they are made, send us the name and address, also name of two or three witnesses, and if the evidence is clear enough to get a judgment we will right that wrong quickly.

Our business has always been conducted on as high a grade of human intelligence as we are capable of, and we propose to clear the deck of these prevaricators and liars whenever and wherever they can be found.

Attention is again called to the general and broad invitation to visitors to go through our works, where they will be shown the most minute process and device in order that they may understand how pure and clean and wholesome Grape-Nuts and Postum are.

There is an old saying among business men that there is some chance to train a fool, but there is no room for a liar, for you never can tell where you are, and we hereby serve notice on all the members of this ancient tribe of Ananias that they may follow their calling in other lines, but when they put forth their lies about Grape-Nuts and Postum, we propose to give them an opportunity to answer to the proper authorities.

The New York girl wisely said that if a person would lie about one item, it brands the whole discourse as absolutely unreliable.

Keep your iron ready and brand these "mavericks" whenever you find them running loose.

FOR NERVOUS PEOPLE

A Michigan Mother Preserved to Her Family by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

When the blood is impoverished the nerves starve and neuralgia or something more serious swiftly follows. Nervous people are generally pale people. By supplying through the blood those vital elements that the nerves need, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People have performed those remarkable cures that make it impossible for any nervous sufferer to neglect them.

A recent case is that of Mrs. Peter Morrissette, of No. 315 Eleventh street, Alpena, Mich., who writes as follows: "My trouble started with childbirth. After one of my children was born I had a kind of paralysis. I was very weak and my mouth was a little crooked. I was always tired and was so nervous that I could not bear to hear a dog bark or a bell ring—even the little bird in its cage would annoy me. My heart fluttered a great deal and I had dizzy spells. I was not able to be left alone.

"My doctor gave me different kinds of medicine, changing it several times. When it was evident that he could not help me he said he did not understand my case. This was three years ago and I was very much discouraged, when my brother, who had taken Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, recommended them to me. I tried them and noticed a change for the better when I was taking the second box. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cured me and I have been well ever since. I now do all my own housework, sewing and washing for seven of us."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have also cured diseases caused by impure or impoverished blood such as rheumatism, anæmia and after-effects of the grip.

All druggists sell Dr. Williams' Pink Pills or the remedy will be mailed, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

AGRICULTURE

A Diamond Well.

A diamond well! Yes, I have one, a real, genuine, pure, sparkling diamond well. Not of sparkling stones, but of pure sparkling water. I have seen articles from time to time for quite a number of years past in different farm papers treating of the impurities of farm wells, but the article in last week's Review is responsible for this one, and the following is how I came to have my diamond well. About ten years ago I found it necessary to dig a well for family water supply. The ground surface is about level for say one-eighth mile all around, then slopes slightly to the east and west, and rises to the north and south. I dug a hole about four feet in diameter through six feet of yellow clay, then six feet through blue clay, when I struck a blue shale or slaty rock, some call it soapstone rock, the grain of which lies flat or horizontal. Some streaks are very hard and flinty, and others soft and rotten. About four feet down in this dock I got a small supply of water, say about a gallon every five minutes. At that I stopped digging, and in a few days I felt proud of my well of clear, cold, pure sparkling water.

It kept rising in the well until it came within about six feet of the top, then I had ten feet of water, but in about two weeks the water began to get warmer and did not taste so good. Then I drew it all out and it was again all right until it again came near the top of the well, then got warm, insipid and virtually stagnant. If I could have used the water as fast as it came into the well it would have been all right, but as it rose so high in the well and stood so long exposed to the air it became unfit for household use. Well, after five years it became necessary for me to move onto another piece of land, but only just over the lot line, not more than one hundred feet, so that I would have to dig another well. But the problem arose, "How could I fix it so that the water would always be good?" I would have to put a lid on, so that the water could not rise to the top and the lid would have to be water tight. Well, after studying on the matter a year, I got all material at hand and then went to digging. Of course the conditions were same as first well—yellow clay, blue clay and blue rock. When I got to water I arched over at top of blue rock with stone, then placed a flat stone on top with a three-inch hole through the center, and over this hole I placed a glazed three-inch sewer pipe. Then I began filling in the clay ground around the pipe and tramped it hard every five or six inches until I had the well filled to the top, putting of course one length of the pipe on above another and cementing each joint so that no water could get in nor out at the joints of pipe, then I put a 1¼-inch galvanized pump pipe down inside the sewer pipe, then packed inside sewer and outside pump pipe with clean cloths and presto! I had it a pure diamond well, always "cold, always clear, always pure." I would not take five hundred dollars for it and have to use a common open well again, for there cannot any horses, cows, hogs, sheep, dogs, cats, rats, mice, frogs, toads, beetles, bugs, worms nor microbes get into it; no drainage nor seepage from any source above whatever, without first going through ten feet of solidly packed clay. I believe I am justified in naming it my "Diamond Well."—A. A. Fradenburg, Cuyahoga Co., Ohio.

Oat Smut.

We hope that none of our readers that have oats to plant this spring will neglect to treat the seed for smut. The smut is increasing in nearly all of the oat growing region, and it is a trouble that is easily checked. When smut takes a head of oats it entirely destroys every grain. It does not skip any. The loss is much greater than most farmers suppose, because the smutted heads do not stand out as do the good heads. The loss runs up as high as 25 per cent of the entire crop. Is it not absurd that this loss should be permitted to go on and nothing be done about it? One way to treat the seed is to dip it in hot water, letting it remain for only 15 minutes. The water should be at a temperature of from 130 to 135 degrees. On account of the difficulty of keeping the water at just the right temperature, the formalin dip is preferred. This consists of half a pound of formalin to 30 gallons of water. The seed may be dipped in this or the solution may be sprinkled over the pile of seed oats spread out on the floor. The oats should be thoroughly wet and then shoveled together and covered with sacks or other convenient covering and left so for from two to twelve hours. It will require only thirty gallons of the solution for 100 to 150 bushels of the grain. The formalin is sold under the form of formaldehyde, being composed of about 40 per cent pure formalin and 60 per cent water.

Doors of Poultry Houses.

It is better to have only one door in a poultry house unless the second door fits tightly and can be closely fastened. This is to prevent drafts. The door in use should be as large as the ordinary house door so that it may be comfortably used by the owner of the poultry. The little door only half high enough for a human being to enter soon becomes a nuisance.

They Stand Alone.

Standing out in bold relief, all alone, and as a conspicuous example of open, frank and honest dealing with the sick and afflicted, are Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for weak, over-worked, debilitated, nervous, "run-down," pain-racked women, and Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, the famous remedy for weak stomach, indigestion, or dyspepsia, torpid liver, or biliousness, all catarrhal affections, whether of the stomach, bowels, kidneys, bladder, nasal passages, throat, bronchia, or other mucous passages, also as an effective remedy for all diseases arising from thin, watery or impure blood, as scrofulous and skin affections.

Each bottle of the above medicines bears upon its wrapper a badge of honesty in the full list of ingredients composing it — printed in plain English. This frank and open publicity places these medicines in a class all by themselves, and is the best guaranty of their merits. They cannot be classed as patent nor secret medicines for they are neither —being of known composition.

Dr. Pierce feels that he can afford to take the afflicted into his full confidence and lay all the ingredients of his medicines freely before them because these ingredients are such as are endorsed and most strongly praised by scores of the most eminent medical writers as cures for the diseases for which these medicines are recommended. Therefore, the afflicted do not have to rely alone upon Dr. Pierce's recommendation as to the curative value of his medicines for certain easily recognized diseases.

A glance at the printed formula on each bottle will show that no alcohol and no harmful or habit-forming drugs enter into Dr. Pierce's medicines, they being wholly compounded of glyceric extracts of the roots of native, American forest plants. These are best and safest for the cure of most lingering, chronic diseases. Dr. R. V. Pierce can be consulted FREE, by addressing him at Buffalo, N. Y., and all communications are regarded as sacredly confidential.

It is as easy to be well as ill—and much more comfortable. Constipation is the cause of many forms of illness. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation. They are tiny, sugar-coated granules. One little "Pellet" is a gentle laxative, two a mild cathartic. All dealers in medicines sell them.

Wouldn't That Jar You?

A little girl living at Rochester, Ill., had been taught to say her prayers down on her knees before her bed every night before retiring. She always wound up by saying "God bless mamma," "God bless papa," and so on down, enumerating each member in the family.

One night her mother was sewing in the room while the little one was preparing for bed. She said her prayers as usual, and got into bed. She had been in bed only a few minutes when out she jumped, kneeled in front of her bed and said:

"Oh, Lord, I forgot grandma; wouldn't that jar you?"

Sardines Are Scarce.

The sardine situation in New Brunswick is assuming a serious phase. The hopes that were felt in the early part of the season for a big run of summer fish have not been realized. Only small quantities are being picked up, and for these high prices have to be paid.

A Trouble Center.

The small boy had just smoked his first cigar.

"Boss," he gasped, with a troubled look, "w-where was dat cigar made?"

"That cigar, my lad," replied the man who had given him the weed, "was made in Santo Domingo."

"Gee! I thought so."

"Why did you think so?"

"It—it started half a dozen revolutions in me stomach."

Motor Car for Babies.

Every baby now can have his or her own motor car; a new era in perambulators has begun, and Mr. Dunkley of Birmingham, one of the leading manufacturers of perambulators in this country, has invented a little vehicle which he calls the pramotor. It consists of a comfortably upholstered bassinette with a folding hood and pneumatic tires, worked by a little electric motor of less than a quarter-horse power, and capable of attaining any speed up to five miles an hour. The nurse can either walk behind, if she wishes exercise, or sit on a bicycle seat, which can be drawn out by means of collapsible tubes from under the car. The driving lever and steering wheel are fixed at the back of the car, well out of reach of the erratic occupant.

STOP, WOMAN!

AND CONSIDER THE ALL-IMPORTANT FACT

That in addressing Mrs. Pinkham you are confiding your private ills to a woman—a woman whose experience with women's diseases covers a great many years.

Mrs. Pinkham is the daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham, and for many years under her direction, and since her decease she has been advising sick women free of charge.

Many women suffer in silence and drift along from bad to worse, knowing full well that they ought to have immediate assistance, but a natural modesty impels them to shrink from exposing themselves to the questions and probable examinations of even their family physician. It is unnecessary. Without money or price you can consult a woman whose knowledge from actual experience is great.

Mrs. Pinkham's Standing Invitation.

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. All letters are received, opened, read and answered by women only. A woman can freely talk of her private illness to a woman; thus has been established the eternal confidence between Mrs. Pinkham and the women of America which has never been broken. Out of the vast volume of experience which she has to draw from, it is more than possible that she has gained the very knowledge that will help your case. She asks nothing in return except your good-will, and her advice has relieved thousands. Surely any woman, rich or poor, is very foolish if she does not take advantage of this generous offer of assistance.

If you are ill, don't hesitate to get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once, and write Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for special advice.

When a medicine has been successful in restoring to health so many women, you cannot well say, without trying it, "I do not believe it will help me."

TWENTY-FOUR YEARS AGO

Items Taken From the Red Lake Falls Era.

July 20, 1882.

The Fifth District congressional convention met at Detroit on the date fixed, and the turbulent croud divided. Kindred delegates nominated Kindred, and the Nelson delegates nominated Nelson.

Ovid Moreau, late in the employ of F. E. Hunt, is now behind the counters of Norde & Thorsen.

August Richel, of Rice County, Minn., invested in real estate at Red Lalls Falls, during the week.

The Headquarters hotel is having a large run of business, and H. J. Kaufer wears a smile in consequence.

Mr. Ernest Buse and wife, of this village, started for Minneapolis on Monday morning, for a week of pleasure and recreation, Messrs. Jos. and Chas. Langevin, of Chippewa Falls, Wis., arrived in town yesterday and will purchase some Red Lake Falls real estate. It will prove a good investment for them.

Joseph Patenaude's new hotel building, in Kretzschmar & Detling's addition, has assumed tangible proportions, and will soon be ready for a share of the business. When finished it will be the largest hotel in town.

The stage between this place and Crookston is crowded to its utmost capacity every trip. It requires two or three large hacks to accomadate the trade, while a large number of private conveyances are on the road.

Mr. Juline Payment and Miss Malvine Fortier, both of Terrebone, were married on Monday last, Rev. Father Champagne performed the ceremony. The best wishes of all accompany them, and may the Payments be easily collected.

The Brainerd Dispatch says that a corporation has been formed to build a railroad from St. Paul to Grand Forks by way of Brainerd, Red Lake Falls and Crookston. Messrs. Kindred, Sleeper, Hartley and Thompson, of Brainerd, and Col. De Graff, are connected with the enterprise, and it may have some bottom.—Crookston Chronicle.

The principal attraction this week and one that is witnessed by all our people, is the nine and one-half million feet of logs making the decent over the falls. They commenced to arrive on Monday afternoon, and the moment they reached this point large crowds were on the bank eager to see the sight: A large jam formed near Buse Bros.' grist mill and one above the bridge. While breaking the upper one, some of the young men and boys thought this would be a good opportunity to learn and practice the art of log-riding. They accordingly picked out and jumped on their log and went gliding down the stream until, as if by some unseen power, the log would suddenly commence to roll and the rider--well, he found the bottom of the river, and reported solid rock. The shouts that went up were from a crowd that was enjoying one continued round of pleasure.

July 27, 1882.

Dr. Farley, the physician recently located here, is having an extensive practice and gives general satisfaction.

Hon. B. Sampson, of Crookston, has returned from Washington, where he has been on business connected with the pine lands.

Dr. Watson, of Minneapolis, writes to one of our citizens that it is his intention to locate here, and will be along in a few days, accomanied by his wife. He will erect a building as soon as possible to be used for an office drug store.

Joseph Langevin, of Chippewa, Falls, Wis., will establish himself in the merchantile business at this place. He made contract for the excavations necessary, and will soon have the lumber, etc. on the ground for the rapid construction of his building. His stock will be here within sixty days.

Xavier Ducharme paid us a visit on Monday last, and reported that he had just come in from his farm on Poplar river, consisting of four hundred and eighty acres of choice prairie land, where he has been breaking and making other improvements. The people in his neighborhood have been there only two years. but now resembles an old settled country, as regards amount in crops. He says the crops are looking their best and will place the farmers on a sound footing.

Geo. H., son of E. J. Delting, arrived here from Sheboygan, Wis., last week and will claim Red Lake Falls as his home hereafter.

Cards of invitation have been issued announcing the marriage of Mr. Joe Grover to Miss Mamie Zeh, at the residence of Mrs. Zeh, on Monday, the 14th inst.

Dr. Watson, of Minneapolis, Minn., has located permanently in Red Lake Falls, and will enter into the practice of his profession immediately. He comes well recommended as a skillful physician and surgeon. The Dr. has secured shelving and office room in F. E. Hunt's store until his own is completed.

Order to Examine Accounts.

State of Minnesota, }
County of Red Lake. } ss

In Probate Court Special term April 2, 1906.

In the matter of the estate of Clarence Gibson Walker, Deceased.

On Reading and filing the petition of Agnes Anna Walker, executrix of the estate of Clarence Gibson Walker, deceased, representing, among other things, that she has fully administered said estate, and praying that a time and place be fixed for examining and allowing the final account of her administration, and for the assignment of the residue of said estate to the parties entitled thereto by law;

It is Ordered, That said account be examined, and petition heard by this Court, on Monday the 30th day of April, A. D. 1906, at 10 o'clock a. m., at the Probate office in the City of Red Lake Falls in said County.

And it is Further Ordered, That notice thereof be given to all persons interested by publishing a copy of this order once in each week, for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in the Red Lake Courier a weekly newspaper printed and published at Red Lake Falls in said County.

Dated at Red Lake Falls, the 2nd day of April, A. D. 1906.

By the Court,
N. W. TARRANT.
[seal] Judge of Probate.

Notice of Expiration of Redemption, State Assignment.

OFFICE OF COUNTY AUDITOR, }
County of Red Lake }
STATE OF MINNESOTA }

To J. W. Wheeler.

You are hereby notified that the following described piece or parcel of land, situated in the County of Red Lake, State of Minnesota, and known and described as follows, to-wit:

The south half of the southeast quarter of section 30 in township 152, range 45,

Is now assessed in your name; that on the 13th day of May, A. D., 1902, at a sale of land pursuant to the real estate tax judgment duly given and made in and by the District Court in and for said county of Red Lake, on the 21st day of March A. D., 1902, in proceedings to enforce the payment of taxes delinquent upon real estate for the year, A. D., 1900, for said county of Red Lake, the above described piece or parcel of land was duly offered for sale, and no one bidding upon said offer an amount equal to that for which said piece or parcel was subject to be sold, to-wit, the sum of Seven Dollars and Seventy-two cents, the same was duly bid in for the State of Minnesota for said sum; that thereafter and on the 20th day of March, A. D.; 1905, the said piece or parcel of land being still unredeemed from said sale, the same and all the rights of said State therein under said sale was duly assigned and conveyed by the County Auditor of said County of Red Lake for the sum of Fifty Dollars and Eighty-four cents duly paid in to the County Treasurer of said county, said sum being the amount for which the same was bid in to the State as aforesaid, with interest according to law, and all taxes which became delinquent subsequent to said sale, with interest, penalties, and costs according to law; that the certificate of conveyance for said piece or parcel of land executed and delivered by said County Auditor upon said assignment of the rights of said State acquired under said sale has been presented to me at my office by the holder thereof for the purpose of having notice of expiration of redemption from said sale given and served; that the amount required to redeem said piece or parcel of land from said sale at the date of this notice, exclusive of the costs to accrue upon this notice, is the sum of Sixty-nine Dollars and fifty-three cents (said sum being the amount paid by said holder of said certificate upon said assignment from said State and interest thereon according to law, delinquent taxes accruing subsequent to said sale paid by him with interest, penalties and costs according to law, and all unpaid delinquent taxes, with interest, penalties and costs accruing subsequent to said sale); and that the time for redemption of said piece or parcel of land from said sale will expire sixty (60) days after the service of this notice and proof of said service has been filed in my office.

Witness my hand and seal of office this fifteenth day of February, A. D., 1906.

(Official Seal) JAMES E. FORD,
County Auditor, Red Lake Co., Minnesota.

JIM AND PAUL

Red Lake Falls

THEY WERE UNITED IN HYMEN'S BANDS

Harry E. Ives and Miss Catherine Pirath Joined Together as Man and Wife.

A Prominent Couple Who Are Subject of Congratulations by Many Friends.

"Whom God hath joined together, let no man put asunder." They were the closing words of the beautiful Episcopal service which joined in the holy bonds of matrimony Mr. Harry E. Ives and Miss Catherine Elizabeth Pirath yesterday afternoon at the residence of the bride's parents.

It was while Mrs. Ovid Emard played softly a wedding march arrangement of "Home Sweet Home" that Mr. Ives and Miss Pirath listened to the ceremony that made them man and wife and received the blessing of the Rev. H. M. Greene, Episcopal minister of Crookston. The bride was charmingly gowned in white liberty satin, princess, and carrying white bride roses. She was attended by her sister, Miss Carrie Pirath, who was dressed in white moie de soie and carried pink roses. The best man was Mr. Fred W. Ives of Minneapolis, a cousin of the groom. The house was prettily decorated in smilax, roses, palms and ferns. Only the relatives of the contracting parties were present.

Mr. Ives is one of the prominent business men of St. Hilaire and has been the editor of the Spectator of that city for the past twenty years and is as well known in Red Lake Falls as in his own city. He is a son of Judge Frank Ives of Cass Lake, who was present at the wedding. Miss Pirath, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. E. Pirath, has been a resident of this city all her life and the number of her friends is limited only by the number of her acquaintances. She was a teacher in the public schools of St. Hilaire and it was there she and Mr. Ives first met. The popularity of the couple was abundantly testified to by the farewell reception at the depot, the only opportunity their friends had of wishing them future happiness. There were many there and the Red Lake Falls band assisted in the demonstration.

Mr. and Mrs. Ives departed on the evening train for Minneapolis where they will remain some time, afterward going to their home in St. Hilaire.

JIM FORD TO RUN AGAIN

County Auditor Announces That He Will Seek Another Term.

County Auditor James E. Ford has announced to his friends that he will be a candidate for re-election, and will ask for the Democrtic nominition at the primaries,

Some months ago Mr. Ford decided to retire at the expiration of his present term and accept a flattering buisness proposition, but his friends in all parts of the county were so anxious for him to serve another term that he has finally decided to defer to their wishes.

Mr. Ford has made an exceptionally efficient auditor, and is generally regarded by all authorities as being one of the most capable county officals in the state. His record is above reproach and his experience and ability make him invaluable to the people of Red Lake county. It is unlikely that he will have opposition in the primaries and at the polls he will prove as invincible as ever.

The next meeting of St. Mary's society will be held at the home of Mrs. Jake Phallen on May 3.

Dr. Conrad Adler of Berlin, Germany, spent many years in the leading hospitals of Europe, studying appendicitis and stomach diseases. The prescription with which he cured thousands of these cases is now put up in bottles under the name of "Dr. Adler's Treatment," and sent to this country direct from Berlin. It is not a patent medicine but Dr. Adler's own prescription as used by himself for all his patients. It is the only known cure for appendicitis and chronic stomach diseases, and we are glad of our good fortune in getting this remedy for the people of this vicinity. Large bottles for a dollar at W. MONEY IS SAVED TO LAND OWNERS

County Ditch Liens on State Lands Are to be Paid by the State Auditor.

County Auditor Ford Proves Successful in Getting This Concession.

Through the active efforts of County Auditor James E. Ford, a large number of purchasers of state lands in Red Lake county at the public sale held last October will be saved the no inconsiderable sum of $2699.01.

To a better understanding of the excellent work done by Mr. Ford it will be necessary to enter into a little of the history of ditch construction in Red Lake county. During the years since 1901 there have been a number of ditches constructed in the county for drainage purposes and in a great majority of cases the land adjoining has been assessed for benefits. It was so with state lands but the state fafled to pay the amounts it was assessed for and a large number of liens were filed. At the sale of state lands in October State Auditor Iverson disposed of nearly 3000 acres at prices which comprehended the benefits received from the construction of the ditches and it was generally understood that it was the intention of the legislature which passed the state drainage law that the state should pay the assessments against its lands. As the sale was made it put the purchasers in the position of paying the state its full value and still being liable for the liens. It was here that Mr. Ford did his work effectively. He took the matter up with the state auditor and kept at it persistently until he has finally received a letter from the state auditor asking him to prepare a statement of the lands effected, the amount of the liens and the interest due upon them and promising to attend to the payment. Mr. Ford has lost no time in preparing the information asked for and forwarding to the state auditor's office. It is expected that payment will be made in a short time.

The ditches for which liens were filed are known as county ditches numbered 1, 2, 6. 7, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20 and 21 and are located in the townships of Garnes, Smiley, Rocksbury, Emardville, Sanders, River Falls and Norden. Some forty purchasers are affected with land amounting to 2720 acres. The lien assessments amount to $2325.88, interest $373.13 and a total of $2699.01.

WHAT TO BE DONE WITH A GOOD THING

State Creamery Inspector Winkjer Gives Excellent Advice on The Subject.

Business Men Will Work For Their Own Interests in Pushing It Along.

State Creamery Inspector Winkjer, who has promised to devote particular attention to the Red Lake Falls creamery and is greatly interested in its success, contributes the following which will be of interest not only to farmers but ought to be to the business men of the city:

"Good business management is essential to make a creamery successful. This management does not consist exclusively in buying of supplies, selling butter and keeping correct accounts but it also includes the care of the territory from which cream is expected to be received. This matter is too often neglected for it is generally believed that this part of the business will take care of itself; that the farmers will come together and arrange their own cream route and in other ways do things to facilitate the patronage of the creamery. While this to some extent is true yet the full extent of organization among the patrons will not be reached before some work is done by the manager or some one who helps him to have the farmers work together in bringing their product to the creamery.

"The farmers can most essily arrange their cream routes for exchanging hauling but even in this the manager can help things along by talking to parties who can probably unite in this way and suggesting the method which they may follow. But the most effective work can be done in forming of cream stations where from five to ten, fifteen, or more farmers bring their cream to one place and have a man selected for the purpose to weigh, sample and record the weight of cream. The farmers in a radius of three miles come together before ten o'clock in the forenoon and the farmer whose turn it is to haul it should be ready to receive it. Stations of this kind can be operated fifteen miles away from the creamery when the roads are right. But the greatest trouble with having these things arranged is that the manager of the creamery is a busy man and it becomes necessary for every one who lives in the community to make it easy for the manager in this respect. There is not a man either in the city or the surrounding territory but that can put in a good word for the creamery at some time or other and there is not one of these but has some interest in talking woll for the creamery. Argument to show the value of the creamery is unnecessary. To put the shoulder to the wheel and push a good thing along is what is necessary."

The Red Lake Falls creamery will begin business May 1 and the business men of the city should see to it that the good work is helped along in every possible way. It is to their interest from a purely business standpoint.

Slater Suggests a Method of Beating the Catalogue Houses.

Edward K. Slater, state dairy and food commissioner, has issued the following word of advice to the country merchants:

"This department has been giving considerable attention to groceries shipped into the state by mail order houses. We have been trying to place before the consumers the fact that many of the goods are illegal under our pure food laws, and that this department has no jurisdiction over such shipments. We cannot punish such violators and thus protect the consumers, as we are enabled to do when the goods are sold inside the state. It follows, as a matter of course, that this department desires to see goods only purchased through local dealers, so that all consumers will receive the protection afforded by a strict enforcement of our pure food laws.

"The country merchant must do his duty if he desires to compete with the catalogue houses. He must beat him with his own weapon —advertising. He too, must have special prices on certain articles if he wishes to hold the home trade. Grocers and country merchants who think they are so located that they cannot advertise successfully should study the subject of advertising. There is probably no store, city or country, whose business could not be advertised successfully if the proprietor only knew how and has the nerve and patience to do it. There are a few country merchants in remote localities who have mastered advertising so successfully that mail order competition does not bother them. This idea that you have lived so long in town that everybody knows you and you don't need to advertise is a mistake. This very indifference to advertising, indifference to doing business the way business is done in this day and age, is what has enabled the mail order houses to grow from mere nothing to great concerns.

"The merchant who can convince the people of his section and keep them convinced that his store is the best place to buy this and that article will not lose trade to the mail order house. Of course, he can not afford to get out a catalogue as thick as a Bible, but he can keep an advertisement in his local papers and see that it is changed every week, thus keeping new bargains continually before the public. He should also have a mailing list and send out a circular letter at least once a month.

"Nothing is more discouraging than beginning an advertising campaign. Results are almost invariably slow at first. It takes pluck—you must keep at it and master it. The mail order houses get trade because they go fishing for it—and you Mr. Country Merchant, can get it too. Will you go fishing for it?

"Don't look upon your country newspaper as an object of charity. There is not a single country newspaper in the state, with a general local circulation which is not able to give full value for money received. The country paper can help you solve this question if you give them the chance."

Red Lake Falls Divine Honored by Adams Presbytery.

At the meeting of the Adams Presbytery at Hallock last week Rev. Herbert W. Knox of this city was elected moderator for the coming six months. This Presbytery includes seven counties in the northern part of the state.

Mr. Knox was also honored in being chosen as delegate to the general assembly which meets in Des Moines May 17. There will be 600 delegates at the assembly from all parts of the United States and many leading men from the world's mission field's. Mr. Knox's alternate is Rev. W. J. Hall of Hallock. A delegate was also chosen from among the deacons of the church with the choice falling upon James A. Wilson of Thief River Falls, whose alternate is Charles N. Bourdou of this city.

WHAT ARE YOU DOING?

Everyone Should Contribute to San Francisco Sufferers.

Mayor Duffy received a telegram Saturday appointing him and the cashiers of the several banks of the city as a committee to receive contributions for the San Francisco sufferers. Not much is expected from so small a city as Red Lake Falls but it should be borne in mind that every little helps and although millions have been contributed from all over the United States, more will be required to feed and clothe the unfortunate ones of that awful calamity until they are able to care for themselves. There are 300,000 homeless and hungry ones there, sickness and sufferings from exposure and only the vast liberality of the American people has prevented things from being infinitely worse. No town is too small to do something and no contribution but will be gratefully received. "Who gives quickly, gives twice." What are you doing?

Medical statistics from Luzon show that the death rate among the American soldiers engaged in the present war is rather lower than among the troops stationed at Washington, Boston, New York and San Francisco. Pedestrianism has always been regarded as a healthy form of exercise, and the daily marches in pursuit of the pugnacious Aguinaldo have undoubtedly served to more than counteract the supposed bad effects of a torrid climate.

Long Lee, a Chicago Chinaman, has been sentenced to work out a $100 fine, at the rate of $1.50 a week day, in the house of correction. But the authorities have no work for him to do, and the unfortunate "celestial" is beginning to fear that "old age with his stealing step may claw him in his clutch" before the amount is discharged. No wonder the simple children of the east are often lost in wonder and amazement at the strange workings of western justice.

A society woman who had shown much kindness to a young collegian overheard him one day speaking of her by her Christian name. Innocent in intention, he showed himself inexcusably careless of the bounds between friendliness and familiarity, and was never again invited to her house. Far more innate was the courtesy of a company of young recruits who recently fell out of a military procession to salute Miss Gould at her house door. "She's Helen, our Helen!" they shouted, stamping their feet and tossing their caps, as they read her pardon in her answering smiles.

The extraordinary improvements which have recently been made in bicycle lamps makes it the more surprising that the locomotive headlight has been so long neglected, since nothing is more important than that the engineer should see as far ahead along the track as possible. The introduction of electricity promises to do away with one of the chief dangers that now attend railroad traveling by night. Obstacles on the track, broken bridges, other trains ahead, and all the unknown dangers that the darkness covers will in future be distinguishable in ample time to bring the train to a standstill before any damage is done.

An illustration of the present and prospective value of timber lands is furnished by the Charleston News and Courier, which tells, in a recent issue, how an unusually large white oak log, measuring forty feet in length and forty-two inches in diameter at the smaller end, was recently shipped from Savannah to a northern firm. Its value, says our contemporary, when simply sawed into lumber for shipping was estimated at $240. Smaller logs bring equally good prices in proportion, of course. In recent years timber lands in the south bearing similar lumber have been sold for $2 and even less per acre. Landowners who disposed of or neglected their forest lands played a losing game in those years, but, now that the folly of such business has been brought home to them, it is not unlikely that they will profit by past lessons and preserve and nurture their growing timber. Viewing recent developments in the lumber markets, it may not be amiss to suggest that the farmers having about forty acres or more on which oak is now growing could do nothing better than leave it alone, for it is more than probable that they will find it a good interest payer, if not the most valuable part of their farm, in a few years to come.

A rat which nibbled at some wires in a Chicago store the other night made so much noise that ten policemen and six private watchmen gathered with drawn revolvers ready for the fray. Only two weeks ago safe-crackers blew up a large part of a store on the west side and not a solitary policeman heard the racket. The moral of these happenings, according to the departed Aesop, would probably be that it is safer to be a safe-blower than a rat when policemen are in the neighborhood.

DEVOURING WORK OF FIRE DEMON GOES ON

Fierce Wind Veers Fire Around and Sweeps It on to Complete Total Destruction of San Francisco.

Greatest Problem Now Is to Feed Homeless and Destitute—Relief Pouring in From All Directions.

San Francisco, April 21.—San Francisco has not seen the conclusion of the devastating work of the conflagration.

The fire that started at Nob Hill and worked its way to the North beach section, sweeping the section clean, was later veered around by a fierce wind and made its way coutherly to the immense sea-wall, sheds and grain warehouses, the flames are heading directly for the immense ferry building, the terminal point for all trains of the Southern Pacific road. The darkness and the wind, which at times amounted to a gale, added fresh terrors to the situation.

Attempt to Raid Mint.

The authorities considered conditions so grave that it was decided to swear in immediately 1,000 special policemen armed with rifles furnished by the federal government. In addition to this force, companies of the national guard arrived from interior points. It was reported last night that thirty-five white men had been shot and killed while attempting to work their way into the ruins of the United States subtreasury on Commercial street. Two Chinese were shot and killed on Market street for refusing to obey orders of the soldiery.

Liquor Poured Into Gutters.

Reports of babes being born in the refugee camps were frequently received. Five women became mothers in Golden Gate Park. Last night the main remaining fire was confined to east of Van Ness avenue and north of Union street, but was burning its way to the shore.

Late yesterday afternoon the police broke open every saloon and corner grocery in the saved districts and poured all malt and spiritous liquors into the gutters.

Feeding the Destitute.

Although every effort of the various relief committees yesterday was made to appease the gnawing hunger of the destitute thousands—effort that was in a large measure successful—there were last night many persons without sufficient food.

The government officials took charge of every grocery store still standing and gave out foodstuffs to all those who were hungry. Bread lines were established at Fillmore and Turk streets, at Golden Gate Park and at the Presidio, and every person who stood in line was given a whole loaf.

Entombed Alive for Three Days.

Eleven postal clerks were taken from the debris of the postoffice yesterday, all alive. They had been for three days without food or water. All the mail was saved.

The problem now confronting the city government and federal authorities is how to feed the multitude. Supplies are coming in by the train load, but as yet the system of distribution is not in working order. At the Presidio, where probably 50,000 people are camped, affairs are conducted with military precision. Water is plentiful and rations are dealt out all day long. The refugees stand patiently in line and there is not a murmur. This characteristic is observable all over the city.

Supplies Are Seized.

The seizure of supplies coming in on the trains by the relief committee has been authorized by Mayor Schmitz. Edward Stearns, chairman of the executive committee, seized a car load of flour yesterday morning containing 810 sacks. Twenty-five sacks were immediately sent to Idora Park, and another twenty-five sacks were sent to Adams Point. A car load of ice was seized for the hospitals and a car load of potatoes was also taken.

The names of the consignees were taken and as soon as funds are available they will be paid. Tho emergency, however, is such that prompt and firm action is deemed necessary.

Cannot Meet Demands.

Besides these seizures, Livermore sent in a wagon load of butter to the committee yesterday morning. Willters has also notified the committee that there is a car load of hams, butter and eggs on its way from that locality. Other cities are sending supplies, and it is hoped the amounts will be sufficient for the needs. At present the supply station at Thirteenth and Franklin streets, is emptied as fast as goods are received. The demands cannot begin to be supplied, and what will result when the stores of the city are empty is past conjecture.

Work Night and Day.

Mayor Mott yesterday morning addressed a circular letter to the bakers of the cities of Oakland, Alameda and Berkeley, requesting them to continue work regardless of holidays. The bakers have agreed to work their plants to their utmost capacity and to send all their surplus output to the relief committee. By working night and day it is believed that thousands of loaves can be furnished daily. At the headquarters of the relief committee there is a registration bureau, where all are asked to register for the use of those wishing to find families or friends.

Families Separated.

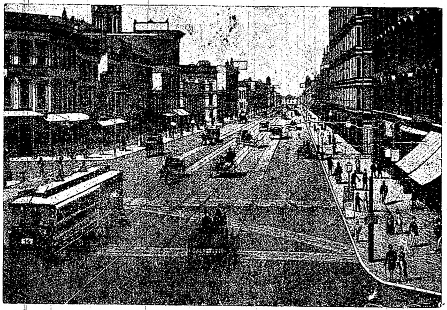
Hundreds of inquiries have been received. In the hurried flight many families were separated and their members are at a loss to know where to look for each other.

A provision committee takes charge of the provisions, which are stored as fast as received in a grain warehouse at Thirteenth and Franklin streets.

From here the provisions are sent to the various depots throughout the city.

The Grave Question.

The grave question is: How soon will an adequate supply of food arrive from outside points and avert famine and destitution. There is little food in San Francisco. The nearest large city on the south is Los Angeles, 500 miles away. To the north is Portland, nearly 800 miles distant, and its nearest sister in the great East is Salt Lake City, 1,000 miles away. These cities and all of the less populated nearer towns are making sacrifices for the destitute here, but it is to the big cities of the nation that San Francisco looks with anxious eyes for relief.



MARKET STREET, EAST FROM THIRD.

OAKLAND A PLACE OF REFUGE.

City Temporarily Takes Place of San Francisco as Metropolis of Pacific..

Oakland, April 22. — Oakland is a vast city of refuge and intelligence offices for the innumerable thousands of survivors who have managed to escape from San Francisco. A great section of the world-famous cosmopolitan population of the metropolis has taken every available space that offers itself in the city and shelter and food are being provided for all, though the relief committee is taxed to the limit of its powers.

The tremendous and almost hopeless task has been begun of trying to reunite scattered families.

People Try to Be Brave.

Conditions warrant utter despair and panic, but through it all the people are trying to be brave and falter not.

This city has temporarily taken the place of San Francisco as the metropolis of the Pacific coast, and here the finance kings, the bankers and merchants of the San Francisco of yesterday are gathering and conferring and getting into shape the first plans for the rebuilding of the burned city and preventing a widespread financial panic that in the first part of the awful catastrophe seemed certain. In the face of enormous loss and the complete wiping out of the commercial life of the Empire city of the Pacific the leaders of trade and commerce here are cheerful and confident that all will be well in the end.

Repair Work Started.

Already many of the buildings damaged by the earthquake of Wednesday morning are being repaired and activity of a healthy and reassuring sort is stirring all about. Should the relief trains and money to aid the homeless poor arrive quickly, that famine and pestilence and wretchedness may not add their horrors to the present calamity, one with a sufficient amount of fortitude may look on the present plight of the city not without a strong confidence in the future. Through all of the disaster the splendid, indomitable courageous spirit of the West has asserted itself.

Will Make Special Report.

Washington, April 22. — The president has Secretary Metcalf booked to go to San Francisco as his personal representativo and ascertain what aid the government can render.

"PIG-EYE" KELLY A SUICIDE.

Well-known Veteran and Gambler Takes Laudanum.

Grand Rapids, Minn., April 20. — Thomas Kelly, sixty years old, a veteran of the Civil war, committed suicide yesterday by drinking laudanum. He had been in ill health for some time. Kelly was well known throughout the state. He is said to have made and lost a number of comfortable fortunes, but death found him in poor circumstances; practically homeless and without near relatives, as far as can be ascertained. For many years he has lived in Northern Minnesota, spending short periods of time in every town of any importance. He generally was known as "Pig-Eye" Kelly and was a gambler.

HAS BEEN LOST OVER A YEAR.

Fargo, N. D., April 20.—Not a single clue has been obtained as to the whereabouts of Ole Thorvildson, who left his home in Northwood a year ago last fall on a trip to the coast. As Thorvildson expected to be absent several months, it was not until a year had elapsed without any tidings from him that his relatives became alarmed about him. Inquiries then made developed the fact that he had visited none of the people he had expected to see on his Western trip, the last seen of him being at Havre, Mont. Advertisements have been inserted in all of the leading papers on the coast and throughout the State of Washington, and a systematic search has been made for the missing man, but without result.

GOVERNMENT TO THE RESCUE

CABINET TAKES ACTIVE MEASURES FOR RELIEF OF SUFFERERS.

MINNESOTA TO THE FRONT

PEOPLE OF THE STATE WILL HELP VICTIMS OF SAN FRANCISCO HORROR.

Washington, April 22.—The cabinet yesterday considered the San Francisco situation and it was decided that Secretary Metcalf should proceed to that city as the representative of the national government and aid the authorities there. Every available government vessel in the vicinity of San Francisco, which belongs to the army, navy, revenue cutter service, fish commission or light house service has been directed to carry supplies of every description to the stricken city and render other assistance, while army officers have been given imperative instructions to ship tents, rations, medical and other relief supplies.

Co-operation with the local authorities of San Francisco is the official command, and reports received here are that the order is being obeyed.

Offers of assistance from abroad have been made to the president, but he feels the United States is able to care for the San Francisco sufferers, and contributions from foreign countries will be declined.

The question of an additional appropriation for government work in San Francisco will be brought before congress to-day. It was announced that the war department has forwarded to San Francisco 1,000,000 day rations, some of which have already arrived there, and most of which will be due to-night.

Minnesota to the Front.

St. Paul, April 22.—St. Paul and the entire State of Minnesota will come to the front for the relief of those made destitute by earthquake and fire in San Francisco and other California cities. Steps were taken yesterday which will result in a substantial relief fund to be forwarded immediately. While the relief work will be conducted along systematic lines, there will be no red tape about it.

The main point will be to get succor to the unfortunate people as soon as possible and in the manner to their best advantage. With this in view everybody who is able is asked to step to the front with a contribution. The money will be used where it is needed most, and money for the bare necessities of life is needed as it was never needed before.

Gov. Johnson started the relief organization yesterday morning by issuing a proclamation calling upon the people of Minnesota to do what they can for the earthquake sufferers. He named a general committee of eighteen to take charge of the work, and this committee will be responsible to the people of Minnesota.

New York Will Give $3,000,000.

New York, April 22.—More than $1,000,000 was subscribed here yesterday toward the relief of the sufferers in San Francisco and other California cities. Yesterday was the first day of partly organized effort at securing funds. Conservative estimates indicate that the total contributions from New York will not be less than $3,000,000. Funds raised by the mayor's committee will be sent direct.

Gives Half a Million.

Boston, April 22. — Responding to Bov. Guild's appeal Boston and Massachusetts placed half a million dollars to the credit of the sufferers in California. Last night food and other necessities were being rushed from this city.

Chicago Unties Purse Strings.

Chicago, April 22.—Chicago untied her purse strings yesterday and the fund for the assistance of the Pacific coast swelled to nearly half a million dollars. Fully 100 organizations took up the work of charity and the fund promises to be tripled during the next forty-eight hours.

Steamer Loads of Food.

Sacramento, Cal., April 22. — Five hundred women are packing food and clothing and citizens generally are subscribing large sums for the committee's use. Nearly $100,000 is now in sight. One steamer load is supplies had been sent and another went yesterday.

Stockton Sends Food.

Stockton, Cal., April 22.—Stockton is hurrying food to San Francisco. Thursday night a boat load went down and yesterday two more at 1 and 5 p. m. Car loads of food ready to eat left on the Santa Fe last evening. Over $20,000 has been raised.

NO USE TO WIRE.

Delivery of Messages in Stricken City Is an Impossibility.

San Francisco, April 22.—The delivery of telegraphic messages from outside points to people in San Francisco is an impossibility. The messenger service of both the big telegraph companies no longer exists. Even had the companies an army of messengers they would be of very little value for the reason that the people are scattered far and wide.

Kidney Trouble Causes Weak Backs and a Multitude of Pains and Aches.

Col. R. S. Harrison, Deputy Marshal, 716 Common St., Lake Charles, La., says: "A kick from a horse first weakened my back and affected my kidneys. I became very bad, and had to go about on crutches. The doctors told me I had a case of chronic rheumatism, but I could not believe them, and finally began using Doan's Kidney Pills for my kidneys. First the kidney secretions came more freely, then the pain left my back. I went and got another box, and that completed a cure. I have been well for two years."

RUNNING SORES ON LIMBS.

Little Girl's Obstinate Case of Eczema —Mother Says: "Cuticura Remedies a Household Standby."

"Last year, after having my little girl treated by a very prominent physician for an obstinate case of eczema, I resorted to the Cuticura Remedies, and was so well pleased with the almost instantaneous relief afforded that we discarded the physician's prescription and relied entirely on the Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Pills. When we commenced with the Cuticura Remedies her feet and limbs were covered with running sores. In about six weeks we had her completely well, and there has been no recurrence of the trouble. We find that the Cuticura Remedies are a valuable household standby, living as we do twelve miles from a doctor and where it costs from twenty to twenty-five dollars to come up on the mountain. NO WONDER BROKERS STAND.

Seats at $97,000 Make Sitting Down Expensive.

Shortly after a seat on the New York stock exchange was sold for $97,000—the record price—a woman visitor was an interested spectator in the gallery. With her was a well-known broker. As the closing hour drew near the floor, as usual, became a chaos of voices and frenzied movement.

"You are now gazing into the crater of American finance," the broker volunteered, "at the most extraordinary drama of dollars on earth. And we pay a pretty penny for the privilege of acting down there. A seat brought $97,000 the other day."

"Ninety-seven thousand dollars for a seat!" exclaimed the visitor, reviewing the scouting and shoting standees below her on the floor. "No wonder they never sit down."

A BUSY WOMAN

Can Do the Work of 3 or 4 if Well Fed.

An energetic young woman living just outside of New York, writes:

"I am at present doing all the housework of a dairy farm, caring for 2 children, a vegetable and flower garden, a large number of fowls, besides managing an extensive exchange business through the mails and pursuing my regular avocation as a writer for several newspapers and magazines (designing fancy work for the latter) and all the energy and ability to do this I owe to Grape-Nuts food.

"It was not always so, and a year ago when the shock of my nursing baby's death utterly prostrated me and deranged my stomach and nerves so that I could not assimilate as much as a mouthful of solid food, and was in even worse condition mentally, he would have been a rash prophet who would have predicted that it eve would do so.

"Prior to this great grief I had suffered for years with impaired digestion, insomnia, agonizing cramps in the stomach, pain in the side, constipation and other bowel derangements, all these were familiar to my daily life. Medicines gave me no relief—nothing did, until a few months ago, at a friend's suggestion, I began to use Grape-Nuts food, and subsequently gave up coffee entirely and adopted Postum Food Coffee at all my meals.

"To-day I am free from all the troubles I have enumerated. My digestion is simply perfect, I assimilate my food without the least distress, enjoy sweet, restful sleep, and have a buoyant feeling of pleasure in my varied duties. In fact, I am a new woman, entirely made over, and I repeat, I owe it all to Grape-Nuts and Postum Coffee." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

SAN FRANCISCO ALMOST WIPED OUT BY EARTHQUAKE AND FIRE

Most Appalling Disaster of Modern Times Lays Waste the Metropolis of the Pacific Coast---Hundreds of Lives Lost---Property Loss Beyond Calculation.

Earthquake Topples Over Big Buildings and Fire Completes Work of Destruction---Immense Structures Dynamited in Futile Attempt to Stay Progress of the Flames.

San Francisco, April 20.—This city yesterday was visited by one of the most terrible calamities that has befallen any city in modern times.

It was 5:13 o'clock yesterday morning when a terrific earthquake shook the whole city and surrounding country. One shock lasted two minutes and there was an almost immediate collapse of flimsy structures in all parts of San Francisco. The water supply was cut off and when fires broke out there was nothing to do but to let the buildings burn. Telegraph and telephone communication was shut off for a time. The Western Union was put out of business completely and the Postal was the only company that managed to get a wire out of the city. At 10 o'clock the Postal, too, was forced to suspend in San Francisco. Electric power was stopped and street cars could not run. Railroads and ferryboats also ceased operations.

Leveled With Dynamite.

The various fires raged all day and many fine buildings were leveled to dust by terrific charges of dynamite in the hopeless effort to stay the fire horror. In this work scores of heroic soldiers, policemen and firemen were maimed or killed outright.

The explosions shook the city and added to the terror of the inhabitants. Following the first shock there was another within thirty minutes, but not so severe. Three hours later there was another short quake.

Never Was Fate So Disastrous.

Nearly every landmark that has made San Francisco famous has been laid in ruins or burned to the ground. Never has the fate of a city been more disastrous.

For three miles along the waterfront buildings have been swept clean and the blackened beams and great skeletons of factories and offices stand silhouetted against a background of flame that is slowly spreading over the entire city. The whole commercial and office section of the city on the north side of Market street from the ferry building to Tenth street, has been consumed in the raging hell, while hardly a building is standing in the district south of Market street.

Block After Block Licked Up.

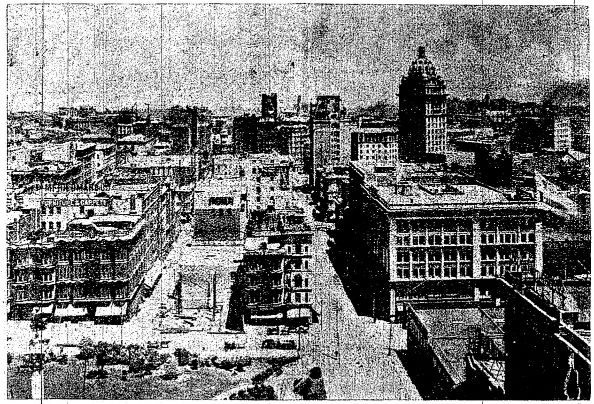
Block after block of banking houses are now masses of red-hot ruins, and it will be months before the money that was housed in their valuable vaults can be reached.

Factories, hotels, wholesale houses and residences, comprising the principal part of the business section, have been destroyed. The city hall, a structure costing $7,000,000, was first wrecked by the earthquake and then destroyed by fire. The Palace hotel, value estimated at $3,000,000, also burned. The beautiful Claus Spreckles building, at Third and Market streets, was gutted. The Rialto building and dozens of other costly structures, were also destroyed. The Hall of Justice is threatened and will undoubtedly go. The Examiner and the Call buildings are gone and the Crocker building, across the street from the Palace hotel, is destroyed.

Brave Men Lose Their Lives.

The earthquake caused the partial wreck of the California hotel on Bush and Kearney streets, and the falling chimney and cornice of the hotel crashed throught the fire house adjoining, severely injuring Fire Chief Sullivan so that he was unable to direct the work of fire-fighting. He is now in a hospital in a precarious condition.

All of San Francisco's best playhouses, including the Majestic, Columbia, Orpheum and Grand opera house, are a mass of ruins. The earthquake demolished them for all practical purposes and the fire completed the work of destruction. The handsome Rialto and Casserly buildings were burned to the ground, as was everything in that district.



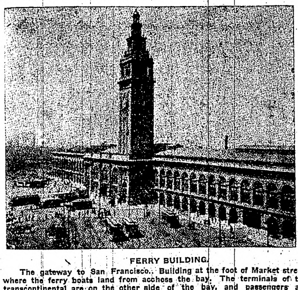
DISTRICT NOW LAID TO WASTE.
Business section looking southeast from an eminence in Union Square.

Wind Spreads Fire.

The flames were kept confined to the south of Market street in the business section until about 3 o'clock in the afternoon, when the wind carried sheets of flame into the richest part of the city.

Sisters, brothers, wives and sweethearts searched eagerly for some missing dear one. Thousands of persons hurriedly went through the building, inspecting the cots on which the sufferers lay, in the hope that they would find some loved one that was missing.

The dead were placed in one portion of the building, and the rest of it was used as a hospital. After the fire forced the nurses from the building, the eager crowds followed them to the Presidio and the Children's hospital and renewed the search for missing relatives.



FERRY BUILDING.

The gateway to San Francisco. Building at the foot of Market street, where the ferry boats land from acchoss the bay. The terminals of the transcontinental are on the other side of the bay, and passengers are brought to San Francisco on ferry boats. Nearly all of the people entering the city come through the Ferry house.

Fire Damage the Greatest.

Up to a late hour yesterday afternoon more than 750 persons, seriously injured by the earthquake and the fire, had been treated at the various hospitals.

Looters Summarily Shot.

Mayor Schmitz took prompt measures for the relief and protection of the city. Gen. Funston was communicated with at once, and by 9 o'clock 1,000 federal soldiers were guarding the streets and assisting the firemen in dynamiting buildings.

Gen. Funston realized that stern measures were necessary and gave orders that looters were to be shot at sight. Four men were summarily executed before 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. At a meeting of fifty citizens called by the mayor it was announced that 1,400 tents will be pitched in Golden Gate Park and arrangements have been made to feed the destitute in the public squares.

One of the first orders issued by Chief of Police Dinan was to close every saloon in the city, to prevent drink-crazed men from rioting.

Sweeps Everything in Path.

The fire swept the streets so rapidly that it was practically impossible to save anything in its path.

The dense smoke that arose from the entire business district spread out like an immense funnel and could have been seen for miles out at sea. Occasionally, as some drug house or place stored with chemicals was reached, most fantastic effects were produced by the colored flames and smoke which rolled out against the darker background.

Other Places Suffer.

Reports from outside districts indicate widespread damage. San Jose, fifty miles south, lost many buildings, and between fifteen and twenty persons were killed. The annex of the Vendome hotel collapsed and fires broke out. Stanford university and Palo Alto suffered. At Stanford many of the handsome buildings were demolished, and two people were killed.

Suburbs in Ruins.

The court house at Redwood City and other buildings collapsed. Menle Park, Burlingame and other fashionable suburban towns suffered. Santa Rosa, to the north; Napa, Vallejo and all towns around the bay were damaged. These reports, alarming as they were, created little interest in San Francisco, where the people were so frantic that they rushed into the streets in night garments.

Cliff House Slides Into Sea.

From the Cliff house comes word that the great pleasure resort and show place of the city, which stood upon a foundation of solid rock, has been swept into the sea. Not a thing remains to tell where the monster stone building once stood. It has been levelled to the foundation and only the rock foundation lining the sea coast remains intact.

Destruction Seems Complete.

San Francisco, April 21.—San Francisco now is the city desolate. It seemed that the acme of its misery was reached at dusk, when flames burst from all sides of the beautiful Hotel Fairmount, the palace that above every other structure was apparently most strongly entrenched against the attack of the all-consuming fire. And surrounding that lofty pinnacle of flame, as far as the eyes could see to the south, to the east and far out to the west lay in cruel fantastic heaps charred and smoking all that remains of a prosperous city.

Acre After Acre Swept.

Yesterday was another day of uneven struggle between man and unconquerable elements. Acre after acre of buildings have been reduced to embers and ashes, despite the despairing struggles of the firemen to limit the conflagration. Last night there was a hope that the worst has been nearly reached and that when day dawned the end would be in sight. But hope is faint. If the flames can be halted in their devastation of the western addition, then "finis" will be written to the great disaster.

Seek More to Devour.

With each succeeding hour the devastation and destruction in this prostrate ruin of a city grows. The business and wholesale district is now only a glowing furnace, while the giant tongues of fire have reached the westward far beyond Van Ness avenue, and are wiping out buildings and seeking more to devour.

All efforts to check the spread of the flames at Van Ness avenue by blowing up a mile of buildings on the east side of Van Ness avenue have proved fruitless. The fire has spread across the broad thoroughfare, and from present indications the entire western addition, which contains the homes of San Francisco's millionaires and people of the wealthier class, is now doomed. The destruction of the Western addition of the city practically completes the work of the ravaging flames and marks the devastation of the entire city.

Relief Work Begun.

But San Francisco is not discouraged. Its best and highest citizens have already begun to plan restoration and to care for the stricken ones, and the relief will be immediate and effective. Total subscriptions of $180,000 were announced and arrangements made for the immediate succor of the needy. The baking of 50,000 loaves of bread daily will begin today. Free transportation will be provided by the Southern Pacific to destitute persons desiring to go to interior points.

Maj. McKeever was appointed commandant of the camps of the homeless. It was announced that to-day daily delivery into the city of 10,000,000 gallons of water will begin.

Telegraph Reopened.

Last night for the first time direct telegraphic communication was reestablished with the outside world, and this message is the first, to be sent. By energetic efforts the Postal Telegraph company succeeded in restoring one of its lines, and its managers hope to bring its service back to normal in a day or two. The Postal office is in a little wooden structure erected on piles at the water front. Fires are now burning in three districts. One is in that portion that extends from Nob Hill easterly toward the water front.

Flames May Die Out.

It is traveling slowly northward toward the Telegraph Hill section. It may die out for lack of material or may again sweep toward the extreme water front. The second center is in the Mission district. Here the fire has reached Eighteenth street, but it is making little headway toward the hills to the west, where thousands of people are camped.

The third and most dangerous fire is that threatening the western section. This is really a continuation of the Nob Hill fire. It is wedge-shaped, with the apex pushing forward.

Awful Havoc Wrought.

The magnitude of the calamity that has befallen San Francisco became apparent yesterday morning when a red sun arose above the horizon and dissipated the pall of darkness that hung over the stricken districts.

Looking eastward from the heights in the central portion of the metropolis, everything attested to the awful havoc wrought by earthquake and flame.

Where once rose noble buildings in serried column now stand nothing but frail walls, isolated, tottering chimneys, heaps of twisted iron and huge piles of brick and mortar.

Death and Disaster.

On miles of streets the front walls of ruined buildings still stand, swaying with the concussions of distant dynamite explosions and the rising winds. Frequently a crash of stone and brick, followed by a cloud of dust, gave warning to pedestrians of the unsafety of travel.

All manners of reports of death and disaster are coming to the temporary headquarters of the authorities, but they are received with dut allowance for the excitement of the occasion.

Fleeing by Thousands.

Thousands upon thousands of people are fleeing from the fire. They are flocking to the ferries, to the parks, to the military reservation and to the suburbs. Residents of the hillsides in the central portion of the city seemingly were safe from the roaring furnace that was consuming the business section. They watched the towering mounds of flames and speculated as to the extent of the territory that was doomed. Suddenly there was whispered alarm up and down the long line of watchers and they hurried away to drag clothing, cooking utensils and scant provisions through the streets. From Grant avenue the procession moved westward. Men and women dragged trunks, packed huge bundles of blankets, boxes of provisions—everything. Wagons could not be hired except by paying the most exorbitant rates. But there is no panic.

People Are Stunned.

The people are calm, stunned. They seem not to realize the extent of the calamity. They hear that the city is destroyed in so far as business plants are concerned; they tell each other in the most natural tones that their residences are wiped out by the flames, but there is no hysteria, no outcry, no criticism.

THE OCTAGONAL HOUSE

Groceries Are Seized.

Every grocery in San Francisco has been seized by the authorities and each family is being sold only one article at a time. The police and military prohibit overcharging. Gen. Funston announced yesterday morning that rations would soon reach the city and then the people would be supplied from the Presidio. Bakeries have already been built within the reservation and the bread supply, therefore, has not failed completely. The governor also has been asked to aid in getting refugees to Oakland, Berkeley and Alameda.

In Smoky Nakedness.

Tug boats and steamers are being pressed into service for this purpose and thousands are on the way to the ferries. From the water front the burned city can be seen in all its smoky nakedness.

From the Pacific Mail docks to Vallejo street on the West side, a distance of two miles, wreckage and ruin is the rule. Although the fire did not jump East street, the damage has been enormous. The filled-in land facing the ferry building is a succession of gullies from four to six feet deep.

City Is Mass of Ruins.

Looking up Market street, the city is a smouldering mass of ruins. Great factories, mercantile houses, banks and railroad office buildings are gone and only in spots is there a tower, a monument of some burned structure. There is scarcely any water to relieve the thirst of the suffering.

The heat is threatening danger, for the dead in many instances are lying in the streets and ruins.

In Fear of Pestilence.

The authorities are doing all in their power to remove the corpses before pestilence appears. It has been necessary repeatedly to move the injured from places where they had sought refuge, for the fire spread with alarming rapidity. Water is the incessant cry of the firemen and the people—one wants it to fight with, the other to drink—but there is only a scant drinking supply.

Under Martial Law.

At 9 o'clock, under a special message from President Roosevelt, the city was placed under martial law. Hundreds of troops patrolled the streets and drove the crowds back, while hundreds more were set at work assisting the fire and police departments. The strictest orders were issued and in true military spirit the soldiers obeyed. During the afternoon three thieves met their death by rifle bullets while at work in the ruins. The curious were driven back at the breasts of the horses that the cavalrymen rode and all the crowds were forced from the level district to the hilly section of the north.

Water Supply Cut Off.

The most lamentable feature of the conflagration is the utter absence of means to stay its progress. There is not a sound water main east of Van Ness avenue, and west of that street the supply has been made scanty by numerous breaks in the pipes, due to earthquake.

A few scattered suburbs is about all that remains of San Francisco. It is to these latter places, and especially the ones nearer the ocean beach that the bulk of the homeless are seeking safety, although the rush for the ferries, too, was in the nature of a panic.

Everything Wiped Out.

In the fire zones the destruction was complete. Therein were locate St. Ignace's school and church, of which only the walls remain. Mechanics' Pavilion, the scene of hundreds of great political, social and sporting events, is in ruins. Opposite it was the St. Nicholas hotel, and it is now simply a pile of ruined bricks, a ruin among many of a similar nature.

From this point down to the Oakland ferry an Associated Press man made his way through the menacing wall frontages and climbing over hillocks of masonry and junk of all sorts in the middle of the city's greatest thoroughfare.

Appalling Scene.

The journey was heartrending,—the scene appalling. On either side was ruins, nothing but ruins. Southward, in hundreds of blocks, hardly a building remained.

The United States mine escaped almost unscathed on account of its isolated environments and the fireproof construction, but the force of the rending power of the earthquake could be seen in the cracked walls of the postoffice on Seventh and Mission streets; the ground sunk for several feet.

SAN FRANCISCO

Like Chicago, Boston, Galveston and others, San Francisco will probably rise from her ruins to even greater glory and prosperity among the fairest cities of the world. Earthquakes, or tremors as they call them there, have been of such frequent occurrence there in the past that little heed was given to them and it will probably be so in the future for in nothing, so much as in danger, does familiarity breed contempt. The fear of another such awful calamity will pass away; the thousands who have fled from the city will return; the work of rehabilitation, already begun, will be carried to its conclusion.

And yet no commercial necessity requires the re-building of the fallen city. The wonder is that San Francisco ever attained to her commercial supremacy. Oakland, just across the bay, has the same harbor facilities and no one yet has furnished any sufficient reason for unloading vessels from the orient at San Francisco only to tranship the same goods to Oakland before forwarding them eastward; why goods consigned to the orient should not be loaded on to vessels at Oakland instead of first ferrying them across the bay to San Francisco; nor why eastern manufacturers should ship their products through Oakland to San Francisco and back again through Oakland to the smaller towns of California.

Although Oakland is San Francisco's nearest neighbor, perhaps her comparative immunity is one of the freaks of the earthquake but it seems to be the very nature of things that it should be a safer place than the peninsular city. Already a city of nearly a hundred thousand inhabitants she may soon come to vie with her sister city across the bay.

GOVERNOR JOHNSON HONORED.

In the insurance message sent to congress last Tuesday President Roosevelt gives Governor John A. Johnson and Insurance Commissioner Thomas D. O'Brien credit for suggesting the calling of the insurance convention at Chicago last February.

The message to congress asks the senate and house to pass a law for the District of Columbia embodying the features suggested by the convention, and expresses the hope that it will serve as a model for the several states. The president adds further: "The committee recently met in Chicago and in thorough and painstaking fashion sought to prepare a bill which should be at once protective of policyholders and fair and just to insurance companies, and which prevent the graver evils and abuses of the business and at the same time forestall any wild or drastic legislation which would be more harmful than beneficial."

In speaking of the Chicago convention President Roosevelt says: "The convention was called because of the extraordinary disclosures of wrongful insurance methods recently made by the Armstrong legislative committee of the state of New York; the suggestion that it should be called coming to me originally from Governor John A. Johnson of Minnesota, through Commissioner of Insurance Thomas D. O'Brien of that state."

The Minneapolis Journal believes that Senator Stephens is very strong in Red Lake county, but that sentiment will not be unanimous for him. It is very certain that Mr. Stephens will be strong in Red Lake, which was formerly a part of Polk county and it is also very probable that by hunting long enough someone can be found opposed to him in that county which would not make the sentiment unanimous for him.—Crookston Times.

Red Lake county is well aware of the fact that it was formerly a part of Polk, and if is not unmindful that A. D. Stephens was the head and front of the opposition to county division. Two cogent reasons why Red Lake county should get into the Stephens bandwagon, and also supply the bands.

It is impossible for the Republicans to arouse enthusiasm this year. The people are satisfied with the manner in which Governor Johnson is conducting the affairs of state. They are not willing to exchange a good man for an unknown quantity. They are not interested in the bickerings of office-seekers. The lethargy in political affairs this year is easily accounted for. The voters intend to give Governor Johnson another term.

It would have been interesting to observe the countences of Julius Block, Jacob Jacobsen, Sam Lord, Andy Stephens, et al., as they read President Roosevelt's endorsement of Governor Johnson and Insurance Commissioner O'Brien.

A. L. Cole of Walker has announced his intentions to seek the republican gubernatorial nomination. There is a certain frigidity about the week that some republican doesn't set forth his desires to try for a defeat.

Minnesota has already shown how to be generous when a great calamity overtakes another section of the country. Already nearly $200,000 has been raised by the state for benefit of the San Francisco sufferers.

The result in the St. Paul municeipal election seems to be a mere matter of majorites. The democrates claim Bob Smith will have 4,000, while the republicans are not willing to concede more than 2,000.

The Duluth News Tribune thinks Gladstone Dowie should move to Milwaukee. A fellow and his best girl were arrested there the other day for kissing each other good-bye on the street corner.

One beautiful ray of light pierces the gloom of the awful calamity at San Francisco. It is the splendid response of the American people to those in distress.

Isn't it about time for the entries in the Republican gubernatorial handicap to close? The track isn't wide enough to accommodate many more.

Perhaps there are others than Lund who are looking for the advertising.

EXPECT LAND TO MOVE

Reaction Toward Northern Minnesota is Expected to Set in soon.

Landmen all over the northwest predict that a reaction toward this section of the county is soon to set in, and that land here is soon going to be moving again as it did three and four years ago.

For two or three years past there has been a feeling of unrest among people all over the country, and a great immigration has been going to Canada and the southwest. With the unexcelled opportunities right at home there has been no sane reasons why people should go to uncertain sections in search of farm lands. Experience has taught them their mistake and it is predicted in well informed quarters that the tide will soon turn and that thousands of the deluded will return from their ranbow chasing.

As an evidence of the fact that large land interests feel sure that we have just about reached the turning movement, it may be stated that many of the concerns holding large blocks of land in Nothern Minnesota have advanced the prices on the land from $1 to $2 an acre in anticipation of a foward movement.—Wadena Pioneer-Journal.

Fireless Stoves.

Experments are peing made with so-called fireless cookstoves at several army posts in this countay. The fireless cookstove is merely a wooden chest lined with cloth and filled with hay or straw. A half pound of rice, an equal amout of hominy and a pound of beans were were exposed to a fire, being allowed to boil for five minutes. They were then taken out and placed immediately in the hay box, and examined one hour and fifteen minutes later. The rice was thoroughly cooked, but the hominy and beans were only partly done. A stew made of beef, potatoes, and onions after six minutes of fire and two hours in the hay box was foud to perfectly cooked. With all your meals serve golden grain belt beer. Wild Flowers.

Yellowstone is truly one of the "Seven Wonders." As a place of grandeur and scenery it is unsurpassed by the famous Alps. Wild flowers abound there in great profusion.

In order to furnish the public with a souvenir within reach of all, the Northern Pacific railway has prepared a dainty publication, containing twelve specimens of some of the most beautiful wild flowers within the park, which have been pressed and nicely mounted in portfolio form.

This magnificent souvenir, which also contains six full page halftone illustrations, will be mailed prepaid upon receipt of 50c.

RHEUMATISM

TROUBLESOME PAINS AND ACHES

While Rheumatism is usually worse in Winter because of the cold and dampness of a changing atmosphere, it is by no means a Winter disease entirely. Persons in whose blood the uric acid, which produces the disease, has collected, feel its troublesome pains and aches all the year round. The cause of Rheumatism is a sour, acid condition of the blood, brought about by the accumulation in the system of refuse matter, which the natural avenues of bodily waste have failed to carry off. This refuse matter coming in contact with the different acids of the body, forms uric acid which is absorbed by the blood and distributed to all parts of the body, and Rheumatism gets possession of the system. Rheumatic persons are almost constant sufferers; the nagging pains in joints and muscles, are ever present under the most favorable climatic conditions, while exposure to dampness or an attack of indigestion will often bring on the severer symptoms even in warm, pleasant weather. Liniments, plasters, lotions, etc., relieve the pain and give the sufferer temporary comfort, but are in no sense curative; because Rheumatism is not a disease that can be rubbed away or drawn out with a plaster. S. S. S. is the best treatment for Rheumatism; it goes down into the blood and attacks the disease at its head, and by neutralizing the acid and driving it out, and building up the thin, sour blood, cures Rheumatism permanently. Being made entirely of roots, herbs and barks, S. S. S. will not injure the system in the least. Book on Rheumatism and any medical advice without charge.

CHAPTER XIII.

"Salvarez Must Be Saved!"

"This plan of yours—to have the execution of Salvarez postponed until midnight—is beyond my comprehension. Is there any game in it?"

It was Gomez who spoke. He and Francisco were in the Council Room. Philip was away in another part of the castle with Don Juan.

"Game?" replied Francisco. "What game could there be? What do you mean, Gomez? Explain your insinuations!"

"It is strange that a true lover of the king and a hater of the Republic should seek to delay the execution of one of Crespo's most dangerous generals. Rather, to my mind, should he hasten the death of the entire horde."

Francisco smiled.

"General Gomez," he said, "there are other hearts than yours. You are not the only friend the king has in Venezuela. Have I not led my soldiers?"

"Your soldiers? Oh, yes, your soldiers. Of course, my dear Pedro, your valor is beyond dispute. But in this case of Salvarez—the delay of his execution as demanded by you and yielded by Philip—is, to say the least, inexplicable. There must be a motive in it."

"Yes," replied Francisco, after a pause, "there is a motive in it. There is a reason why I have asked to have the execution of Salvarez postponed. I have explained this reason to the king. It satisfied him. It must satisfy you."

Gomez laughed.

"Which is your way of informing me that it is none of my business," he said.

"Not so. You are general of the army. You—"

"Oh, well, let it drop. If Philip is satisfied, I am sure I ought to be. There are matters to be thought of that are more important than this rebel general. It is time we moved toward the Orinoco."

"I thought it had been decided that our safest plan was to wait here for Crespo's army to attack us. He will, undoubtedly, send only small detachments at a time. We can destroy them as they come."

"Nonsense," said Gomez, shrugging his shoulders. 'Are we to sit here inactive while Crespo fires the enthusiasm of the mobs north of the Orinoco? What would Godoy, Hernandez and the others say to that? Remember, we have thousands of supporters there who are ready to join us as soon as we begin our triumphant march toward Caracas. If we remain here, they will think we are afraid, and will desert the Crespo. I understand our people well enough to know that their loyalty to our cause can be depended upon only as long as we show them we are succeeding. Our best move is to cross the Orinoco as soon as possible, picking up reinforcements on the way. We shall have easily twice as many followers as Crespo by the time we meet him."

"But will the king leave the castle as long as Garza's daughter is ill?"

"He must. Is the cause to be lost through his infatuation?"

When Francisco had gone, Gomez sent for a certain captain upon whom he felt that he could rely.

"General, you sent for me," said the captain, as he entered.

"Yes, I sent for you, because I trust you more than I do any other officer of the king, and I have something for you to do."

"Thank you, general. I will endeavor to deserve your high regard."

"Captain, what do you think of Francisco?"

"Francisco? What do I think of him? That is a strange question, general."

"I know it is, but strange circumstances cause it. You were probably surprised when you learned that the execution of Salvarez was postponed till midnight."

"Yes, I was surprised at that."

"You would no doubt be more surprised if you knew that this was done at the solicitation of Francisco himself."

"Francisco! He was to give the command to fire."

"Just so. Now, captain, you have lived near enough to Francisco to know something about him. What have been the relations existing between Francisco and the family of Salvarez? Is there anything there?"

"Oh, Francisco has long wanted to marry the daughter of Salvarez. Everybody knew that."

"Do you think his love for the girl is sincere?"

"Sincere? It is strong enough."

"You don't like the word sincere "

"It hardly applies to ordinary cases of love on the Orinoco. I think Francisco wants her for his own happiness. I don't think he considers hers."

"Still, his passion for her is such that he would resort to any means to compel her to marry him."

"I think so."

"So do I. Now I will tell you why I sent for you. I believe Francisco is a traitor."

"Traitor! Caramba! I like such traitors. He was in the thickest of the fight."

"That is all true enough, but does not alter my opinion. There is something in this request of his to have the execution of Salvarez delayed till midnight that makes me doubt him. The change from daylight to darkness was significant. With this suspicion in my mind, I took the trouble to learn whom he had chosen to form the firing squad. They are, to a man, picked friends of his. There is some treachery afoot, you may be sure. Could it be possible that he has promised to let Salvarez escape, to gain the girl's love?"

"It could be done if Francisco wished to do it."

"But he must not be allowed to do it. It must be your work to take a dozen of your men—men who are not friendly to Francisco—and watch, without being watched. That is, secrete yourselves some time before midnight where you can see the execution. Give Francisco plenty of time to prove his treachery. If he allows Salvarez to escape, see that the rebel general is at once killed and arrest Francisco and bring him before the king."

"That is easily done."

"Then do it."

"I will."

"And keep your own counsel. Do not allow Francisco to know that we suspect him."

"You may trust me," said the captain, as he went out.

While all this had been going on, two forms were crouching close to the sliding panel that separated them from the council room, and every word uttered by Gomez and his associates had been heard by Medworth and Tempest.

When the captain had gone, one of the crouching figures made a sign and crept noiselessly away. The other followed him. In a moment they had descended the stone stairs to the caverns under the castle.

"Well," said Tempest, "the thing gets hotter and hotter. But we have something to do."

"What is it?"

"Salvarez must be saved!"

"Salvarez! He ought to be, but how?"

"I do not know yet. We know what room he is in. In some way he must be told of this scheme of Gomez's. Come what may, Salvarez must be saved!"

CHAPTER XIV.

The Barred Window.

That evening was dark and cloudy. By nine o'clock the largest object would not cast a shadow.

Jacinta, still weak after the exhausting excitement of the day, waited almost breathlessly for the midnight hour to come, for it was by this time certain that the plan of Francisco was working to perfection. But, so strangely are women constituted, even as she rejoiced in the fact that her father's life was to be saved, she began to rebel against the fulfillment of the promise that had made his salvation possible.

She loathed and despised Francisco, whom she knew to be a man of low and brutal tastes, a small, mean soul, and her heart grew sick when she thought of the future that must now be hers—bound to a man upon whom she would look only with loathing and contempt.

And as her mind dwelt on the shortcomings and evil character of the man who was destined to be her husband, there rose before her the picture of the handsome young American who had rescued her from Francisco's evil hands.

There was a man she could have loved.

"He loves another," she said to herself. "And that other is to be married to the hateful conqueror. Ah! if I were free, why might not the American love me?"

She cast aside her gloomy thoughts and went to the window, where, pressing her tear-stained face against the bars, she peered out into the starless night. A slight rustling sound beneath the window startled her. She took a step backward in sudden fear.

She listened intently. What was that A whisper! She listened again. This time there could be no doubt.

A voice came out of the darkness, whispering, almost whistling the name, "Salvarez."

"Are you the daughter of General Salvarez?" came the voice.

"Yes, yes," she replied. "We are prisoners. I thought you were also taken."

"So we were," replied Medworth, "but Tempest and I escaped."

"You will be captured," said Jacinta, really alarmed for him. "Why do you not remain hidden?"

"I came to warn your father—to save him," was the reply.

Jacinta's breath came hard. She strained her eyes, and by the aid of what little light escaped through the window she saw the handsome face of the American upturned to hers.

"To save my father!" she exclaimed. "Brave friend! But he is already safe."

"No, he is not," said Medworth. "I know what you mean. You promised to marry Francisco——"

"I loathe—hate—despise him," whispered Jacinta.

"Perhaps you do," said Medworth, in reply to her remark about Francisco. "You ought to. Did he promise to save your father if you consented to be his wife?"

"Yes, yes," panted Jacinta. "Is the wretch false?"

"No. I think he means to carry out his contract, but it is impossible for him to succeed. By crouching at the sliding panel we can hear all that is said in the council room. Gomez was there with Francisco. Gomez seemed to think Francisco would play him false and allow your father to escape. The men that Francisco picked to form the firing squad were friends of his own, and Gomez thought it looked suspicious. But Gomez seemed at last to be reassured by Francisco, and they talked of other matters. But Francisco had no sooner left than Gomez sent for an officer, to whom he gave this order: The officer is to take some men and lie hidden near the spot where the execution is to take place. If your father is not shot by Francisco he is to be shot by the others."

"Oh!" sobbed Jacinta. "Then there is no hope for my poor father!"

"I want to help him escape," said Medworth. "Have you not thought of the secret passage?"

"Yes, we have thought of it; but to what purpose? My father says the enemy were there, and drove our men who were to blow up the castle from the place."

"No; that was Tempest and myself. We alone know the secret."

"Is it so? Ah, but what good is it to know that? An armed guard is just outside our door, and no other room connects with the secret passage but the library. Even if my father made a dash for liberty, they would discover his retreat, and all would be lost."

"Can these bars be wrenched out?" asked Medworth, placing his hand on one.

"No,' 'replied Jacinta; and as if to test their strength with them, she placed her hand above his, touching it. At the contact another thrill set her young heart to fluttering.

"Then in some way he must be assisted," said Medworth. "The secret passage must be reached."

"I can suggest nothing," said the girl. "Francisco was my only hope."

"How many guards are there?" he asked.

"One," she replied.

"Listen. You are not far from the library."

"No. The distance from that door to this is not great."

"Then I will go back, creep up to the sliding panel, and see if any one is in the library. If there is no one, I will endeavor to fasten the door. Is there a lock "

"Yes. We always kept the key hanging near the door—on the right."

"Good. If it is there still, I will lock the door and bring the key to you. That will keep others out, and your father will know the coast is clear. Or course, if they come and find it locked there will be an uproar, and we shall be defeated, but so we should be if any one went into the room unknown to us."

"Not if my father was armed," said Jacinta. "If there was only one."

"No, that is true enough. Better take the chance then with the door open. But I must go to see if there is any one there, and to get a pistol for your father. My own is in the secret passage. Your father must be informed of the plan while I am gone. When I return, he must in some way attract the attention of the guard, get him inside the room and silence him before he has time to give the alarm. Then you can all three escape to the secret passage. I will meet you there. When you are safe in the caverns we can plan further," and Medworth was gone.

The trembling girl lost no time in acquainting her father with the details of Medworth's plan. While he listened to her a grim smile played around the old warrior's mouth.

"A brave youtn!" he said. "We will see how his plan can be made to work."

ITALY GIVES US A HINT.

What Her Five Fast Battleships Could Do to This Country.

We are not accustomed to consider Italy very much of a naval power; yet the five battleships of 20 knots and better that she has built or building might make us endless trouble if we were so unfortunate as to have them against us. They could range our whole coast, destroying everything afloat except our battleships and our fastest cruisers, and remaining themselves in absolute obscurity. They could cut off all trade between the United States, Cuba and Porto Rico. They could wreck the entrance of the Nicaragua canal, if that were finished. They could go through the Suez canal, harry our naval force at Manila and rekindle the insurrection in the Philippines. They could loot our coaling station at Tutuila, carry off our governor from Guam, as the Charleston did to the Spaniards, and wreck our trade with Hawaii. They could devastate our Pacific coast, ruin the shore mines at Nome and capture the gold fleet from Alaska. No battleships that we could send in pursuit of them could catch them. The only things with which we could hope to bring them to an engagement would be our new armored cruisers, and it might be that these commerce destroyers, without a gun heavier than eight-inch, and with only six inches of armor, but with the all-important quality of speed, would save us from a danger before which our ponderous battleships would lie helpless.—New York Journal.

THE CHOICE OF PAINT.

Fifty years ago a well-painted house was a rare sight; to-day an unpainted house is rarer. If people knew the real value of paint a house in need of paint would be "scarcer than hen's teeth." There was some excuse for our forefathers. Many of them lived in houses hardly worth preserving; they knew nothing about paint, except that it was pretty; and to get a house painted was a serious and costly job. The difference between their case and ours is that when they wanted paint it had to be made for them; whereas when we need paint we can go to the nearest good store and buy it, in any color or quality ready for use. We know, or ought to know by this time, that to let a house stand unpainted is most costly, while a good coat of paint, applied in season, is the best of investments. If we put off the brief visit of the painter we shall in due time have the carpenter coming to pay us a long visit at our expense. Lumber is constantly getting scarcer, dearer and poorer, while prepared paints are getting plentier, better and less expensive. It is a short-sighted plan to let the valuable lumber of our houses go to pieces for the want of paint.

For the man that needs paint there are two forms from which to choose; one is the old form, still favored by certain unprogressive painters who have not yet caught up with the times—lead and oil; the other is the ready-for-use paint found in every up-to-date store. The first must be mixed with oil, driers, turpentine and colors before it is ready for use; the other need only be stirred up in the can and it is ready to go on. To buy lead and oil, colors, etc., and mix them into a paint by hand is, in this twentieth century, about the same as refusing to ride in a trolley car because one's grandfather had to walk or ride on horseback when he wanted to go anywhere. Prepared paints have been on the market less than fifty years, but they have proved on the whole so inexpensive, so convenient and so good that the consumption to-day is something over sixty million gallons a year and still growing. Unless they had been in the main satisfactory, it stands to reason there would have been no such steady growth in their use.

Mixed paints are necessarily cheaper than paint of the hand-mixed kind, because they are made in a large way by machinery from materials bought in large quantities by the manufacturer. They are necessarily better than paints mixed by hand, because they are more finely ground and more thoroughly mixed, and because there is less chance of the raw materials in them being adulterated. No painter, however careful he may be, can ever be sure that the materials he buys are not adulterated, but the large paint manufacturer does know in every case, because everything he buys goes through the chemist's hands before he accepts it.

Of course there are poor paints on the market (which are generally cheap paints). So there is poor flour, poor cloth, poor soap; but because of that do we go back to the hand-mill, the hand-loom and the soap-kettle of the backwoods No, we use our common sense in choosing goods. We find out the reputation of the different brands of flour, cloth and soap; we take account of the standing of the dealer that handles them, we ask our neighbors. So with paint; if the manufacturer has a good reputation, if the dealer is responsible, if our neighbors have had satisfaction with it, that ought to be pretty good evidence that the paint is all right,

"Many men of many kinds"—
Many paints of many kinds;

but while prepared paints may differ considerably in composition, the better grades of them all agree pretty closely in results. "All roads lead to Rome," and the paint manufacturers, starting by different paths, have all the same object—to make the best paint possible to sell for the least money, and so capture and keep the trade.

There is scarcely any other article of general use on the market to-day that can be bought with anything like the assurance of getting your money's worth as the established brands of prepared paint. The paint you buy today may not be like a certain patent medicine, "the same as you have always bought," but if not, it will be because the manufacturer has found a way of giving you a better article for your money, and so making more sure of your next order.

CAT CAUSED

A Woman to Faint Because She Thought It Was a Burglar.

Philadelphia Inquirer: "That was a funny incident that happened the other night," said one of Philadelphia's "finest," "that burglar cat, I mean the cat being mistaken for a burglar. But I remember a much more serious matter than that resulting from the appearance of a cat at a window of the house of a friend of mine living in Brooklyn. One evening in the winter of 1892 my friend's wife was sitting in the back parlor on the ground floor waiting for her husband to come home to tea. It was quite dusk, but she had not lighted the lamp and was doing a little dreaming, I suppose. Something happened, and when my friend let himself in with his latch-key he found his wife on the floor in a dead faint. He did all he knew to bring her back to consciousness, unsuccessfully, and finally had to leave her and run out for a doctor, who, fortunately, lived only a couple of doors away. After a lot of trouble the doctor resuscitated her, but she immediately became hysterical and went off again. In her hysterics she kept calling out that there was a man trying to get in at the window. The next day she described him as a man with a rough fur cap and a beard and striped coat; that's all she could tell, and as it was so dark. He tried to break the window, but when she shrieked and fell in a faint he must have been frightened and escaped. Of course, the story was pooh-poohed, but the lady insisted she was right. Two days later my friend went home and found her again unconscious. This time she was so seriously frightened that it was several days befor she was able to attend to her house duties, and her mother came to stay with her. Another two days passed. There had been no further attempt on the part of any man to break in. The mother had persuaded her daughter to take a nap, saying she would prepare tea, and she went down stairs to do so. It was a little later than usual, and my friend was already due home. In fact, he had the key in the keyhole, when his ears were saluted by a series of piercing shrieks. He rushed into the house and found his mother-in-law in a faint and his wife gibbering like an idiot and pointing at the window, on the sill outside of which sat a huge Angora cat with one paw up at the pane; It was nearly two years before his wife recovered her reason."

HOW RILEY GOT HIS START.

The Sweet Singer Had Struggles Which He Successfully Overcame.

James Whitcomb Riley's success began with what he considered a terrible misfortune. He tells his friends that the day on which he was discharged from the staff of the Indianapolis Journal was one of the darkest of his life. The future seemed to hold nothing for him, says the Chicago Times-Herald. It happened, however, that a state political convention was held in Indianapolis at about that time, and among the nominees was a very portly gentleman who had never made a public speech. The convention called for him after he had been nominated, and when he appeared upon the platform a speech was demanded. He cleared his throat, stood on one foot and then on the other, and said: "Gentlemen of the convention: I thank you for the honor you have given me. I can't make a speech, but I can tell you one thing. The ticket you've nominated here today is a-goin' to win 'When the frost is on the pun'kin and the corn is in the shock.' "

The uproar which followed indicated that Riley's poem, first published only a few days before, had been read by everybody present, and that it had touched a tender spot. This circumstance more than anything else induced the business manager of the Journal, who was Riley's steadfast friend, to 'undertake in partnership with the poet to have a little book, "The Old Swimmin' Hole and 'Leven More Poems," published. It made an immediate hit and gave Riley a national reputation.

Delicate Girl.

From the Minneapolis (Kan.) Messenger: A young man spent Sunday with his best girl over on Pipe Creek somewhere and noticed she did not eat much for dinner or supper. He asked her with a kind smile if she was sick, and she replied by saying she seldom ate much at any time. On Monday morning he met the girl's little brother going to school and asked him how his sister was. The little boy told him that "she was just awful sick, that mama told her that she had eaten too much pumpkin pie, cold cabbage and fat bacon last night after you went home." The young man asked if a doctor had been called. The boy said, "No; Sis is afraid to send for Dr. Aplin for fear he would find out what made her so sick and tell it to her friends."

Wheeling.

There is no reason why middle-aged or even old men should not take to cycling, but it should be with a frank recognition of the limitations which age imposes. Great speed, long distances and hill climbing put a strain on the constitution and will find out the weak places—the parts of the system which are aging faster, perhaps, than the rest; the heart, it may be, or the vessels of the brain. So also in regard to riding bicycles in crowded thoroughfares; the strain on the attention is considerable; the risk is not small if a man has lost the quickness of youth. If you are young you may ride fast; if middle-aged at a fair pace; but old men should be very careful and never ride at a greater speed than five miles an hour.—Chicago Tribune.

MISS. LUCY McGIVNEY

"PE-RU-NA WORKED SIMPLY MARVELOUS."

Suffered Severely With Headaches—Unable to Work.

Miss Lucy V. McGivney, 452 3rd Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y., writes:

"For many months I suffered severely from headaches and pains in the side and back, sometimes being unable to attend to my daily work.

"I am better, now, thanks to Peruna, and am as active as ever and have no more headaches.

"The way Peruna worked in my case was simply marvelous."

We have in our files many grateful letters from women who have suffered with the symptoms named above. Lack of space prevents our giving more than one testimonial here.

It is impossible to even approximate the great amount of suffering which Peruna has relieved, or the number of women who have been restored to health and strength by its faithful use.

TEMPER INDICATED BY THUMB.

How to Judge What Kind of a Companion She Is.

"By her thumb ye shall know her," is the latest guide to the young man who contemplates matrimony and yet is doubtful how the chains of wedlock will sit on the girl of his heart. Delightful a companion as she is before marriage, will she turn out a termagant? He can learn readily, say the modern sages, and by the folding of her thumbs. He should take her to church and watch her closely. When she crosses her hands piously he should note if she folds her right thumb over her left, or vice versa. If the left goes over the right, she has a dominating mind and he will be walking a chalk line when he's hers. If the right goes over the left, she will be a docile, uncomplaining mate, who acknowledges the superiority of the masculine mind.

Just Like a Girl.

"Yes, a gentleman will always destroy a lady's love letters when there has been a quarrel between them."

"Of course, Jeanette, and so will a lady destroy those received from a gentleman. I hope you tore up that batch you received from Jack."

"Indeed Idid. I tore them up in the tiniest pieces imaginable."

"And were you very angry, dear?"

"Angry? Why, it took me two whole days to paste them together again."

A Good Sermon.

"There!" exclaimed the Rev. Mr. Gasaway, as he finished writing his sermon. "I flatter myself that very few preachers could beat that bit of eloquence."

"What's your text, dear?" asked his wife.

" 'Let nothing be done through vainglory.' "

A Strong Part.

"We're in great luck at the university," exclaimed the youth. "Six Cherokee Indians have just matriculated."

"Does that help you?" asked the baffled father.

"I should say!" said the youth. "Think how they can yell at the football games."

Not Contemporaries.

Crittick—Yes, I took in the opening performance of Gagley's comic opera last night.

Askins—Yes? Nothing new there, I suppose?

Crittick—Well, some of the people in the audience seemed to be; they laughed at the jokes.

Hard to Locate.

"Being a multimillionaire is too monotonous. If you have too much money you can't enjoy frivolous pastimes."

"Oh, I don't know. Mr. Rockefeller plays the children's game quite often."

"Children's game? What kind is that?"

"Hide and seek."

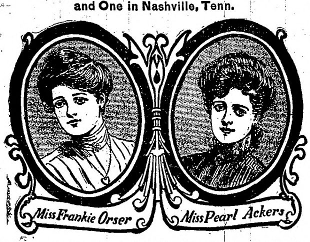
WORKING WOMEN

Their Hard Struggle Made Easier—Interesting Statements by a Young Lady in Boston and One in Nashville, Tenn.



All women work; some in their homes, some in church, and some in the whirl of society. And in stores, mills and shops tens of thousands are on the never-ceasing treadmill, earning their daily bread.

All are subject to the same physical laws; all suffer alike from the same physical disturbance, and the nature of their duties, in many cases, quickly drifts them into the horrors of all kinds of female complaints, tumors, ulceration, falling and displacements or perhaps irregularity or suppression, causing backache, nervousness, irritability and lassitude.

They especially require an invigorating, sustaining medicine which will strengthen the female organism and enable them to bear easily the fatigues of the day, to sleep well at night, and to rise refreshed and cheerful.

How distressing to see a woman struggling to earn a livelihood or perform her household duties when her back and head are aching, she is so tired she can hardly drag about or stand up, and every movement causes pain, the origin of which is due to some derangement of the female organism.

Miss F. Orser, of 14 Warrenton Street, Boston, tells women how to avoid such suffering; she writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I suffered misery for several years with female irregularities. My back ached; I had bearing-down pains, and frequent headaches; I could not sleep and could hardly drag around. I consulted two physicians without relief, and as a last resort, I tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and to my surprise, every ache and pain left me. I gained ten pounds and am in perfect health."

Miss Pearl Ackers, of 327 North Summer Street, Nashville, Tenn., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I suffered with painful periods, severe backache, bearing-down pains, pains across the abdomen; was very nervous and irritable, and my trouble grew worse every month.

"My physician failed to help me and I decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I soon found it was doing me good. All my pains and aches disappeared, and I no longer fear my monthly periods."

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the unfailing cure for all these troubles. It strengthens the proper muscles, and displacement with all its horrors will no more crush you.

Backache, dizziness, fainting, bearing-down pains, disordered stomach, moodiness, dislike of friends and society—all symptoms of the one cause—will be quickly dispelled, and it will make you strong and well.

You can tell the story of your sufferings to a woman, and receive helpful advice free of cost. Address Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass. The present Mrs. Pinkham is the daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham and for twenty-five years she has, under her direction and since her decease, been advising sick women free of charge.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Succeeds Where Others Fail.

50% MORE CREAM FROM SAME COWS.

Don't accuse your cows of being unprofitable. Give them a square deal and they will pay you well. If you are not using a centrifugal cream separator from 20 per cent. to 50 per cent. of your cream is thrown away with the skimmilk—just wasted—and the cows accused of not earning their feed. In addition your own time and labor are being wasted. Why not get a DE LAVAL cream separator, stop these leaks, and double your profits. A DE LAVAL machine may be bought upon such liberal terms that it will more than earn its cost while you are paying for it and still be good for 20 years more of clear profit use. As compared with other separators the superiority of the DE LAVAL is seen in the fact that over 700,000 DE LAVAL machines, ten times the number of all others combined, have been sold to date. You may have ample trial of a DE LAVAL free of all cost. Now is the time to get a DE LAVAL while cows are making the largest product, and savings count biggest.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

WALTER G. BENZ
4TH ST. SOUTH MINNEAPOLIS

YELLOW SHIRT WAS A MASCOT

Turf Plunger Always Had Good Luck When He Wore It.

From the New Orleans Times-Democrat: "If you had dropped into our place a few days ago," said a local laundryman, "you would have witnessed the singular spectacle of a large establishment concentrating its energies upon one particularly ugly yellow striped shirt, worth 59 cents at the bargain counter. We received the garment at noon sharp and delivered it, neatly washed and ironed, at 1:15, for which feat the operatives divided a nice, new $5 bill. The incident came about in this way: There is a certain sporting man in New Orleans who plays the races, and, needless to say, is a firm believer in hoodooes and mascots. Some time ago he made a big winning after a long streak of hard luck, and in looking around for the usual omen he happened to notice that he was wearing a peculiarly hideous yellow-barred shirt, which he had always loathed and had put on that morning by mere accident in hasty dressing. Of course that settled it, and when he made two or three other winnings incased in the same garment he didn't dare change it for fear of breaking the thread of his luck. Meanwhile the shirt did not improve in appearance. In fact, it became so grimy and disreputable looking that its owner, who is naturally a neat dresser, was ashamed to venture on the streets. He started several times to send it to the laundry, but on each occasion 'something good' would turn up on the blackboard and he would rush to his room and put it on again before placing a bet. A few days ago he told his troubles to one of our wagon men. 'If you can wash that shirt in time for me to wear it this afternoon,' he said, 'I'll give you $5. The wagon man swore by the nine gods he would have it back in time, and by bribing all hands at the laundry he kept his word. I am sorry to say that the sporty gentleman lost $150 the same day. He attributes the disaster entirely to his imprudence in having his shirt washed."

THE RAVEN IS ARTFUL.

Some Stories That Are Told Illustrating His Cleverness.

Many stories are told of the cleverness of the raven, a bird that really seems to have reasoning powers, says the Philadelphia Times. One of these tells how a raven by a skillful stratagem got a young hare for its dinner, but the mother hare drove it away. Then the raven slowly retreated, encouraging the mother to follow him and even pretending that he was afraid of her. In this fashion he led her to a considerable distance from the young one, and then suddenly, before the hare had time to realize the meaning of the trick, he rose in the air, flew swiftly back, caught the young hare in his beak and bore it away. A similar plan was adopted by some ravens that wished to steal food from a dog. They teased him until he grew so angry that he chased them from the spot, but the artful birds turned sharply around, easily reached the dish before him and carried off the choicest bits in triumph. As to the raven's power of speech, the following story, which is given on the authority of Capt. Brown, who vouches for its truth, will show how aptly it can talk: A gentleman while traveling through a wood in the south of England was startled by hearing a shout of "Fair play, gentlemen; fair play!" uttered in loud tones. The cry being presently repeated, the traveler thought it must proceed from some one in distress and at once began to search for him. He soon discovered two ravens fiercely attacking a third. He was so struck with the appeal of the oppressed that he promptly rescued him. It turned out that the victim was a tame raven belonging to a house in the neighborhood, and the cry that it had used so opportunely was one of many that it had been taught to utter.

Put to Test.

Both in the northern and western islands of Scotland the natives have some peculiar customs unfamiliar to the dwellers of the main land. One of these, known as the "marriage test," is practiced in the island of St. Kilda, where the population barely exceeds a hundred. The desire among the islanders to increase this number does not seem to be exceptionally strong, and every man before he is deemed suitable for a husband has to perform an evolution with no little bodily risk. The St. Kildans are, of course, adept rock climbers, and the aspirant for matrimony is therefore subjected to the test of balancing himself on one leg on a narrow ledge overhanging a precipice, bending his body at the same time in order to hold the foot of his other leg in his hands. If found lacking in courage the maiden withdraws her betrothal, and should the man fall over the ledge it is presumed that, in his case he will be disqualified.

An Inexhaustible Subject.

From the San Francisco Wave: Dr. Lewis James, one of the leaders of the Greenacre Chautauqua in Maine, besides being a scholar is a good deal of a wit. Meeting a friend who was attending the recent summer session of the famous institution, he asked how he was enjoying himself. "Excellently, until yesterday," was the reply, "when I heard Prof. X." "Didn't he lecture well?" asked the doctor. "Not at all," answered his friend, "he simply told us what we didn't know." "Ah!" queried the doctor, "then he is still talking?"

ATTACKED THE HEART

Awful Neuralgia Case Cured to Stay Cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Neuralgia in any form is painful but when it attacks the heart it is frequently fatal. Complicated with indigestion of a form that affected the vital organ it threatened serious consequences in an instance just reported. The case is that of Mr. F. L. Graves, of Pleasanthill, La., who tells of his trouble and cure as follows:

"I traveled considerably, was exposed to all kinds of weather and was irregular in my sleeping and eating. I suppose this was the cause of my sickness, at any rate, in May, 1905, I had got so bad that I was compelled to quit work and take to my bed. I had a good doctor and took his medicine faithfully but grew worse. I gave up hope of getting better and my neighbors thought I was surely going to die.

"I had smothering spells that it is awful to recall. My heart fluttered and then seemed to cease beating. I could not lie on my left side at all. My hands and feet swelled and so did my face. After reading about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in a newspaper I decided to try them and they suited my case exactly. Before long I could see an improvement and after taking a few boxes I was entirely cured. I am glad to make this statement and wish it could cause every sufferer to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills do not simply deaden pain; they cure the trouble which causes the pain. They are guaranteed to contain no narcotic, stimulant or opiate. Those who take them run no danger of forming any drug habit. They act directly on the blood and it is only through the blood that any medicine can reach the nerves.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N.Y.

Medical Attendants of Japan's Emperor.

The emperor of Japan is always attended by physicians, despite the fact that he is in excellent health. Four eminent medical gentlemen are attached to the imperial household, and one is within call at all hours of the day and night. The pulse and temperature of his majecty are taken four times each day and the results are carefully recorded.

All on Him.

Cholly—It makes me real cross when I think how well off some of the fellahs are that I used to run with and I'm so poor.

Miss Peppery—Proably it's because so many have amused themselves at your expense.

When a laxative is needed, nothing can be more effective than Garfield Tea, which is made of herbs. It cures sick headache, constipation and diseases of liver, kidneys, stomach and bowels; it purifies the blood, cleanses the system and clears the complexion.

A whole lot of foolish men think that that fun depends altogether on what it costs.

During the Record Race.

The dark-goggled, leather-jacketed chauffeur lowered his head like a ram and chuckled with glee.

"We are now going at 100 miles an hour," he shrieked.

"Great Hercules!" gasped the novice at his side. "Isn't there a chance of accident?"

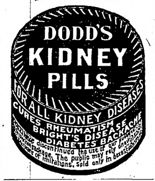
"Fear not. Don't you see that we carry emergency tires?"

"I—I know, but I—I'd feel better if we had a few emergency arms and heads along."

But the chauffeur laughed demonically and turned the curve on one wheel.

Mr. Carnegie Declined.

When Andrew Carnegie first spoke of taking up golf he was advised by Baillie MacKenzie of Edinburgh to lay out a golf course at Skibo castle. "If you take to golf," said the baillie, "you will add ten years to your life." "Do you say so?" said Mr. Carnegie; "if you can add ten years to my life I will make you a present of two millions." "Well," replied the canny magistrate, "I can't just exactly do that, but I'll play you for the two millions over your own green." The offer was not accepted.



There is no satisfaction keener than being dry and comfortable when out in the hardest storm.

READ AND YOU WILL LEARN

That the leading medical writers and teachers of all the several schools of practice endorse and recommend, in the strongest terms possible, each and every ingredient entering into the composition of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for the cure of weak stomach, dyspepsia, catarrh of stomach, "liver complaint," torpid liver, or biliousness, chronic bowel affections, and all catarrhal diseases of whatever region, name or nature. It is also a specific remedy for all such chronic or long standing cases of catarrhal affections and their resultants, as bronchial, throat and lung diseases (except consumption) accompanied with severe coughs. It is not so good for acute colds and coughs, but for lingering, or chronic cases it is especially efficacious in producing perfect cures. It contains Black Cherrybark, Golden Seal root, Bloodroot, Stone root, Mandrake root and Queen's root—all of which are highly praised as remedies for all the above mentioned affections by such eminent medical writers and teachers as Prof. Bartholow, of Jefferson Med. College; Prof. Hare, of the Univ. of Pa.; Prof. Finley Ellingwood, M. D., of Bennett Med. College, Chicago; Prof. John King, M. D., late of Cincinnati; Prof. John M. Scudder, M. D., late of Cincinnati; Prof. Edwin M. Hale, M. D., of Hahnemann Med. College, Chicago, and scores of others equally eminent in their several schools of practice.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" is the only medicine put up for sale through druggists for like purposes, that has any such professional endorsement—worth more than any number of ordinary testimonials. Open publicity of its formula on the bottle wrapper is the best possible guaranty of its merits. A glance at this published formula will show that "Golden Medical Discovery" contains no poisonous or harmful agents and no alcohol—chemically pure, triple-refined glycerine being used instead. Glycerine is entirely unobjectionable and besides is a most useful ingredient in the cure of all stomach as well as bronchial, throat and lung affections. There is the highest medical authority for its use in all such cases. The "Discovery" is a concentrated glyceric extract of native, medicinal roots and is safe and reliable.

A booklet of extracts from eminent medical authorities, endorsing its ingredients mailed free on request. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

That the man who loses at cards is seldom accused of cheating.

That you do not always find the lowest prices in the basement of a store.

That there are some men who would be only too glad to pay a bachelor's tax.

That the man who goes about looking for trouble usually finds it to his sorrow.

That one half the world doesen't know how the other half lives—and doesn't want to.

That the spring "bunnit" is here; now for the summer dress of the variagated hue.

That there are a whole lot of people in this world who take themselves to seriously.

That the average man generally likes someone else's relations better than he does his wife's.

That the season's advancement precludes the thought of any danger from spring poetry.

That the law may furnish you with a bride but most of us prefer the good old fashion way.

That it is no fault of the seasons ahat spring chickens can be produced all the year around.

That the merchant who does not advertise is usually the first to feel the effect of dull times.

That the worst feature of a political job is that you generally have to work for a living after you lose it.

That if all the excuses invented had to be patented, all the world would have to turn patent attorneys.

That volcanic eruptions and earthquakes may serve a useful purpose but it isn't human nature to believe it.

That some office holders are political accidents and then again there are those who are living catastrophes.

That many a good dishwasher has been spoiled by encountering a piano teacher who needed the money. —Ex.

That the cigarette habit in the small boy is one of the things that can be cured by the laying on of hands.

That some girls cry for help when a young man tries to kiss them, but the majority of them let him help himself.

That you may have noticed how you often expect others to do more for you than you are willing to do for yourself.

That many a man who is urged by his friends to become a candidate for office would have hard work naming the friends.

That of course it was hateful, horrid man who said a bleached blonde is always suspicious of other woman with blonde hair.

That it is said in every neighborhood there are some apparently perfectly healthy women whose doctor bill cause the other women to scream.

That squeezing the water out of New Jersey corporations would produce a tidal wave which would make the Pacific ocean sit up and take notice.

That no one but a confirmed old bachelor would dare to suggest that a girl pretends she knows a lot more at 16 than she will admit she knows at 60.

That promising young men may be all right in their way but it is the one who pays cash who is given the preference in the buisness world.

That the Red Lake Falls band gives its last indoor concert of the season at the Metropolitn opera house tomorrow night and every one should attend.

That if the generally accepted belief holds good this year, that Easter determines the kind of weather for the succeeding six Sundays, then we still have five pleasant Sundays to look forward to.

TWENTY-FOUR YEARS AGO

Items Taken From the Red Lake Falls Era.

Aug. 3, 1882.

F. E. Hunt will soon commence the erection of a new store building 24x80 feet. Glass front and modern improvements.

On Tuesday last, the gentlemen having in hand the construction of a railroad from the Nothern Pacific to Red Lake Falls, met in St. Paul. The New York capitalists are on the ground, and by the next issue of the Era we hope to publish the conclusion of the incorporators.

Aug. 17, 1882.

The brass band recently organized here is progressing finely. On Sunday afternoon they treated our people to several pieces of music, and they acquited themselves nobly.

The crowning social event of the week that attracted the attention of all here and from other places, was the marriage of Mr. Joseph Grover to Miss Mamie Zeh, on Monday, the 14th inst. At 10 o'clock the ringing of the church bell summoned a large crowd to witness the ceremony that was to bind together two of our loved and respected people for life. The officiating clergyman was Rev. Father Champagne. After the nuptial knot was tied a long line of carriages, and other vehicles and many on foot, headed by the brass band, wended their way to the residence of Mrs Zeh, where the festivities of the occasion took place. Shortly after arriving all were invited to partake of the delicious and sumptuous repast, which was served in a royal manner.

Aug. 24, 1882.

Work on the clearwater bridge and the one across Red Lake River is progressing finely. Contractor Nolan is pushing the work rapidily on the Red Lake river bridge.

Several foundations for new buildings have been started near the Catholic church. Red Lake Ealls will soon be the metropolis of the Northwest, and every one knows and believes it who comes here.

The boys have received many cigars from one of the happiest men in town this week and his name is W. A. Schrieter, who is willing to treat on the arrival of a seven pound daugther on Saturday morning last.

Joseph Smith, of New Richland, Minn., has rented the main part of Carl Krazschmar's new mamoth store building and will take possession October 1st. He will engage in the mercantile buiness on a large scale.

Aug. 31, 1882.

Andrew Lemieux, a brother of Dr. Lemieux, was badly injured this week by being thrown from a wagon. Internal suffering indicates quite serions injuries.

Sept. 7, 1882.

Ozias Levack is preparing to build a new blacksmith shop 24x45 feet, and he has a large quanity of hard stone on the ground for the foundation thereof.

We have at Red Lake Falls three of four very eligible town plats, and each locality of course to be the hub. The prospective railroad lines, will probably settle the matter shortly.

Mr. F. J. Holmes, of Sabine, has platted an addition to Red Lake Falls, adjoining Champagne & Dow's property at the southernly part of the town, and is now prepared to dispose of lots.

We learn that our sister town of St. Hilaire, situated some ten miles from here is in mourning for something, don't know what. It is reported that she has about 500 flags flying at half mast the other day.

Sept. 21, 1882.

F. E. Hunt is building the finest largest farm house in this section on his place across Red Lake river.

A son of H. B. Kaufer came up from Fergus Falls fo visit his relatives, and will probably conclude to remain with us.

Sept. 28, 1882

A. D. Stephens, of the mercantile firm of Johnson & Stephens, Fisher, was in town on buisness last Friday.

The mother of Rev. Father Champagne died on Tuesday evening, in this village, after a brief illness. She was buried today in the Catholic cemetery. A large number of people were present to pay the last tribute to this highly esteemed and respected aged lady.

Joseph Helm, the artistic painter, has executed some fine work since locating here, and is fast gaining a reputation as adept in his calling. Read his advertisment in other column.

Announcement.

About the first of May I shall retire from the hardware business in Red Lake Falls. The business will be conducted after that date by Sam E. Hunt and G. A. Kankel, who have bought my stock of hardware and fixtures and good will.

I wish to thank my friends and customers for the liberal patronage they have given me in the nearly 28 years of business in this city. Quite a number of my customers of today have been doing business with me steadily since I first started here in 1878.

I hope and trust that you will continue to do business with the young men, Hunt & Kankel, whom you will find agreeable, accomodating and competent business men and thoroughly reliable in every respect.

To those who are indebted to me I would urgently request that you call in and arrange for a settlement.

Wishing you one and all a prosperous year, I am

Sincerely yours,
—Frank E. Hunt.

TOWN ASSESSORS HOLD A MEETING

Towns Divided in Five Classes for the Purpose of Real Estate Valuation.

Have Fixed a Basis of Assessment on Live Stock Throughout the County.

The township assessors of Red Lake county held a meeting Thursday at the office of the county auditor. All the assessors were present except Robert Swenson of Goodridge, Peter C. Wold of Highlanding, James Gilbertson of River Falls and O. Peterson of Smiley. An organization was perfected with County Auditor Ford as chairman and Adam Zeh secretary. It was agreed that all property should be assessed at 40 per cent of its value.

For the purpose of real estate valuation the several towns of the county were divided into five classes. Such classes, the towns embraced and the value per acre as fallows:

Class 1, $3.50—North, city of Red Lake Falls, Terrebonne, Red Lake Falls and Thief River Falls.

Class 2, $3.00 Black River, Polk Centre, Rocksbury, River Falls, Louisville, Gervais, Lake Pleasant, Poplar River, Lambert and St. Hilaire.

Class 3, $2.50—Numedal, Norden, Bray, Sanders, Wyandotte and Plummer.

Class 4, $2.00—Emardville, Garnes, Equality, Silvertson and Smiley.

Class 5, $1.50—Clover Leaf, Goodridge, Kratka, Highlanding, Mayfield, Deer Park and the unorganized towns 152, 153 and 154.

The rate of assessment of live stock was agreed upon as follows:

Horses, mules and asses—one year old, $25; two-year old, $40; three-year old, $75.

Cattle—One-year old, $8; two-year old, $12.50; cows, $20; work oxen, $37.50; sheep, $2.50; hogs, $5.

All the assessors have reported and there will be no vacancies to fill. 33.

His Friends Got Even.

Special wire to The Spectator, from Red Lake Falls, 8:30 a. m., April 15.—"It is a long lane that has no turning." So thought the Red Lake Falls friends of our editor, many of whom had been victims of his jokes in the past and now for the first time had a chance to retaliate. The opportunity could not be allowed to slip by unheeded and so was made the most of. Harry retired at the usual hour on Tuesday night happy in the thought that the morrow would be his wedding day and little dreaming of the unkind purposes in the hearts of his friends. The latter waited until he was peacefully sleeping and, being unable to open the door, removed a sash from the window, then quietly stole into his room and appropriated his entire wardrobe, carrying it away to a place of safety. This would have been bad enough at any time but the greatest loss at this time was the suit case containing the much talked of wedding suit, license and ring.

The feelings of our friend upon awakening and discovering the joke of which he had been the victim, can be more easily imagined than described. Doubtless the minutes seemed like hours as they dragged their weary length along and no one came to his relief. Nor did any one appear until the hands of the clock pointed to nine, when a messenger came with the lost apparel, much to the delight of the prisoner.

The most amusing aspect of the imprisonment, however, has not yet been told. These same fun-loving gentlemen has placed a large placard, bearing the following inscription, outside of the hotel:

"Just captured in the jungles of St. Hilaire, Jumbo, the largest specimen of his kind in existence! On exhibition in room 21. Come one, come all! Admission free."—St. Hilaire Spectator. 33

SEEDING IN THE VALLEY

Work Will All Be Done With Another Week of Good Weather.

There has been a marked improvement in the seeding conditions in the Red River Valley during the past week. On Tuesday there were local showers which stopped work after a day, but they were scattered and the area covered very small. Every farmer is now rushing his seed into the ground, and another week of good weather will see the wheat crop practically in. The wheat acreage will be smaller than last year in some sections, but the north counties will sow fully as much and some of them more than last year, as more plowing was done in that section than in this immediate vicinity. The total acreage this year will not be but slightly under the average, as much more macaroni or durum wheat will be sown this year, and there will also be a larger acreage of barley and oats, with the flax acreage about the same.

More clover and timothy will be sown this year by at least 100 per cent than was ever sowed in the Red River Valley in a single year and this is a condition that is highly satisfactory. The acreage of corn will also show a decided increase over previous years, and there will be a considerable acreage of millet. Grasses and coarse grains will be sown upon the land where the grain was not harvested last fall, and as a consequence, in instances where it is low, will not dry out early enough to permit of plowing for wheat. 33

AN INVENTORY IS FILED

Estate of Hans Langseth Foots Up To $44,884.04.

An inventory in the estate of Hans Langseth, late of Thief River Falls, has been filed in the probate court and the appraisement shows a valuation of $44,884.04. It is the largest estate ever probated in Red Lake county and at that the appraisement is considered small for it was generally believed that the stock of Mr. Langseth was worth at least $50,000. The inventory is as follows:

Real estate, $5,000; household goods, $250; wearing apparel, $100; bank stock, $1,000; book accounts, $5,043.40; notes, secured and unsecured, $4:239.03; cash in bank, $975,-44; cash on hand, $175.27; personal property, $100; merchandise, $24,-400.93; total $44,884.07. 33

Passing of Winnipeg Junction.

According to Engineer McCoy, who has charge of the work, the changes which the Northern Pacific road is making between Lake Park and Stockwood will require at least two years to complete. It will require at least a year to drive the piling necessary for the changes in the grade from Glyndon to Stockwood. Sixty five foot piles will be driven 15 feet into the ground, then they will be braced and a temporary track laid: so that the work filling may be accomplised more easily. When the work here is accomplished it will give a grade of about fifteen feet to the mile from Glyndon to Stockwoob, reversing the present grade between those places. When the change is completed Winnipeg Junction and Muskoda will be wiped off the railroad's map. The new line will run on the ridge about three-fourths of a mile north of Winnipeg Junction and will cut across the old right away at the limits of Hawley, passing Muskoda to the south. 33.

Los Angeles and Return

On account of the National Convention of Mothers the Northern Pacific will sell round trip tickets to Los Angeles or San Francisco for $59.90. Dates of sale April 25 to May 5, with final limit July 31 and stopover privileges, 26—28

FAIR PREMIUMS ARE INCREASED

Farmers Will Receive the Benefit of More Liberal Premiums This Year.

Association Would Encourage the Exhibition of High Grade of Live Stock.

The Red Lake county fair scheduled for August 8th, 9th and 10th at Thief River Falls gives promise of being a bigger success than ever before. It has been decided by the directors to increase the premiums for live stock by fifty per cent, the aggregate increase amounting to a trifle over $450. As the exhibitors in the live stock classes will get the benefits of this increase it is expected that the exhibits will be correspondingly larger and better.

The tendency is to increase the value of the fair as an agricultural exhibit and extra efforts will be made to interest every farmer in Red Lake and Eastern Marshall counties in the advantages to be derived from bringing an exhibit of some kind to the fair of 1906.—Thief River Press.

Rushing the Railroad Work.

There is something doing all along the line of the Great Northern extension. The piling work has been finished across Badger and Skunk creeks and the pile driver was brought to Roseau last Sunday and the work of piling Roseau river is being pushed by the contractors as fast as possible. In dozens of places, subcontractors and station contractors are building up the roadbed. The right of way east of Roseau is being cleared and grading will soon commence between Roseau and Hay creek. The contractors between Hay creek and Warroad are driving the work across the low places as rapidly as possible. The grade to Roseau will be finished before the first of June and July 1st, will see the work completed to Warroad, if no extremely bad weather interferes, and the mosquitoes don't carry away the laborers. The steel will be laid—well now, just as soon as the track laying begins we will let you know.—Roseau County Times. 33

Flaming Arc Light.

This new and powerful form of outdoor electric lamp has been well known abroad for several years, but has taken a long time to make its way to this country. The flaming arc is now, however, with us to stay and in use in several larger cities. It looms up from the street like a compressed conflagration, making the ordinary arcs look like bue candles. There is nothing that can equal golden grain belt beer in quality, purity and medicinal properties. To keep up your good health you should serve it at home with meals. Order of your nearest dealer or be supplied by Alex Thompson, Crookston.

Government Plats Received.

Register of Deeds Jeffers has received the government plats and field notes for the eleven towns of the Red Lake Indian reservation. In them are embraced townships 151, 152, 153 and 154; ranges 39, 40, 41, 42 and 43. The plats are open for inspection and surveyors generally will find them of inestimable value in locating lands in the eleven towns. 33

LIVE STOCK AMPHITHEATER.

Will Be Largest and Most Complete Structure of Its Kind in Country.

A building of much importance to the State of Minnesota and the whole Northwest is now being erected upon the state fair grounds. This is the new live stock amphitheater which emphasizes the great movement toward diversification of farming in the Northwest.

Seven years ago the Minnesota State Agricultural society took up the work of educating the agriculturists of the Northwest in the advantages of raising pure-bred stock. National live stock organizations were interested and have been associated in the annual exhibitions and sales. The agricultural and daily press, the institute workers, the railroads and others have assisted. The result is notable. So fully did the state legislature recognize the importance of the movement that it appropriated $50,000 toward a building in which to show the stock and hold the annual sales and a like amount was appropriated from the funds of the society. The building will cost $100,000 or more, and with one exception will be the most costly building devoted to the propagation of the gospel of purebred stock in the country.

The new amphitheater will be the largest building of its kind in the world. It will be longer, wider and have a greater area of floor and arena space than any of the four other large show buildings of the country.

The amphitheater will be the most complete and well built of the fair show buildings of the country. The architect has designed a building of modified Mission style of architecture—with brick walls covered with cement plaster and surmounted by a red tiled roof. The roof is supported by steel arches and pierced by many windows and skylights which will make the interior light and pleasant.

During fair week the amphitheater will be used for the judging of all cattle and horses and for the auction sales of all kinds.

CAN'T FOOL MINNESOTA.

Minnesota Chemist Was First to Discover Adulteration of Tablets.

The eternal vigilance of the Minnesota dairy and food department was shown recently when the representative of an Eastern firm admitted that the department's analysis of the firm's tablets was not only correct, but that Minnesota is the first state that has discovered their adulteration. The product is manufactured in Philadelphia at a branch factory of a London concern.

The product had passed inspection in every state having a pure food law, even in Pennsylvania, which is supposed to be one of the most stringent. The Minnesota inspectors brought in several samples of the tablets during the last few weeks, and coal tar dyes were found in all the bright colored samples. Notice was sent to the dealers and manufacturer.

v£TR drovisions-ydhlpskoae L m m

The representative of the firm appeared at the dairy and food office in the capitol recently with two large bottles full of the tablets and asked that they be analyzed. He stated that since the Minnesota chemist began analyzing their product they found it impossible to place any of their products with the jobbers and retailers, because all of them feared prosecution for carrying illegal goods. He stated that since this campaign had been started the firm had taken its stocks out of the state and into other states where the laws are not so strict and chemists not so vigilant.

The firm is now making a special kind, colored only with vegetable colors, for Minnesota consumers, while the use of coal tar coloring is continued in the products sent to other states.

HERD IS CONDEMNED.

Inspectors of State Live Stock Sanitary Board Are Active.

There seems to be little abatement in the number of cattle condemned and killed by the state live stock and sanitary board. A herd of nearly thirty from Washington county will be killed because they reacted when the tuberculin test was applied.

Large numbers of cattle are being held and inspected at the Minnesota Transfer and a large percentage of them have to be killed. Wisconsin and North Dakota have the same sanitary regulations as Minnesota and the authorities require the tuberculin test fo rall cattle that are shipped into the state, and if the test is not administered before they reach those states it will be administered there. Therefore, all the cattle coming from Iowa and other points to the south and consigned to Minnesota or the other two states are held at the transfer and inspected.

The epidemic of glanders which has broken out at a number of places in the state during the winter has subsided and Dr. S. H. Ward, secretary of the commission, says that the board is finding very few of the diseased animals at this time of the year. The same is true of rabies. During the past few weeks large numbers of dogs and animals bitten by the dogs have been killed by the order of the board, but at this time there are very few of the cases

RESUME OF THE NEWS

Fresh——Reliable——Brief

From Washington.

The supreme court of the United States advanced the hearing of the habeas corpus cases of Moyer, Haywood and Pettibone, charged with complicity in the murder of former Gov. Steunenberg of Idaho, naming Oct. 2 as the date for their presentation.

Senator Knox has introduced a bill which prescribes the true intent and meaning of the immunity provisions under existing statutes as follows: "Immunity shall be extended under the said provisions of the said acts only to a neurtal person who, in obedience to a subpoena, gives testimony under oath or produces evidence, documentary or otherwise, under oath." The measure is the result of the pleas of immunity in the proceedings against Chicago meat packers.

Crimes.

E. T. Wegster, a contractor, was arrested at Chicago on a fugitive warrant which charges him with bribery. Webster was interested in a company which installed a sewer system in Green Bay in 1902.

Richard G. Ivens, convicted of the murder of Mrs. Bessie Hollister, was denied a new trial by Judge Smith of Chicago and sentenced to hang, June 22. The defendant showed no concern when sentence was pronounced.

Burley Boggs killed his companion, named Blake, on Campbell's creek, at Charleston, W. Va., in a quarrel over a game of cards. He then went home, told his mother, and blew his own brains out with the same weapon. Both were about twenty-one years of age.

Assemblyman Fred Hartung of Milwaukee was adjudged not guilty of accepting a bribe by a jury in the municipal court. Hartung was indicted by the last grand jury and charged with bribery in 1901 in connection with a county contract when he was a member of the board of supervisors. Other indictments are pending against Hartung.

Casualty List.

Fire in the clothing houses of A. C. Yates & Co., at Philadelphia, caused a loss estimated at $100,000.

Matt Knudson, a carpenter, fell from a sheep shed he was repairing near Geyser, Cascade county, Mont., and was almost instantly killed.

Fire at Calumet, Mich., destroyed several buildings on Pine street, causing a loss of $50,000, and for a time threatened widespread damage in that section.

One of the cars in a government relief train took fire near Creston, Wyo., but the fire was extinguished by trainmen. Considerable damage was done to the contents of the car.

A Lehigh Valley freight train was blown up by dynamite in a mountain cutoff above Pittsburg at midnight. The engine and several cars were wrecked.

While riding on the top of a carload of logs in the Mineral Range railway yard at Calumet, Mich., William Frezey, aged twenty-three, slipped under the wheels and was instantly killed.

York Mitchell, a clerk in a real estate office at Winnipeg, lost his life by the upsetting of a canoe. His companion was saved with difficulty by the caretaker of the rowing club house.

Fire at Marquette, Mich., destroyed the Hayward hotel, a warehouse owned by the Trout creek Manufacturing company of Duluth, the South Shore railway section houses, and two small buildings. The loss is $15,000.

While Bert Thompson was driving three horses hitched to a three-section harrow in a field just west of Hopkinston, Iowa, the horses took fright and ran away. After running a short distance they came in contact with a windmill, striking it with sufficient force to break off one of the posts, which caused the whole mill to collapse. The horses were all seriously injured.

Foreign Notes.

Prof. Curie, the discoverer of radium, was run over and killed by a wagon on the Place Dauphine, Paris.

Reports show that 4,304,028 quarts of champagne wine were exported from Rheimes, France, during the fiscal year 1905, the duty paid amounting to $2,869,352.

A state of siege has been proclaimed at Denain, France, owing to the violence of the strikers, who are attacking the troops. Ball cartridges have been distributed to the soldiers.

Germany is building a consulate at Canton, and when completed it will be the finest government building of any nation represented in China. The cost will exceed $100,000, not including the land.

American wheat has been introduced into Italy, the first cargo of 145,000 bushels having just arrived at Catania and Messina. This was macaroni wheat. The island of Sicily buys over $2,500,000 worth of wheat per annum.

Many Austrian Jews who are opposed to the subscription of any part of the Russian loan in Australia are holding meetings to dissuade their coreligionists from participating. The bankers at Vienna, however, believe that the local success of the loan is assured.

News has reached Copenhagen that two Danish travelers with forty men on board foundered recently in a gale off the east coast of Iceland. A third boat with a crew of thirty is believed to have been lost.

Fruit and tomato growers of Niagara peninsula, Ontario, are talking of joining together to procure baskets from the United States. They say they can get baskets laid down at the bridge at $19.50 per 1,000, including duty and freight, while the Canadian basket combine asks $34 per 1,000.

The American legation at Constantinople has informed the porte that it declines to consider the porte's recently communicated objections to the erection of the new American school building at Salonica. The legation applied for permission to build a year ago, and informed the porte that if it had any objections to offer they should have been lodged within six months from the time the application was made.

A dispatch to the Paris Journal from Montelimer, department of the Drome, says that the authorities there found a bomb to which a burning fuse was attached, on the window sill of the library of Former President Loubet's villa, where he and his family are spending their Easter vacation. The fuse was extinguished, and an examination of the bomb, it is added, showed it to be of an extremely deadly nature.

Domestic.

Prof. John Knowles Paine, director of the musical department of Harvard university since 1875, and a well-known composer and authority on music, died suddenly of pneumonia.

The annual meeting of the imperial council of the Mystic Shriners, which was to have been held at Los Angeles May 7 to 14, has been indefinitely postponed on account of the calamity at San Francisco.

All returns from the Democratic primary election in the Sixth Alabama congressional district indicate the nomination of Capt. R. P. Hobson of Merrimac fame, over John H. Bankhead, the present representative.

A committee of the Ohio Brewers' association met at Cincinnati and decided to employ attorneys to contest the constitutionality of the Aiken law and the Jones local option law, passed recently by the general assembly.

An epidemic of meningtis is raging at Franklin, a town of 2,000 population, twenty miles from Suffolk, Va. It is said that one-fourth of the inhabitants of the place are ill of the disease. Physicians have been hurried to the scene and measures taken to prevent a further spread.

Thomas Krizenk, who was bitten by a dog at Chicago, was apparently seized with hydrophobia the following day while at work in the plant of the Standard Slaughtering company, and, armed with a large butcher knife, he drove the one hundred employes of the establishment into the street. He was finally captured and taken to the hispital, bound with ropes.

Before a distinguished company that included the most important people in official circles in Washington, Miss Marie McKenna, daughter of Justice McKenna, became the bride of Davenport Brown of Boston. The ceremony was performed at noon at the home of the bride's parents in Rhode Island avenue, and was followed by a large reception. Mr. and Mrs. Brown will spend their honeymoon in Europe.

Col. Barrington K. West, deputy commissary general of the department of the Colorado, died at his home at Denver, Colo., after an illness of four days from pneumonia. He contracted a cold while playing golf. Col. West was a graduate from West Point in the early '80s. He was born near Lexington, Ky., about forty-six years ago. A wife and three children survive him.

Those Girls.

"So you have really broken off your engagement with Jack?"

"I have, indeed."

"And do you hate him, dear?"

"Every bone in his body. I shall never speak to him again if I live to be a thousand years old."

"You mean that?"

"I do, and I shall tell him so the next time I see him."

A Long-felt Want.

"Some of us," said Borem, "are organizing a new society that you should join."

"Haven't time," replied Wise. "I'm thinking of organizing a new society myself. It's the 'S. S. U. S.'"

"What's that? The 'U. S.' sounds patriotic, anyway."

"It's more than patriotic. It's the Society for the Suppression of Useless Societies.'"

Ample Warning.

"I've just got to fall," remarked the rain to the pedestrian. "You ought to have been prepared. Didn't the weather prediotion this morning say fair?"

Tacitly acknowledging his fault, the man with out an umbrella trudged on.

A Hard Case.

"You say you had to give the patient chloroform twice?"

"Yes," replied the dentist, "I had to give it to him the second time to extract the money."

BRINGING ORDER OUT OF CHAOS

HARMONY EXISTS AMONG THOSE HANDLING SAN FRANCISCO'S AFFAIRS.

CONFUSION HAS DISAPPEARED

STREET CAR TRAFFIC RESUMED —PERMIT ISSUED FOR SKYSCRAPER.

San Francisco, April 29.—Harmony and pledges of good feeling marked the meetings yesterday of the various bodies of citizens, committees and representatives of the army which are administering the affairs of San Francisco.

The last sign of confusion and misunderstanding which at times existed here has disappeared, and the first signs of the return to former conditions were the resumption of street car traffic in certain sections and the taking out of the first permit for the erection of a modern steel structure upon the ground occupied a few days ago by a less substantial one.

Counsels Harmony.

Archbishop Riordan appeared at the meeting of the citizens' general committee yesterday and in an eloquent speech counselled harmony between those who are striving to bring order out of chaos and predicted a city greater, more beautiful and a more striking example of American pluck and enterprise than the old San Francisco.

The reappearance of the first electric cars upon the streets since the great disaster was celebrated as quite an event. City and railroad officials and invited guests filled the first cars on the run across the city, Mayor Schmitz acting as motorman.

Cheers Greet Car.

Everywhere the car was greeted with cheers. A continuous service was re-established later in the day on several cross-town lines and thousands were carried free of charge. The first building permit, applied for and granted yesterday, was for a twelve-story steel structure to be erected by Thomas McGee.

A cold rain fell for several hours Thursday night and yesterday morning and brought additional hardships upon the people sheltered only by tents and temporary buildings in the parks. To further add to their discomfort, the wind blew a gale from the north, scattering dust and ashes everywhere, in some places throwing down the tottering walls of burned buildings.

The Chinese Problem.

What to do with the unfortunate Chinese, a problem which has given the authorities considerable worry, has been settled, at least temporarily. Since the destruction of Chinatown its inhabitants have been living in tents and in even less comfortable quarters on a large tract on the north side of the bay. Knowing the habits of the Chinese, the citizens' committee and the mayor feared that even if a few of them returned to their old district and took up quarters, the entire chinese population would follow, and the problem of moving them, which has agitated San Francisco for many years, would be as great as ever.

Temporary Quarters.

Therefore, when the suggestion was made that the Chinese be moved temporarily to the Presidio it was adopted immediately, and here they will find a resting place until arrangements can be definitely made for their permanent city at Hunters Point, on the southern arm of the bay.

The finance committee late yesterday gave out the following recapitulation of the subscription fund:

Total out-of-town subscriptions, $4,617,088.43; local subscriptions, $213,950; total, $4,831,038.43; subscriptions promised but not signed, $590,400; grand total, $5,421,438.43.

Oakland Seeks Business.

Many wholesalers are settling in Oakland, and that there is danger that this settlement may be permanent, as those who apply for locations there are required to sign leases for five years.

Mayor Schmitz said that every facility must be afforded wholesalers to open temporary quarters in San Francisco.

The only limitation placed by the authorities is that the buildings shall not be more than one-story in height, as the erection of permanent buildings must await new building laws.

Many Have Narrow Escapes.

The strong wind that blew over the city Thursday afternoon and yesterday morning carried to the ground a number of blank walls and many sightseers had narrow escapes from flying bricks and timbers. The walls at the northeast corner of Stockton and Sutter streets fell with a terrific crash. A number of pedestrians and a party in an automobile had difficulty in getting out of the way. Another wall at Market and Geary streets fell outward just as hundreds of persons from the Oakland ferryboat were streaming along Market street. Several persons were struck by bricks but no one was seriously injured.

Dewey Is in Suez Canal.

Port Said, Egypt, April 29—The United States drydock Dewey, on her way to the Philippine islands in tow, entered the Suez canal yesterday.

INSURANCE MAN IS INDICTED

WASHINGTON LIFE'S EX-PRESIDENT IS UP ON CHARGE OF PERJURY.

New York, April 29. — William A. Brewer, Jr., formerly president of the Washington Life Insurance company, was yesterday indicted by the grand jury for alleged perjury. The charge grows out of a report made to the state superintendent of insurance in 1903 regarding the condition of the company.

According to the perjury indictment the report to the state superintendent of insurance made it appear that the company had a surplus of about $200,000 when there was really a deficit of $80,000.

Andrew J. Fields has moved to Ocean Grove, N. J. This was learned yesterday afternoon after the issuance of a subpoena for him by District Attorney Jerome. The former Mutual supply agent and legislative representative removed from Dobbs Ferry to New Jersey on Saturday and he is now out of the jurisdiction of the New York authorities. It was said for Mr. Felds yesterday that when he was ready he would call on the district attorney.

The subpoenas issued, it was said, included many prominent legislators.

Subpoena servers were gathered at the district attorney's office early in the day and were expected to serve the papers within twenty-four hours. This action by Jerome means that he will first direct the attention of the grand jury to the transactions in the stationery department of the Mutual Life.

While District Attorney Jerome would not discuss the matter, it is understood that his investigations of that department of the Mutual Life have revealed a fertile field for criminal action.

CONGRESS.

Tariff Debate Is Continued in House by Mr. Williams.

Washington, April 28.—The tariff debate which was precipitated upon the house Thursday through the speeches of Mr. Boutell (Ill.) and Mr. Hepburn (Iowa) was further continued yesterday by Mr. Williams (Miss.), the minority leader. For two hours Mr. Williams stood the fire of the Republicans, presenting the Democratic doctrine of a tariff for revenue only.

The house passed an emergency appropriation bill carrying $170,000 for the benefit of the sufferers at San Francisco and the employment of laborers at Mare Island navy yard.

Three hundred and fifteen pension bills were passed. An agreement was reached to conclude general debate on the agricultural appropriation bill to-day at 3:30 o'clock.

In concluding yesterday his two-days' speech on the railroad rate bill Mr. Spooner took cognizance of the charge of misquotation against himself which he said had been made in connection with Mr. Bailey's speech though not in the speech and quoted at length from his previous remarks to show that the criticism had been without foundation.

All the private pension bills on the calendar were passed.

WILL NOT CONSOLIDATE.

Methodist Publishing Houses Continue at Cincinnati and New York.

Buffalo, N. Y., April 29.—The committee which had been considering the advisability of consolidating the publishing houses of the Methodist Episcopal church adjourned yesterday afternoon after unanimously voting to continue the publishing work at Cincinnati and New York.

POPE OPPOSES WOMEN VOTING.

Vienna Woman Relates Conversation With Pontiff on the Subject.

Vienna, April 29.—A Viennese lady, who has returned from an audience with the pope, relates that he thoroughly approves of women's activity as doctors and lawyers, but that he draws the line at politics, saying women should neither vote nor sit in parliament.

Mystery in Death.

Danville, Ill., April 29. — The dead body of Mrs. Moore, widow of a prominent meat packer, was found in a pool of blood on her bedroom floor yesterday afternoon. A gash in her neck and other circumstances caused the authorities to suspect that she had been murdered. Surgeons who performed an autopsy, however, state that she died from hemorrhage of the brain and will so report at the inquest.

Injured While Running to Fire.

Shakopee, Minn., April 29. — While aiding the firemen in pulling the hose cart to a fire last evening Johnny Pankner, a young man of this city, stumbled and fell, and the wheel of the heavy cart passed over his body, injuring him very seriously. A hasty examination showed that there were no bones broken, although he may be injured internally.

Safeblowers Were Laborious.

Columbus, Ohio, April 29.—Robbers entered the general store of Becker Brothers last night, removed the safe, weighing 1,000 pounds, rolled it along a road three blocks away, pried it open and took $500 and a certified check for $2,000.

Names Peterson for Job.

Washington, April 29. — The president yesterday sent to the senate the nomination of John Peterson to be collector of customs for the district of Minnesota.

PROPOSALS OF MINERS REFUSED

ANTHRACITE OPERATORS DECLINE TO MODIFY THEIR POSITION.

PRACTICALLY AN ULTIMATUM

PUTS RESPONSIBILITY FOR THE STRIKE UP TO THE MINE WORKERS.

New York, April 29. — The anthracite mine operators, through their subcommittee of seven which met here yesterday, drew up a reply to the latest proposition of the mine workers. The owners refuse to modify their position, and call upon the miners to renew for a period of three years, the award of the anthracite strike commission, or else to accept the operators' proposition that the strike commission arbitrate the question as to what changes, if any, shall be made in the scale of wages fixed by the commission in its original award. The miners have already declined this offer.

Reply of Operators.

The operators, in their reply, say in part:

"We observe that you reject our proposition of arbitration by the strike commission. You speak of it as a suggestion that 'we first arbitrate to ascertain whether there is anything to arbitrate, and then restrict within narrow limits the scope of the investigation.' This statement of the proposition is erroneous. Our offer was 'to submit to the strike commission the question whether any changes in conditions have occurred since the award of the commission requiring that the award should be so modified as to wages and adjustment of complaints, and, if so, how it should be changed.'"

Would Increase Price of Coal.

The operators, after giving figures in detail, say that to accept the sliding scale of wages proposed by the miners would men an increase in the price of coal to the public of 36 cents a ton. The present profit to the operators, they say, is but 20 cents a ton. The letter continues:

"But if we disregard the sliding scale and assume that you simply mean to add 10 cents per ton as the final increase in cost, this would result in increasing the wages of our employes $6,100,000 per annum; that is, 10 cents per ton on 61,000,000 of output. Where is the $6,100,000 to come from?

Profit Is Small.

"We have shown you that in the largest companies the profit, without interest and royalty, has yielded less than 3 per cent on the capital invested. The operators, therefore, cannot afford to pay this large annual increase 'without additional burdens upon the coal consuming public.'

"The advances made by the strike commission have practically absorbed the increase in price. Therefore, there has been no increase in the profits of the business upon which could be based any claim for increased wages.

Puts Responsibility on Miners.

"In view of all the circumstances we are satisfied that the true course was indicated in our original proposition. This was that existing conditions should be continued for a period of three years.

"We trust that on Thursday next the deliberate judgment of the anthracite workers will result in an acceptance of that proposition, but if not that they will join with us in the arbitration we have offered.

"Failing to meet us on either proposition, the responsibility of a strike must rest upon you."

TO TAKE UP BUILDINGS.

Bill Calls for More Than Chairman Proposed It Should.

Washington, April 29. — The public building bill will be brought into the house during the next week, or as soon as the speaker assigns a day for consideration of the measure. The bill will carry $21,500,000, and will provide buildings for every state in the Union. The bill has grown into larger proportions than was at first contemplated by Chairman Bartholdt. Being a new chairman, he started out with many reform ideas, one of them being to keep the bill down to $12,000,000 or $14,000,000. His associates ran away with him, however, and before he knew it, the bill called for nearly $25,000,000. Three and a half millions have been lopped off of this total. However, the senate has passed public building bills aggregating more than $5,000,000, and these might be taken care of. The bill as finally passed will doubtless take out of the treasury not less than $25,000,000.

PROTEST TO GREAT BRITAIN.

United States Officials Take Up Fisheries Troubles.

Washington, April 29. — State department officials are preparing a protest which will be submitted to Great Britain against the seizure of two American fishing ships off the coast of Newfoundland. It will be based on the fundamental contention that the local Canadian governments have no right to pass laws which conflict with provisions of treaties between the United States and Great Britain.

PLOT UNEARTHED BY PARIS POLICE

ROYALISTS, BONAPARTISTS AND ANARCHISTS BACK STRIKE MOVEMENT.

LEADERS SUBMIT TO SEARCH

DOCUMENTS FOUND THAT PROVE INTRIGUE WITH LABOR LEADERS.

Paris, April 29.—The labor agitation took a dramatic turn yesterday when the police, in order to unearth an alleged plot against the public security, searched offices of the Labor Federation and homes of the labor leaders, prominent royalists, Bonapartists and anarchists. The suspects among the royalists and Bonapartists include Count Durand de Beauregard, Count de la Regle, Gen. Baron de Taradel, M. Bacconnier, president of the royalist advance guard; M. Thouvenel, an intimate friend of Prince Louis Napoleon, and Maj. Fouillent, formerly commander of the imperial guard.

Leaders Are Searched.

The laborites who were subjected to search include the conspicuous heads of the movement planned for May 1.

The ostensible purpose was to discover is encouragement had been given to rioting in the mining district in the north. But the authorities also expected to uncover the entire plan of the present labor agitation, including any menacing features of the May 1 demonstration. The results in many cases were negative. There is, however, official authority that documents were found which prove that royalists and Bonapartists intrigued with the labor leaders and liberally financed the revolutionary strike movements.

Books Are Refused.

The Labor Federation has refused to hand over its books to the police.

The searches are denounced as a device to discredit the labor movement. The opposition press also attacks the searches as an electioneering trick.

The public has become more tranquil regarding May 1, owing to the completeness of the military and police precautions. The city is rapidly filling with troops, embracing thirty-nine battalions and forty-eight squadrons.

Public Reassured.

Complete quiet in the strike centers ends to reassure the public further.

The Temps editorially points out the bsurdity of people hastily leaving the ity or laying in stocks of provisions, nd says the government has taken very necessary precaution. "Revo-tionary movements," the article says, never succeed when heralded. Apparently the government has taken a lesson from the United States, where pillagers, trying to profit by the catastrophe at San Francisco and practice their profession, have been mercilessly shot."

FRANKLIN STATUE UNVEILED.

Made Occasion for Notable Franco-American Demonstration.

Paris, April 29.—The Franklin celebration at the Trocadero yesterday afternoon was the occasion for a notable Franco-American demonstration. The distinguished officials present included Former Presidents Loubet and Casimir-Perier. A battery of artillery fired a salute of twenty-one guns as the statue was unveiled. Minister of Instruction Barthou pronounced an eulogy of Franklin, during which he recalled his intimacy with Voltaire and other notable personages, and said:

"France not only renders homage to Franklin, but gives this official testimony of its unwavering friendship and fidelity to the great American republic."

Ambassador McCormick gave an elaborate dinner last night at the American embassy to the French and American officials participating in the celebration.

TAKE SLAP AT WITTE AND CZAR.

Radicals Will Express Distrust of the Government.

St. Petersburg, April 29. — Returns from elections are slow in coming in, but the proportion of Constitutional Democrats chosen continues overwhelming. The Radical members-elect are now waiting for the convocation of the national parliament to express distrust of the government. A resolution worded in the sharpest terms is being circulated and largely signed by Constitutional Democratic members-elect, expressing their lack of confidence in Count Witte and the emperor. It is especially condemnatory of the banishment of Prof. Grodeskul, one of the Kharakoff electors. On account of the expulsion the elections did not occur at Kharakoff, the electors refusing to vote until the sentence is revoked.

SUPPOSED SUICIDE IS BACK.

Treasurer of Helena Lodge Will Adjust His Accounts.

Helena, Mont., April 29.—C. K. Sherwood, employed in a local laundry, who disappeared and was supposed to have killed himself, turned up yesterday. Financial troubles are said to have led to his disappearance. Sherwood is treasurer of a local lodge. Explanations and satisfactory arrangements with the interested parties are being made by Sherwood.

DOWIE WILL NOT START ROW

WILL PREACH IN TABERNACLE, BUT WILL NOT MAKE DISTURBANCE.

Chicago, April 29.—In a voice, the firmness of which belied the reports that he is on the verge of death, John Alexander Dowie, in an interview last night lasting over an hour, went into a complete history of the troubles that have beset Zion City. Although his voice was clear and firm, he was bothered with an incessant cough, and his features bore evidence of the ravages of disease.

"Rumors have been circulated that I am suffering from heart disease," he said. "I may be, but I am not conscious of it. I am weary and have suffered a great disappointment, and perhaps when I was recovering from the attack of paralysis last September I did not take good care of myself. I have worked a great deal and I am a pretty tired man.

"I am going to Zion City to-morrow afternoon, but I am not going to create a disturbance. I am going to talk to the people quietly. On Sunday I shall hold a service in Shiloh tabernacle and again on Wednesday night.

LID GOES WITH LICENSE.

Kasota Fee Is $1,200 and Mayor Will Enforce Laws.

St. Peter, Minn., April 29.—Rigid restrictions are to be thrown about the retail liquor traffic in the village of Kasota. Two years ago the town voted out its saloons, but at the last election, held April 3, license carried by the narrow margin of one vote. At the same election the ticket supported by the temperance faction won out, and when the council came to pass upon the liquor question it fixed the license fee at $1,200 and voted to permit only one saloon to open for business in Kasota. T. S. Wilcox, president of the village, is a stanch advocate of law and order, and he will require the town's single saloon to observe strictly the Sunday and 11 o'clock closing laws.

DOGS CAUSE ACCIDENT.

Frighten Horse and Driver Is Thrown and Injured.

Fargo, N. D., April 29.—While A. F. Kuhnert was driving along the street several dogs rushed out and began barking at his horse. Kuhnert leaned over in his buggy in order to secure a missile to throw at the animals. The swaying rig caused him to lose his balance and he fell into the street. He struck on his face, but remained conscious and clung to the lines. He was dragged some distance before he could bring the frightened horse to a standstill, and received serious injuries. His face and head were severely bruised and lacerated and his arms and body also were badly bruised and cut.

WOMAN'S DEATH A MYSTERY.

Bemidji Authorities Probe Fate of Half-Breed.

Bemidji, Minn., April 29. — Mystery surrounds the death of Emma Davids, a half-breed who came to this city a month ago and died yesterday morning in a room over a local saloon. The suicide theory is advanced by the police, but there are many suspicious of foul play. The police are investigating while awaiting developments. William O'Brien, a bartender in the saloon over which the woman died, and two lumberjacks, William Mahan and Charles Newman, are being held on warrants charging disorderly conduct and assault and battery.

TOWN DROPS 100 FEET.

Cave-In of Abandoned Mine Destroys Many Buildings.

Quinnisec, Mich., April 29. — An earthquake occurred here yesterday. Over an acre of ground suddenly went down with a great roar, carrying a number of buildings with it. It was thought for a time that the entire town would go. The ground fell a hundred feet, and it was found to be a cave-in over the workings of an abandoned mine. Considerable damage was done, the city water works system being badly crippled. There is fear that the other parts of the town may fall, as mine workings extend under a good part of it.

BODY FLOATING IN HARBOR.

Skull So Crushed That Identification of Remains Is Impossible.

Superior, Wis., April 29.—A floating body of a man was picked up in the Superior bay yesterday morning. The body was entirely without clothing and the skull was crushed so badly that identification is impossible. It is thought the remains are those of one of the Mataafa sailors, nine of whom were drowned at the entrance to the bay last winter.

MUST GO BACK TO HIS CELL.

Montana Man Is Again Convicted of Killing.

Helena, Mont., April 29.—The second trial of Harry Koch at Lewiston for killing Joseph Vander at Stanford, resulted in a verdict of involuntary manslaughter. The punishment is from one to ten years. Koch will be sentenced Monday. He was once convicted of manslaughter and sentenced to ten years, and had served two years when the supreme court granted a new trial.

Mr. Henderson, prominent in farming, proposes that the system of drainage for Norman county be revolutionized. Instead of putting in a ditch here at one time and another at another time, he says each township should organize as a drainage district, bond itself for about $50,000 and grade every quarter section. His proposition seems feasible in view of the wet seasons.

Arthur Wright, a turnkey at the county jail at Bemidji, heard a disturbance in one of the cells at 4:40 in the morning, and, on investigating, found that Andrew Sledge, a prisoner, was attempting to commit suicide by butting out his brains. Sledge had climbed to the top of his cell and was diving headforemost to the floor. The turnkey attempted to restrain the man, but the latter fought desperately and Wright was compelled to go for assistance. During his absence Sledge butted his head against the sides of the cell several times, inflicting five wounds. Finally, with the aid of another turnkey, the prisoner was overpowered and his hands and feet shackled. A physician was called and pronounced the man seriously hurt, but thought he would recover.

FILIPINO RAILROAD MEN.

Natives in Manila Take Readily to the Work of Operating Electric Lines.

The experiment made in depending solely on native Filipinos to man the cars of the Manila Electric railway has proved eminently successful. Although this kind of help was used exclusively in building the lines, which were opened to traffic last April, it was feared by some that a certain well-known tendency toward unreliability in the native character would manifest itself in the new work, more exacting than any natives had heretofore been called upon to perform in numbers since the American occupation.

"It is generally known," said P. E. Fansler, assistant to the president of the New York company, by which the system was built and operated, "that the natives are wonderfully quick to learn up to a certain point, where a childish unreliability has blocked further progress in the attainment of a thoroughly civilized status. That it is rather a matter of proper and well directed tuition seems to be the lesson in the present case. As was generally anticipated, the operating manager in Manila, Mr. Belden, met with instantaneous success in instructing the native mind in the technic of street car operation, but contrary to general anticipation the usual bete noir—instability—seems to have been quite thoroughly overcome.

"It is felt now that the native has lived up to the requirements of the job fully as well as the white man could have done under any conditions and probably better, taking the climate into consideration," said he. "It must be remembered that to operate a modern electric car in the crowded streets of an oriental city, where the traffic and pedestrians are absolutely at variance and unaccustomed to so foreign an element, calls for the full measure of steadiness and resourcefulness to avoid accident. It is a fact that under these trying conditions the Manila Electric railway is being operated with what may justifiably be considered a minimum of accident and that through the demonstration by the Filipino motorman of his full possession of those very qualities that the more cursory examiners have declared to be wanting. Fully to appreciate the peculiar demand for steadiness one must have had experience in trying to progress through the streets of a far eastern metropolis. Pedestrians use the roadway very often in common with vehicles and may generally be persuaded to make way only when their lives are actually in danger. A narrow escape from death is uniformly treated as a good joke, not only by the observers, but by the principal as well. Under the circumstances the almost complete freedom from serious accident in the operation of the line is decidedly noteworthy. The conductors, too, uniformly show the ability to live up to the requirements of their work. They perform their duties expeditiously and with tact and are, moreover, quite honest.

"These facts are significant of the possibilities in the native Filipino character when given just opportunity to display itself and will prove especially interesting to Americans watching the industrial development of the islands."

MORO BANDS' FANATICISM.

No Course But to Hunt Down and Kill Them, Says Gov. Scott, of Sulu.

Maj. H. L. Scott, governor of the Sulu archipelago, about to return to his post, made a parting call on the president. As he left the White House, says a Washington report, he said that he thought Gen. Wood's attack on the Moros at Mount Dajo would improve conditions in Sulu.

"I hope," he said, "that our coldiers will not again be campelled to give battle to the Moro bands. The chief of the band that was exterminated the other day is perfectly friendly to this country. He tried hard to keep the band from continuing their warfare against our government in the islands, but was unable to do so. They were determined on disobeying all law, on killing and acting to suit themselves, and they did not propose to surrender.

"They proposed death to surrender. See this hand?" and Maj. Scott held out his right hand, which showed two fingers missing. "Well, I tried 50 times to get the leader of the band that gave me these wounds to surrender. While I lay in the hospital three months I sent him word often, asking him to surrender and assuring him fair treatment. His name was Panglim Hassam. He disregarded every message we sent and returned defiant and insulting messages. Nothing remained but to hunt him and his band down and engage them in battle. He was finally killed. That is the sort of character we must deal with among these fanatical people. Not a soldier of this country wants to shed blood, and every soldier regrets the necessity for hostile action."

Negro Advancement in Hayti.

Yet in Hayti the negro has worn the epaulets for one century and one year, and there he proves that the negro as a race, when left alone, is incapable of self-advancement. No one can expect him to develop resources. Time is an unmarketable article. A day is not worth a banana. In his precious logwood forests, rather than cut only the timber that is ready, he strips it all, and burns over the hills afterward. To restore such useless waste of vast treasure nature must have 30 or 48 years. A provident man grows heartsick at the sight. Again, wherever a new industry rears its head, at once the negro's bludgeon falls.—World's Work.

CONDITIONS IN PANAMA.

Only Objection of Returned Visitor Was in the Matter of Rations.

Edward T. Shea, the former sheriff of Prince George county, Maryland, arrived here yesterday from Panama on his way home to pass his vacation. He has been employed as a foreman on the Panama railroad at Paraiso, and will return there early in May, says the Washington Star. Mr. Shea went to Panama about nine months ago, and during the time he was there he was sick only two days.

"During the nine months I was there," he said to a Star reporter, "I did not have to go to the hospital. The climate is different from what it is here, but it is a matter of only a short time before one can become acclimated and get to enjoy it. The only fault I have to find with conditions there is the matter of feeding the men. Unless something is done to change the quality of the food there will be a scarcity of labor there in a short time."

He explained that a man who has been there six months is entitled to a leave of absence of six weeks. Many of them who come away on their leave of absence do not return. Unless a change is made in the matter of feeding or an increase is given in the matter of pay, Mr. Shea repeated, the government will experience trouble in getting the necessary help from the United States.

Mr. Shea said that he was one of a number of passengers who came from Havana aboard the steamer Panama, formerly the City of Havana, and the steamer reached New York Sunday. Many of the men, he said, had on thin clothing, one of them wearing a duck suit and an overcoat. He was from Boston, however, and did not mind it much. Those who had only thin summer clothing had expected to reach New York Saturday or Monday and intended to purchase new clothes as soon as they arrived, but they reached there Sunday and some of them felt the effects of the weather to an uncomfortable extent before they were able to make purchases. The Boston man, wearing his white duck suit and overcoat, attracted attention as he walked about the streets.

Workmen coming away on leave of absence pay only $20 each way for their transportation. The trip on the Panama was a pleasant one and was greatly enjoyed by those who were homeward bound to visit friends.

HOW MOROS ARE CIVILIZED.

Learn, Little at a Time, the Shrewd Business Methods of the Western World.

The Moros, like all other natives of the Philippines, are possessed of a consuming desire to carry a "pass," some sort of an official certificate as to character, home, business, etc., of the bearer, and they are willing to pay any amount therefor, and never think of it as taxation, writes R. L. Bullard, in Atlantic. On this weak point the Moros showed the first signs of yielding. Then the plan of indirect taxation caught, pleased, and overcame them, as it catches wiser men than they. Imported cotton cloth paying duty at the custom house had long been reaching the Moros through a few coast traders, and was now in large use among the Moros. Touching the jacket of the nearest datto: "You are a lot of foolish and ignorant children," I said. "You are haggling about paying taxes when you have already been doing it for years, and have been giving the Americans money to pay me to pay the interpreter and all my soldiers." This at once struck their attention. The explanation followed. They understood it remarkably quickly. They saw the humor and the truth of the thing, and, wondering at the finesse that had been able to make them contribute to their own subjugation, yielded in a sort of nonplussed way, feeling, no doubt, that it was useless to hope to escape a people who could devise such a smart system of getting money from other people without the latter's even knowing it. To my help also at this juncture came my old friend, the priest Noskalim, the metropolitan, as it were, of Lanao, with, if not a revelation, something better—wisdom—to his people: "It is the will of Allah. 'ta-Allah, The Merciful, who has many names."

In these ways government and civilization have gained upon them.

Volcanos of Philippines.

An interesting feature of the Philippines, which has as yet been neglected, is their score or more of volcanoes. This addition makes the list of volcanoes in the United States a very important one. The volcanoes of America, or the United States, are of especial inetrest, and they are found in the western country, as a rule west of the Rocky mountains. One of the most beautiful of these is Mount Shasta, 14,440 feet high, which rears its massive twin cones in northern California. Mount Helena in Oregon, 12,600 feet in height, is a majestic volcanic peak, and Mount Hood, 11,225 feet, has a world-wide fame for its beauties, little thought being given to its activities in the early geological history of the continent. Other famous peaks are Mount Jefferson, Mount Adams, Mount Rainier, Mount Baker and Mount Lassen.

LOST HER DAUGHTER

EXPERIENCE IN CRUSH AT RAILROAD STATION.

Slight Mistake That Caused Mother Some Few Minutes of Suffering Long to Be Remembered—Pathos in Old Man's Interest.

Two women were having luncheon at the Holland yesterday. One of them told this story:

"At the time of the Pan-American I was taking my daughter to a boarding school. We were to get a Boston car at Buffalo, and when we arrived there the station was the scene of the greatest confusion imaginable.

"It was the day President McKinley's body was being taken to Washington, and naturally the ordinary exposition crowd was tremendously increased. My daughter was only fifteen and quite inexperienced, never having traveled an hour's distance alone.

"We had about twenty minutes in which to get our train. I knew it came in two sections, and I looked helplessly around to find some one to tell me which one my seats were in. Finally I discovered the ticket offices were up stairs. There were several temporary stairways leading to the offices, and near the foot of one of them was an amiable looking man in uniform.

"We had been so pushed and shoved by the hurrying crowd and there were so many people mounting these stairs that I despaired of taking all our bags and bundles with me, so I asked this man if my small girl might be allowed to stand where we were until I returned. She had the usual accompaniment of a departure for boarding school—an armful of flowers, candy and books, in addition to our bags and umbrellas. 'Now, Margaret,' I said, 'if you move from this place it will be perfectly impossible for me to find you again. Don't you stir till I come, even if some one says I've sent for you. I'll be back just as soon as I find out about our train.'

"After some delay and trouble I discovered that we belonged to the second section, due to leave in fifteen minutes. I hurried to the foot of the stairs. Margaret had disappeared! There was absolutely no trace of our baggage—not an umbrella—not even a flower! I never was so frightened in all my life.

"I spoke to a man I could have sworn was the one whose permission I had asked to have Margaret wait at the stairs. He declared he had been standing there half an hour and hadn't noticed any little girl. I was in despair. No one had any assistance to offer. To add to my distress I was conscious of the attentive gaze of an old man, who had evidently heard my first inquiries. The minute I observed his interest I felt certain he knew something about her; of course he said he didn't. But the way he followed me around after that was positively terrifying.

"You'll never guess what I did. I don't know how it occurred to me, but just then I heard the man with the megaphone calling trains. I ran up stairs again, followed, if you please, by that old man (by this time I was morally convinced there was something significant in his interest) and implored the assistance of the megaphone. I can't tell you how people stopped and stared when that big thing roared forth: 'Is Margaret Gilchrist in the station?' Three times the man called and absolutely no response from any quarter. Can you blame me for feeling nearly wild?

"Suddenly somebody touched my arm. 'There is a young girl standing on the opposite side of the station. I told her I thought her mother was looking for her, but she refused to move.' Well! It was Margaret of course. In my excitement and perplexity I had come down the wrong stairs.

"We had just time to get the train. As the last bag was handed on, some one called me, I turned—there was that old man again! I shall never forgive myself for misjudging him, or forget the earnest way he said: 'Have you found your daughter?'

"'Yes,' I told him.

"'Thank God!' he exclaimed, 'I lost my girl years ago in Berlin, and have never seen her since.'"—New York Times.

Old Dreams Come True.

The green on the meadow was faint and new,
And the air was soft, and the skies were blue;
And a brown bird sang in an apple tree,
And her notes held joy—and a prophecy,
Old, old dreams come true.

A zephyr stole out of the south to woo
A wee, shrinking flower, of azure hue;
And the brown bird croon'd in her tiny nest.
As she snuggled wee birdies to her breast—
Old, old dreams come true.

The summer had fled, and the fields were bare;
And each shrub and tree wore a listless air;
And the brown bird gazed at an empty nest,
While the wind swept boldly out of the west;
And the wee, shy flower of azure hue
Lay forgotten, and dead—when dreams came true.
When old dreams came true.

—Mary M. Redmond, in Donahoe's.

She Knew Her Business.

He had been sweet on her for some time and one evening he dropped in on his way home from the office.

"I hope you will excuse me for calling in my business suit," he said, "but——"

"Oh, that's all right," interrupted the fair maid, "that is, if you mean business."

And the next day a downtown jeweler separated him from a month's salary in exchange for the ring.

FOREIGN MISSIONARIES

A Brahmin missionary to America filling an Episcopal pulpit by invitation at Kansas City recently, among other things said;

"We're overstocked with Christian missionaries. Ninety per cent of those we have are senseless. Furthermore, we don't want your religion and your holy book. We have more religion of our own than we know what to do with, a surplus that we'd like to export. So I pray you Americans, keep your so-called missionaries at home. If you want to Christianize us, send us some men that are qualified to teach, philosophers that know their own scripture. Until then the Vedas, our four books of philosophy, are good enough for us.

"Show me a country where missionaries have been that is prosperous. It does not exist. There were no famines, no plague in India before England's invasion. I am here in the interests of India for India, not India for England."

This is expert testimony from a country that has been the subject of much missionary invasion and aligns itself with the opinion of many laymen who have ever entertained a doubt either as to the efficacy or wisdom of foreign missionary work when there is such a vast field which remains uncultivated within our own country.

Speaker Cannon says the presidential bee is not buzzing around his head but if, as representative and speaker he is able to contribute in the performance of his duties to the promotion of policies and the enactment of legislation which will bring the greatest good to the greatest number, the cup of his ambition will be full. That sounds good.

Robert A. Smith was re-elected mayor of St. Paul Tuesday by about 2500 majority. The democrats also elected the treasurer and comptroller. The republicans may possibly hope to elect a mayor in that city when Bob Smith positively refuses to run again.

Get SCOTT'S Emulsion

When you go to a drug store and ask for Scott's Emulsion you know what you want; the man knows you ought to have it. Don't be surprised, though, if you are offered something else. Wines, cordials, extracts, etc., of cod liver oil are plentiful but don't imagine you are getting cod liver oil when you take them. Every year for thirty years we've been increasing the sales of Scott's Emulsion. Why? Because it has always been better than any substitute for it.

SORES AND ULCERS
TROUBLESOME-OFFENSIVE-DANGEROUS

Nothing is more discouraging than to have an unhealthy sore or ulcer resist one treatment after another, sometimes scabbing over and apparently getting well, then returning with renewed energy and becoming worse than before. Sores and ulcers are not due to outside causes; if they were, salves, plasters, lotions, etc., would cure them. They are kept up by a diseased and polluted condition of the blood brought on by the absorption of refuse and waste matters of the body into this vital fluid. These accumulations find their way into the blood, usually because of an inactive and sluggish condition of the system. Nature intends that they shall be carried off through the usual channels of waste, but the different members failing to perform their duties properly leave the matter to sour and ferment. The blood then, in its effort to keep the system healthy, absorbs these poisons and at the first bruise, cut or wound the sore is formed, and the constant drainage of foul matter through it keeps the place open and irritated so it cannot heal. Another cause for old sores and ulcers is the polluting or weakening of the blood from the remains of some constitutional trouble or the effects of a long spell of sickness. S. S. S. begins at the fountain-head and drives out all poisonous matter and germs, and makes a lasting cure. As soon as the system gets under the influence of S. S. S. the inflammation gradually leaves, the flesh takes on a healthy color, and soon the place is permanently healed. Book on sores and ulcers and any medical advice without charge.

The county auditors of Red Lake and Polk counties will meet in the near future for the purpose of deciding on the hearing of ditch No. 4. In this case according to the law which prescribed that the hearing be held in the county in which the ditch begans, the hearing will be held in the court house in Crookston. The auditors will co-operate on the advertising for the bids for the construction and other essentials.

Thomas Shevlin, the millonaire lumberman of Minneapolis, owner of the Crookston, Bemidji and St. Hilaire lumber mills and several others about the state, with J. M. Richards, Harvey Clark and several others of the Crookston Lumber company, passed through the city Monday morning in the Great Northern car Manitoba. They were enroute to St. Hilaire. Mr. Shevlin got out long enough to say that the supply of lumber was gradually decreasing while the demand is very brisk, and the advance that has been noted or will be announced from time to time in the future will simply be the relative positions of supply and demand. The advance thus far has not been at all radical in view of the supply and the small stocks carried over from last year.

CHAPTER XIV.—(Continued.)

Jacnta's beating, bounding heart was crowded with a flood of emotions. Her father would be saved. She also and her mother would be taken out of the power of the conquerors. She would escape from the hateful alliance with Francisco. She would be with him—the brave American—her hero.

A low whistle broke in upon her meditations. Salvarez and Jacinta, quickly snatching a moment when the sentinel could not see, sprang to the window.

A pistol and a knife were thrust through the bars.

"My pistol," said Medworth. "Philip's knife. The coast is clear. But don't shoot if you can possibly help it. Use the knife if you must; it is silent."

Salvarez grasped the instrument of his salvation and breathed a blessing upon Medworth.

Jacinta caught his receding hand in hers and kissed it.

"Hurry!" said Medworth. "Hide the weapons. Shall I attract the guard?"

"Yes," whispered Salvarez, drawing back from the window.

Immediately there arose outside the window a low, peculiar cry, startling and weird, sounding like neither the cry of man nor beast. The sentinel heard it.

He saw the three prisoners standing in apparent fright, gazing toward the window.

"What is it?" asked the guard.

Jacinta, whose excitement might easily be taken for fear, pointed with trembling finger toward the window.

"Something—there!" she said.

Again the wail, beginning in almost nothing, rising, swelling, until it seemed like the dying cry of a demon.

With a murmur of surprise and alarm, the guard sprang to the window with his gun, ready to fire.

Like a flash, Salvarez was upon him. The desperate general hesitated not a moment. The knife flashed in his hand, gleamed as he poised it a second above the doomed man, and then descended. The sentinel groaned, staggered, gave a despairing look at his executioner, and fell at Jacinta's feet a corpse.

"Come!" said Salvarez. They followed him from the room, and in the twinkling of an eye they had disappeared through the sliding panel.

CHAPTER XV.

Namampa, the Hero Doctor.

While Medworth and Tempest were exerting themselves to save General Salvarez and his family, and were congratulating themselves upon the fact that Don Juan's daughter, if not free from the clutches of the royalists, was at least temporarily safe, owing to a slight illness, the truth was that Lola was in so feeble and dangerous a condition that Don Juan, Philip and Gomez were all very much alarmed about her.

While the exciting scenes attendant upon the escape of Salvarez were being enacted, it might well be wondered that neither Philip nor Gomez should have been in the council room, or anywhere near to prevent the successful issue of Medworth's plot.

Don Juan, who, notwithstanding his vaulting ambition, sternness and pride, really loved his daughter, was torn with anguish and bitterly condemned himself for bringing her against her will to a place that now threatened to be the cause of her death.

Nearly the same anxiety was shown by Philip, and he did not conceal it. Gomez, felt, in his own way, a great anxiety; but he skillfully concealed the true state of his feelings and appeared rather the sympathetic friend than the baffled lover.

After a conference between the three Mattazudo was dispatched for Namampa, the herb doctor who lived three miles distant. Mattazudo's eyes gleamed with triumph as he bore away toward Namampa's hut.

Gomez, perhaps, discovered the mischief in Mattazudo's looks, for he started to warn the half-breed against any more treachery. But Philip stopped him.

"Don't go, Gomez," he said. "I wish to speak to you in the council room." Then turning to Don Juan, he said: "My dear Garza, remain here with your daughter, and let me know when this herb doctor comes."

Philip and Gomez left together, and went at once to the council room.

"How is this?" said Gomez, pausing at the door. "The room where Salvarez is confined left without a guard? I saw one there when I left an hour ago."

"Strange carelessness," muttered Philip. "The most dangerous enemy we have left unguarded.

As if actuated by a common impulse they ran to the door of the room Salvarez had occupied. All was silent. They entered, and looked hastily around the large apartment.

There, under the window, lay the guard, his face upturned and distorted with the agony of his sudden death.

"By heaven!" exclaimed Philip, "Salvarez has escaped. What was this man doing here? Did Salvarez go out by the window?"

Gomez shook his head in a gloomy way.

"No. He could not have gone through the window. The guard was enticed in here to be killed. But how did Salvarez obtain a weapon, and how did he know we were out of the way? A traitor's hand has aided him. I suspected one before. My suspicion has been verified."

"You suspected one of our people?"

"Yes; I suspected Francisco. Did it not seem strange to you that Francisco should ask to have the rebel's execution delayed till midnight."

"Now that you speak of it, it certainly was strange; but I was so anxious about Garza's daughter I gave the other matter but little thought. Francisco said that Salvarez, his wife, his daughter, all begged for twelve hours more in which to say farewell—to pray together."

Gomez pointed grimly to the dead sentinel.

"Well, they have prayed to some advantage, it seems, and have said farewell—to us, not to one another."

"But the knife!" exclaimed Philip. "Where did Salvarez obtain the knife?"

"Where, indeed, unless from Francisco?"

CHAPTER XVI.

In the meantime Geo. Salvarez, his wife, daughter and their brave rescuers have gained a place of safety in the secret passage.

"You speak of getting to the Orinoco," said the wife of Salvarez. "It is impossible, as you know. How can you travel without being captured again?"

'I had already thought of that," said the General. "The thing is difficult, I will admit. But the difficulty of traveling is not the heaviest on my mind. If I go, I must go alone. I must leave you and Jacinta here. My anxiety is for you. What will become of you while I am away?"

"You need not be alarmed for them, General Salvarez," said Arthur. "It is certain that, aside from ourselves, no person about the castle suspects the existence of this place. While they remain in ignorance we are safe enough, and I assure you we shall make no effort to inform them of the facts. And you may rely on us. We are only two, of course, but as far as our protection can go, your wife and daughter shall have it."

"Right!" said Tempest. "Two Americans are as good as a dozen of that rabble upstairs."

Salvarez smiled.

"You seem to have been better than the entire force to-night," he said. "I agree with you that this place is safe enough; but how will you live? It lacks the necessary comforts. Then the matter of food is most important."

Tempest laughed.

"We must do without the comforts, General," he said. "But as for, food, with a river full of fish running past our hidden door, and fruit to be had for the picking, not to mention a stray calf or two from your own herds, I don't think we'll starve. Don't fear for us. If we continue to have the same number of hours at night that the country has had since the creation, and the soldiers of the new king continue to drink plenty of intoxicating beverages, we can walk all around and never be caught.'

"You give me renewed courage," said Salvarez. "If two young men who are strangers here can accomplish these things, a General of the Republic should not hesitate. Since I am assured of the safety of my dear ones, there remains nothing now for me to do but go. If I could but get word to Ramana."

"Who? Ramana, the Garib?" asked Medworth.

"Yes," replied Salvarez. "Ramana is old, but he is a true friend."

"What message would you send him?" asked Arthur. "I know his hut. I can go there now."

"You might be captured."

"Did not Tempest just now tell you that we could go anywhere?"

"Go, then," said Salvarez. "See Ramana, and say to him that Salvarez, his friend, is in trouble. Tell him that I have escaped from the castle, and must cross the Orinoco at once, without being seen at Bolivar or any other place on this side. Tell him I must start before it is light. Tell him to bring his large canoe, and his son, Ravona, to help him paddle. Tell him to meet me twenty feet below the secret passage."

Medworth then hurried away, cautiously worked his way out of the secret passage and started off toward Ramana's hut. He found the old Indian asleep in a rude hammock of grass, and woke him up to give him the message of Salvarez.

He was much surprised at the agility displayed by the old Indian. He called Ravona, who slept in another hammock, and, without wasting time in saying farewell to Ramana's aged wife, they hurried, accompanied by Medworth, to the river bank, where a long, light canoe was moored.

"Come," said Ramana.

Medworth took his seat, and the two Caribs, with powerful arms, sent the canoe speeding down the Coroni. In a short time they had reached the trysting-place, and the prow of the canoe was shot into the overhanging grass on the bank.

"Where is he?" asked Ramana.

"He will come," said Medworth. "Wait here."

They had not long to wait. Salvarez had timed them pretty accurately, and a few minutes after they arrived he appeared, creeping along slowly in the darkness.

"Ah! you are here," he said.

He pressed Medworth's hand, and stepping into the canoe, said:

"Away, Ramana!" Then to Arthur: "My brave friend, to you and your companion I leave my dear ones."

"You will find them safe on your return," replied Medworth.

The canoe shot away in the darkness, and Medworth speedily made his way back to the cavern.

* * * * * * *

In the meantime Philip had been roused from his reverie by the messenger who had been sent by Don Juan with the information that Mattazudo had arrived, bringing Namampa, the herb-doctor.

Throwing off his dejection and moody misgiving, he hurried to Lola's room.

He found Don Juan and Mattazudo there, with an aged Carib whose twinkling black eyes looked out from under bushy eyebrows with an expression of great cunning.

His skin was wrinkled and seared, and looked like rusty parchment, and his hands were long and skinny, seeming to be but the bony skeleton with a covering of skin drawn tightly over them.

Namampa bent over Lola, felt her pulse, looked at her tongue and solemnly shook his head.

"Very bad, Much fever. Bring me some water," he said.

Water was brought him, and he dissolved some crystals in it. Then he poured the fluid down Lola's throat.

In an hour the anxious watchers could see that the condition of the sick girl had improved. Her painful restlessness had given way to a sweet repose. The high fever had subsided. Don Juan's hope was renewed.

The Carib remained in the castle, and was constant in his attendance upon Lola. It seemed for five days that Lola was on the way to complete recovery.

Five days of anxious watching for Don Juan. Five days of cruel suspense for Medworth. Five days of dissembling for Gomez. Five days of villainous plotting for Mattazudo.

Then, one day, when Medworth was in his accustomed place, crouching behind the secret panel, he heard the sound of sobbing and voices that were very sorrowful. At first he pricked up his ears eagerly, for Lola's name was mentioned. He listened—then he heard what he had hoped he would never hear. Lola was dead.

He staggered away, and crept back to the cavern and his friends.

The pallor of his face was ghastly in the light of the lantern that hung above their heads.

"What's the matter, boy?" cried Tempest, in alarm. "You look like a ghost. What's happened?"

"She's dead!" he gasped. "Lola's dead. I heard them talking about it just now. She died last night. They are going to bury her in the garden today."

"So soon?" said Tempest. "Why do they not wait longer?"

"They do not wait long in this country," senor," said Jacinta; and then, with her long lashes hiding the gleam of satisfaction that came into her eyes and could not be held back, she placed her jeweled hand in Medworth's; and, leaning forward, she pressed her rich, warm lips to his cold, white brow in what seemed to be a token of her honest sympathy.

That afternoon there was a sad and solemn gathering near the fountain in the garden of Salvarez, and while Don Juan, Philip and Gomez looked silently on, the body of poor Lola was lowered into a shallow grave.

They did not see two pairs of eyes that peeped from a secluded bower, one pair being dimmed with tears.

Medworth and Tempest had risked capture, and perhaps death, to witness the last sad rites.

Rotation of Calendars.

An evening contemporary has been informing its readers that they can use the same calendars every twenty years—when the dates of the month fall on the same days of the week—thereby avoiding the expense of five almanacs for the present century. But here is something better than that. Persons who have the double advantage of ancient family and careful forefathers, by turning up the calendars—unfortunately they are not printed ones, for the twelfth century, by Solomon Jarchus, will find the days and dates coincident with the present century. Such persons can save the expense of buying for 100 years. Again those with a frugal mind, who have preseved the almanacs of the nineteenth century, will avoid an outlay for calendars of the century commencing Jan. 1, 2201, as the dates for the 100 years following will be coincident with those of the last century. But life is scarcely long enough for such economies.—London Chronicle.

Having obtained a situation there he couldn't escape going to Philadelphia to live. On Chestnut street he met an old time friend, to him explained the reason for his appearance in the charming City of Brotherly Love and said:

"I've taken lodgings on Spruce street. Have I done the right thing?" "Certainly, certainly, my dear fellow! You couldn't have done better, you know. You're right in it, in fact. Why, the trolley cars run up Pine street on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, and come down Spruce street on Tuesdays and Saturdays."—New York Times.

INDIAN FIRST TO IRRIGATE

American irrigation was old when Rome was in the glory of its youth. The ancient aqueducts and subterranean canals of South America, extending for thousands of miles, once supplied great cities and irrigated immense areas. Centuries before the venturous Norseman landed upon the bleak and inhospitable shores of New England a large population dwelt in the hot valleys of the far southwest. From the solid rock, with primitive tools of stone, they cut ditches and hewed the blocks for many-chambered palaces which they erected in the desert or on the limestone ledges of deep river canyons.

These voiceless ruins, older than the memory of many centuries, tell the story of a thrifty, home-loving and semi-cultured people, concerning whose fate history brings us no word. In these palaces and in many miles of canals we may almost read the story of another Egypt—a people toiling under the burning sun of the desert, wearily and painfully executing the commands of an American Pharaoh.

Coming down to a period less remote and only slightly less interesting, is the first page of modern American history. Here, in the sixteenth century, Coronado, the first great American explorer, swept up the Rio Grande valley and journeyed as far north as Kansas. In New Mexico he found a pastoral race dwelling in pueblos and practicing the gentle art of irrigation as had their forefathers, perhaps, as far back as in the days of Abraham. Certainly their agricultural methods were in no wise different from those which prevailed in the days of the prophets. Even unto this day their grain is gathered in great willow baskets, is thrashed by the trampling of sheep and goats, and winnowed by the winds. Fields which were cultivated three centuries ago are still producing crops each year.

Some of these thoughts came to the government engineers as they ran their lines of levels in the valley of Salt river in Arizona, and it seemed to them a proper task for the greatest nation on earth to restore once more the oases of verdure which the desert had long ago obliterated.

During the last quarter of a century a crop-producing area of 10,000,000, or another state of Massachusetts, has been wrested from the desert. Irrigation canals long enough to span the earth twice and representing an outlay of $90,000,000, have been built. Every year this area returns a harvest valued at more than $150,000,000, and 2,000,000 people dwell in prosperity and contentment where only a short time ago the wilderness reigned.

Uncle Sam is to-day the largest owner of the great American desert, no doubt because it was not considered worth stealing. For many years the sentiment has been growing that the government should make habitable this vast empire which is so great potentially.

HOW SHE ALWAYS KNEW

All alone on the hilltop lived Hannah Jane Spriggins, and a lonely life she led, this ancient maid. Much to the wonder of the good people of the village of Meddybemps, she was never at a loss for news, and when neighbors called with stray bits of information, Hannah Jane always knew it long before it had been spread broadcast through the town.

"Say, did ye know Sam Whitten's Anne had a shock?" volunteered an excited female, dropping in on Hannah Jane early one evening, just as that peaceful soul was sipping her nightly brew of tea.

"Taken at 2 o'clock this afternoon," calmly replied that lady, serenely, "had to send for that know-nothing crittur of a Dr. Smith, 'cause Dr. Brown wasn't home. Got Sam Ketchum's Tabitha for a nurse."

"For the land's sakes, Hannah, how'd ye know it?" gasped the astounded caller. "You ain't had time to go down to the village and back since it happened." Hannah Jane shook her head in mysterious fashion.

"You do beat all getting the news first," continued the neighbor, with an injured air. "How in time's sake do ye manage?" Hannah Jane meditated a moment, then beckoned to her guest, who was one of her oldest friends, and led her in solemn silence up the winding stairs that led to a turret chamber at the top of the house. This room had been made for her father, an old sea captain of the town, so that he could watch the vessels as they sailed into the harbor.

From an ancient bureau in the corner of the room Hannah Jane drew forth something wrapped carefully in tissue paper. "Opery glasses," she explained briefly, as she took out her treasure from the numerous wrappings. "Niece Ellen sent 'em to me five years ago; and a great comfort they have been, too," she added feelingly. "There's not many a place in town but what I can make out with these oppery glasses, and there's not much going on that I don't know," finished this original being triumphantly, who in this novel fashion kept herself well in touch with the rest of the world.

JOHNNY'S LAST LITTLE WORD

Johnny and his father were sitting around the reading table after a good dinner. Johnny was busy studying a spelling lesson in words ending in "ous," while his father read the evening paper.

"O, papa," called Johnny. "What does billious mean, please?"

"Why, it means 'sick,' feeling bad, you know—full of bile."

Johnny was satisfied and bent over his book once more. Father began on his paper again, and everything was still for a few minutes.

"Papa," called Johnny then.

"Now, Johnny," said his father, "oyu must not bother papa while he is reading his paper. But now that you have interrupted me, what is it that you want to know?"

"I just wanted to know what 'plenteous' means, please, papa."

"Now you ought to know what 'plenteous' means, Johnny. It means a whole heap, abundant—er—er—full of plenty, don't you see? Now go on with your studies and don't bother me with foolish questions."

Johnny was a little hurt and kept very still for some time, studying his lesson without looking up.

Finally he began to twist around in his chair and clear his throat in an effort to attract his father's attention, but father was very deep in his paper, and did not look up.

"Papa," said Johnny, timidly.

Papa kept on reading, and made no answer.

"Papa!" called Johnny, in a louder tone.

Father crumpled his paper up and looked at Johnny hard. "Johnny," he said, severely, "I told you not to bother me with questions while I am reading. Now if you speak to me again, I shall have to send you out of the room."

"Well, papa, can't I ask you just one little word?"

"Yes, just one word, and remember—this is the very last."

"Well, papa, if I was full of apple pie, would I be pieous?"

MINING GOLD IN IRELAND

Gold is being mined in Ireland, incidental to the development of a mine of lead sulphide, commonly known as galena. The mine is in the Glentoghan valley, a few miles from the market town of Carndonagh, County Donegal, says the New York Tribune. There is no indication, however, that the mining of this gold will interfere in the slightest degree with the emigration from Ireland, which has been so general for the last few years or that it will relieve the labor situation of the Emerald isle.

The locality of the mine is near the northern extremity of Ireland, on the peninsula of Innishowen. The galena deposit was worked in 1790 for silver and lead, but for some reason the enterprise was abandoned. Another attempt was made to work the mine in 1860, but this also was unsuccessful for lack of capital. Some months ago a Belfast man, who had practical experience in silver and lead mining in the United States, examined the locality. A number of assays were made of smaples from the mine, which showed an average of an ounce of gold a ton, 60 per cent of metallic lead and a variable quantity of silver.

A mining lease was obtained from the earl of Shaftesbury, the owner of the property, and a force of men was set to work cleaning out the old workings of more than a century ago, and a smelter of the capacity of 100 tons a day was contracted for. The output of lead, it is stated, is now paying the working expenses, though the amount of gold obtained is very small. Geologically speaking, the mine is a "fault," or fracture of the rock strata, in which was deposited the mineral containing the metals.

FOOT RACES OF TEPEHVANES

There are always two parties running against each other, say the boys of one village against those of another; or the young men, or the married men, or the old men from one part of the country against those from another, says the Southern Workman. The girls and the married women, too, have their races. The men kick before them a wooden ball, about two inches in diameter, and the women follow in the same way a hoop of maguey leaves, which the foremost one throws ahead with a stick. Neither party ever stops to pick up the ball or hoop, but both make it fly onward as they run. Should it fall into some difficult place the swarms of eager, interested onlookers, ever alert, will quickly return it to the path of the runners in ample time for the latter to make it fly on before them.

The race courses were laid out on comparatively level land no one knows how many hundreds of years ago, and generation after generation enjoys the sport on it. The track generally measures some eight or ten thousand feet. While the speed of the runners may not be phenomenal, their endurance is. It is not rare for a man to make twelve or fifteen circuits in a little more than three hours. Some years ago there died a man who would make twenty-seven circuits in a race lasting from noon till after sundown and indulge next day in a prolonged dance to celebrate his victory. The victor, of course, is honored and admired; otherwise he gets no reward, although his friends may be benefited by winning bets they have made on him.

Eminent Doctors Praise Its Ingredients.

We refer to that boon to weak, nervous, suffering women known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

Dr. John Fyfe one of the Editorial Staff of THE ECLECTIC MEDICAL REVIEW says of Unicorn root (Helonias Dioica) which is one of the chief ingredients of the "Favorite Prescription":

"A remedy which invariably acts as a uterine invigorator * * * makes for normal activity of the entire reproductive system." He continues "In Helonias we have a medicament which more fully answers the above purposes than any other drug with which I am acquainted. In the treatment of diseases peculiar to women it is seldom that a case is seen which does not present some indication for this remedial agent." Dr. Fyfe further says: "The following are among the leading indications for Helonias (Unicorn root). Pain or aching in the back, with leucorrhœa; atonic (weak) conditions of the reproductive organs of women, mental depression and irritability, associated with chronic diseases of the reproductive organs of women; constant sensation of heat in the region of the kidneys; menorrhagia (flooding), due to a weakened condition of the reproductive system; amenorrhœa (suppressed or absent monthly periods), arising from or accompanying an abnormal condition of the digestive organs and anæmic (thin blood) habit; dragging sensations in the extreme lower part of the abdomen."

If more or less of the above symptoms are present, no invalid woman can do better than take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, one of the leading ingredients of which is Unicorn root, or Helonias, and the medical properties of which it most faithfully represents.

Of Golden Seal root, another prominent ingredient of "Favorite Prescription" Prof. Finley Ellingwood, M. D., of Bennett Medical College, Chicago, says:

"It is an important remedy in disorders of the womb. In all catarrhal conditions * * and general enfeeblement, it is useful."

Prof. John M. Scudder, M. D., late of Cincinnati, says of Golden Seal root:

"In relation to its general effects on the system, there is no medicine in use about which there is such general unanimity of opinion. It is universally regarded as the tonic useful in all debilitated states."

Prof. Bartholow, M. D., of Jefferson Medical College, says of Golden Seal:

"Valuable in uterine hemorrhage, menorrhagia (flooding) and congestive dysmenorrhœa (painful menstruation)."

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription faithfully represents all the above named ingredients and cures the diseases for which they are recommended.

A Gentle Hint.

"Ethel," the sweet girl's father called gently from above stairs.

"Yes, father. What is it?"

"Just tell your young man to be careful and not trip over the morning's milk when he goes out."

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

This Custom Is Now General.

It has now become a general and also a safe rule to demand brands of goods that are well known and have a reputation for quality and responsibility. Nowadays the manufacturers of goods inform consumers of this fact and point out that safety lies in buying the brands that bear their names and trade-marks.

In this respect the Mayer brands of shoes are deserving of special mention. Our readers have no doubt become familiar with these shoes and know of their excellent wearing qualities by actual use. The Mayer factory turns out shoes suitable for every member of the family and for all uses, Sunday shoes and every day shoes, and they are known throughout the broad expanse of our land as the shoes of style and quality.

The "Honorbilt" are very popular fine shoes for men and "Western Lady" shoes embody the fit and style demanded by well dressed ladies. For extreme comfort "Martha Washington" shoes are highly recommended. Please bear this in mind when next buying shoes.

Habits of Kings.

The sovereigns of Europe have all their own peculiar habits. For example, King Edward has a way of passing his finger backward and forward under his chin; the German emperor twirls his mustache with energy, while the king of Italy strokes his gently and affectionately; the emperor of Austria combs out his whiskers and the czar frequently passes his hand over the top of his head.

FOUND OUT.

A Trained Nurse Discovered Its Effect.

No one is in better position to know the value of food and drink than a trained nurse.

Speaking of coffee a nurse of Wilkesbarre, Pa., writes: "I used to drink strong coffee myself and suffered greatly from headaches and indigestion. While on a visit to my brothers I had a good chance to try Postum Food Coffee, for they drank it altogether in place of ordinary coffee. In two weeks after using Postum, I found I was much benefited and finally my headaches disappeared and also the indigestion.

"Naturally I have since used Postum among my patients, and have noticed a marked benefit where coffee has been left off and Postum used.

"I observe a curious fact about Postum used among mothers. It greatly helps the flow of milk in cases where coffee is inclined to dry it up, and where tea causes nervousness.

"I find trouble in getting servants to make Postum properly. They most always serve it before it has been boiled long enough. It should be boiled 15 or 20 minutes, and served with cream, when it is certainly a delicious beverage."

"There's a reason" for Postum.

FAITH OF COLLEGE GIRLS

There recent arrest of a young woman for alleged thefts from the Smith College dormitories at Northampton, Mass., calls attention to the attitude of college girls in the matter of safeguarding their belongings.

There is an unwritten law among college girls that nothing belonging to them shall be under lock and key and they leave diamond rings blazing on their dressing tables and their pocketbooks peeking out of bureau drawers. If they miss a trinket or an article of apparel for a day or two they do not worry, arguing that Elizabeth or Genevieve or some other bosom friend has simply borrowed it.

Sometimes a girl will miss an opera cloak and make no attempt to hunt it up until she has need of it herself. Scarfs and gloves and handkerchief's are often lent in this same careless fashion. The girls say that it shows a mean suspicion of their college mates, as well as an unaccommodating spirit, to keep their valuables locked up.

Room doors are almost invariably unlocked, and as the entrance door of the dormitory is always unlocked there is nothing to prevent a woman on robbery bent from ransacking half a dozen rooms in a few minutes.

President Seelye has risen in chapel again and again and exhorted the young women to keep their valuables locked up.

The students look grave at his admonitions, and for a week there is a great jingling of keys and a careful stowing away of rings, bracelets, brooches and the allowance which has just come from home. At the end of the week such care becomes irksome and things are thrown around in any old way as before. Rings are slipped over a hatpin stuck in a pincushion, pocketbooks are deposited in the chafing dish, laces dangle over a corner of the mirror, watches tick placidly on the pin trays, necklaces are draped around a perfume bottle and doors are kept wide open.

When a college girl suffers from robbery she does not regard the matter very seriously at first, especially if the theft be of money. When the robberies become frequent she begins to think of dishonest servants or men thieves.

When the culprit is proved to be a woman the college girl is almost as much upset as the criminal herself; but it teaches her no lesson.

Maybe for a month she will not leave her room without locking up ever thing, but at the end of the month she will argue that the thief has been apprehended, so that there is really no need to be so careful.

HUNTER'S PERILS IN AFRICA

Capt. Chauncy Hugh Stegand of the British army has been tossed by a rhinoceros and nearly trampled to death by an elephant. On the first of these occasions the captain, accompanied by native hunters, was beating the jungles for big game twenty miles from Fort Mancey, in central Africa, when he, in advance of the men, started two rhinoceroses, which ran toward him. One he turned with a shot, while the other ran at him, knocked him down and then thrust his horn under his prostrate body and tossed him in the air some ten or twelve feet. This was a feat the rhinoceros was well equal to, being some two or three tons in weight, with proportioned height. Capt. Stegand was seen flying in the air above the tall grass by his followers. He managed to fall on the flat of his back, and so had no broken bones, but he had a deep wound in the chest above the heart, where the rhinoceros had lifted him, which took three weeks to heal.

On the second occasion he sprung three elephants after following their trail for a whole day in the tall grass. Two of the elephants were large, a male and a female. The third elephant was younger and smaller. The big elephants were tuskless, and the smaller one had tusks, but they were too small to be of value. So Capt. Stegand was going to let them move off undisturbed. However, the young elephant, after going a short way, changed his mind and returned and ran for the captain, who fired to stop the animal and hit him in the head. But the creature went on, making for the captain, who, in getting out of the way, stumbled over a fallen tree, which the beasts had pulled down, and got among the branches.

Then the elephant tried to kick him out with his feet and even passed over the body of the captain, the blood from his wounds falling on the man below. The captain, however, was able to get hold of his rifle, which had falled out of his hand in his stumble, and was handed to him by one of the men. He knocked the creature over with a shot.

IMPORTANT TO GLASS TRADE

Vice Consul Bock of Nuremberg reports a new invention in the glass plate industry, concerning which he writes:

"Should it really possess the advantages claimed, it would cause serious damage to the blowing glass plate industry in this district, where three-quarter glass plates are chiefly manufactured. So far two methods have been employed in the manufacture of crystal plate glass and mirror and window glass—namely, that of casting and blowing. The new method is the invention of Mr. Fourcault, a Belgian, who has sold his patent to the European syndicate of plate glass manufacturers for $952,000. This syndicate consists of German, French and Belgian manufacturers and one Bohemian factory.

"Until now, in the making of window glass, the molten substance has been blown into cylinders by glassmakers' pipes and subsequently flattened, while in the making of plate glass the viscid mass was cast from the pots and rolled. The new invention draws the molten substance from the pot and conducts it between rollers lying side by side. Seventeen pairs of these rollers are built up towerlike above the pot. The liquid mass cools on its way between the rows of rolls and comes out from them polished on both sides, in any desired thickness (this being regulated by the relative position of the rollers), beautifully flattened and ready for use.

"At present dimensions of from 157.48 inches to 39.37 inches can be made, but experiments are being conducted to allow of the manufacture of from 98.42 inches to 68.90 inches as well. It is believed that this invention will bring about a revolution in the trade. One early result would be that the manufacturing of plate glass 157.48 inches and less would undergo an entire change, as the making of glass plates would come chiefly within the scope of the plate glass furnaces."

QUININE AS A CIVILIZER

Simultaneously with the Americans there appeared among the Moros the most fearful of all diseases, the Asiastic cholera, and straightway it was charged upon us. The white men were in league with the Cholera Man, and had brought his devils to destroy the Moros. My few friends dropped away out of sight, whence they had come. Prowling bands, even lone Moros, beset the trails and camp, lying in wait and attacking with fury and bitterness lone sentinels and small parties. A single old datto, Alandug, stayed. From his seacoast village he had looked wider upon the world, and was wiser than his fellows. I did not need to tell him, for he easily saw for himself, our mortal terror of cholera whose cause we call germs, he, devils. He did not, however, understand why we were not dying like the Moros. I showed him the soldiers boiling their water, and told him that before drinking we thus drove the cholera forth from the water in which it lived. To my surprise he never flinched at the statement, he swallowed it whole; this truth so hard of acceptance among wiser men found ready belief with the savage. Long afterward I knew why. It agreed with the Moro religious theory that all diseases are but devils that have slipped from the outside into the body. Our theory and theirs, so different, yet the same, proved a first bond, something common between white man and brown. Alandug told the other Moros what a just theory the Americans had of the cholera, and how the awful disease had killed but few Americans. In short time my friends began to come back with him, bringing all the ills of human flesh for cure by the advice of the white man in whose medical theories they had quickly acquired confidence. Thenceforward medicine, and especially quinine, became my ally, esteemed above right reason, principle and upon occasion, even above force. —R. L. Bullard in Atlantic Monthly.

IN MACEDONIA AND TURKEY

Writes H. N. Brailsford, the author of a new book on Macedonia and Turkey: "I half suspect that the petroleum is imported for the sake of the square tin boxes in which it is packed. The whole domestic economy of Turkey seems to depend upon those tins. Piled one upon another and roofed with boards and sacking, they serve for slum dwellings in the towns. Cut up into plates they protect the sides of the better houses from the weather. They are used as water cans and kitchen pots. Your food, your water and even your bread taste of petroleum, which becomes to the fastidious traveler a sensuous symbol of the east. Nothing could illustrate better the poverty and slovenliness of oriental life."

Macedonia, according to the same writer, does not place a very high value on the mere good opinion of the civilized world. He says: "I once had talk with a man who had drugged ten Turkish soldiers in an inn and burned them alive. When I expressed my horror, he replied by pouring out a tale which I confess staggered me—all the recent wrongs of his village—the men carried away captive into slavery by brigands, the women treated brutally. Somehow my vocabulary of censure ran dry, and I tried to suggest that such reprisals were a mistake, since they alienate the sympathies of Europe.

"He replied that by murdering ten men who richly deserved it he had obtained ten rifles for the cause of liberty. 'Surely,' I answered, 'the good opinion of the civilized world is worth more than ten rifles.' He smiled bitterly, reflected for a moment, and then, mimicking my tones, inquired laconically: 'What was the good opinion of your civilized world worth to the Armenians?' I was silenced."

WAS WEAK AND DIZZY

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Restored the Patient to Perfect Health And Strength.

Mrs. Mary Gagner, of No. 576 South Summer street, Holyoke, Mass., has passed through an experience which proves that some of the greatest blessings of life may lie within easy reach and yet be found only by mere chance. A few years ago while she was employed in the mills she was suddenly seized with dizziness and great weakness. "I was so weak at times," she says, "that I could hardly stand, and my head became so dizzy that it seemed as if the floor was moving around.

"My condition at last became so bad that I was obliged to give up work in the mill, and later still I became so feebly that I could not even attend to me household duties. After the slightest exertion I had to lie down and rest until I regained strength.

"A friend who had used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People urged me to try them. I bought a box and began to take them. The benefit was so positive and so quickly evident that I continued to use the pills until I had taken altogether six boxes. By that time I was entirely cured, and for two years I have had no return of my trouble. I am now in the best of health and able to attend to all my duties. I am glad to acknowledge the benefit I received and I hope that my statement may be the means of inducing others who may suffer in this way to try this wonderful medicine."

The secret of the power of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in cases of debility, such as Mrs. Gagner's lies in the fact that they make new blood, and every organ and even every tiny nerve in the body feels the stir of a new tide of strength.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

One Recommendation.

St. Vitus was speaking of the celebrated dance that had been named in his honor.

"To be sure," he said, "it isn't graceful. You can't call it the poetry of motion. But it has one good point—it can be performed without music."

Reflecting, however, that some one might suggest Songs Without Words as an appropriate accompaniment for the dance, he hastened to change the subject.

A Sure Sign.

Col. Charles W. Larned, professor of drawing at West Point, stood in the sunshine under an elm.

"The spring is rather backward, sir," said a cadet.

"Oh, no," said Col. Larned.

"The daffodils, the crocusses and violets are very backward, sir," the cadet insisted, respectfully.

"Nevertheless," said Col. Larned, "there is no doubt that spring is really here at last."

"Why, sir, do you think so?" the cadet asked.

"Because all the comic artists," said Col. Larned, "have now begun to put vegetation in their backgrounds."

AWFUL SUFFERING.

From Dreadful Pains from Wound on Foot—System All Run Down—Miraculous Cure by Cuticura.

"Words cannot speak highly enough for the Cuticura Remedies. I am now seventy-two years of age. My system had been all run down. My blood was so bad that blood poisoning had set in. I had several doctors attending me, so finally I went to the hospital where I was laid up for two months. My foot and ankle were almost beyond recognition. Dark blood flowed out of wounds in many places and I was so disheartened that I thought surely my last chance was slowly leaving me. As the foot did not improve, you can readily imagine how I felt. I was simply disgusted and tired of life. I stood this pain, which was dreadful, for six months, and during this time I was not able to wear a shoe and not able to work. Some one spoke to me about Cuticura. The consequences were I bought a set of the Cuticura Remedies of one of my friends who was a druggist, and the praise that I gave after the second application is beyond description; it seemed a miracle for the Cuticura Remedies took effect immediately. I washed the foot with the Cuticura Soap before applying the Ointment and I took the Resolvent at the same time. After two weeks' treatment my foot was healed completely. People who had seen my foot during my illness and who have seen it since the cure, can hardly believe their own eyes. Robert Schoenhauer, Newburg, N. Y. August 21, 1905."

Doctor Brigham Says

MANY PHYSICIANS PRESCRIBE

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

The wonderful power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound over the diseases of womankind is not because it is a stimulant, not because it is a palliative, but simply because it is the most wonderful tonic and reconstructor ever discovered to act directly upon the generative organs, positively curing disease and restoring health and vigor.

Marvelous cures are reported from all parts of the country by women who have been cured, trained nurses who have witnessed cures and physicians who have recognized the virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and are fair enough to give credit where it is due.

If physicians dared to be frank and open, hundreds of them would acknowledge that they constantly prescribe Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in severe cases of female ills, as they know by experience it can be relied upon to effect a cure. The following letter proves it.

Dr. S. C. Brigham, of 4 Brigham Park, Fitchburg, Mass., writes:

"It gives me great pleasure to say that I have found Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound very efficacious, and often prescribe it in my practice for female difficulties.

"My oldest daughter found it very beneficial for a female trouble some time ago, and my youngest daughter is now taking it for a female weakness, and is surely gaining in health and strength.

"I freely advocate it as a most reliable specific in all diseases to which women are subject, and give it honest endorsement."

Women who are troubled with painful or irregular periods, bloating (or flatulency), weakness of organs, displacements, inflammation or ulceration, can be restored to perfect health and strength by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. If advice is needed write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. She is daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham and for twenty-five years has been advising sick women free of charge. No other living person has had the benefit of a wider experience in treating female ills. She has guided thousands to health. Every suffering woman should ask for and follow her advice if she wants to be strong and well.

LOCAL NEWS

Delays are very serious. If your eyes need attention call at once and have them examined.

Henry W. Anderson.
Jeweler and Optician.

A committee of the county comissioners, P. A. Ekstrom and William Demann, with James Brady representing the state committee, and Frank L. Howe, representing the Hennepin Bridge company of Minneapolis. went out yesterday to view the proposed bridge over the Red Lake river in Louisville. The contract calls for a solid foundation but the contractors have driven piles to a depth of 28 feet without finding anything like a solid bottom and a consultation as to further proceedings was deemed necessary. 33

A sacred concert will be given at the Presbyterian church Sunday evening by the R. B. George Concert company. Those who have heard the company will be glad of this further opportunity to hear the members again. Mr. George will also give a short talk on his visit to the Holy Land. No admission will be charged but the collection will go to the church. The concert will begin at eight o'clock. At the morn- services at the church F. S. Green, a mender of the company, will sing a solo. 33.

The concert which was to have been given by the Red Lake Falls band last Friday evening was postponed as there were no lights in the hall owing to the burning out of a transformer. However it will be given tomorrow night and the advance sale of reserved seats indicates that one of the largest audiences of the season will be present at this, the last indoor concert, of the season. There are very few good seats left and the opera house ought to be filled as is warranted by the excellence of the program that has been prepared. 33.

The Northern Pacific passenger trainmen will soon be fitted for new uniforms, the company having decided to change the material of which its servants' liveries are made to blue serge. A recent canvass of the trainmen showed that a majority of them were in favor of the change. A Minneapolis clothing house which furnishes the Great Northern employes with uniforms, will hereafter perform a similar service for the Northern Pacific. A representative of the company will soon make a trip over the line to measure trainmen for their new regalia, and the change from the old habiliments to the be made as rapidly as the suits are required by the wearers.

The Odd Fellows enjoyed a merry evening Friday in celebration of the 87th anniversary of the founding of their order. Of the business transacted, F. A. Mizen was elected representative to the grand lodge which will hold its session at Minneapolis June 13, and James E. Ford was chosen alternate. H. C. Hanson was recommended for district deputy grand master. In the social session that followed cards were played at which Miss J. Alice Coughlin won the lady's head prize and Miss Gertude Hennemuth the foot prize. Fred Zaiser won the gentleman's head prize and Robert Bourdon the booby prize. The Orpheus Quintette rendered some delightful music, refreshments were served and the evening's pleasures concluded with dancing. 33.

IN PIONEER DAYS

Oct. 12, 1882.

Mr. H. B. Kaufer's family came up from Fergus Falls last week and occupy his new dwelling house. He is one of the happiest men in town.

F. E. Hunt having retired from dealing in general merchandise and gone into the hardware trade, and yet has a portion of his old stock on hand, must sell it to make room for hardware. It consists of boots and shoes, hats and caps, gloves, mittens jackets, etc., which he will sell at cost.

Fred Gesswein, of Fergus Falls, and one of the strongest advocates of the future of this place, came up last week to make preparations for erecting a building. He will handle and manufacture furniture.

Oct. 19, 1882.

Adam Zeh sold his interest in the saloon on Main street to James Phelen, on Friday last.

The people of this place showed their desire to retain the good name it now possesses and also that they are not narrow minded, by attending and hearing the speech of Hon. Knute Nelson. His party left with a good impression of Red Lake Falls and citizens, wheather he succeeded in gaining followers or not.

Nov. 2, 1882.

The proprietors of the St. Hilaire Spectator, McKenzie & Co., inform us that the initial number of their paper was issued yesterday. Success to the enterprise.

The following firms will commence business in a few days: Joseph Smith & Co., Morrison & Ledbore, Stephen Cox, O. F. Buse & Co., merchandise; Watson & Sweet, druggists; Grover & Phelen, hotel; Louis Zeh, blacksmith.

Nov. 23, 1882.

Henry J. Kaufer has added a new hotel register and by the number of names placed upon its pages, we should say the Headquarters is doing a lively business.

Joseph Smith and family arrived last week from Le Sueur, and will reside here in the future. Mr. Smith will conduct the large mercantile establishment of Jos. Smith & Co.

Postmaster Kretzschmar has secured the service of Theodore Garceau as assistant. Mr. Garceau is a young man of more than ordinary ability and is well-known in this section: and Mr. K. was fortunate in securing his service for the postoffice. He is installed and has entered upon his duties, which will be executed in a satisfactory manner.

We have inadvertently ommited mentioning the appearance of the St. Hilaire Spectator. It is a neat and newsy seven column folio and a credit to the town, and the people should show their appreciation of the entrprise by giving it a liberal support. Success to the Spectator and much wealth to the publisher.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS

Proceedings of the Special Meeting Held Monday.

The board of county commissioners held a special meeting Monday with all the members present except Commissioner Demann. Following was the principal business transacted:

The matter of county ditch No. 25 was considered, several changes made in the amounts of benefits assessed and construction ordered. The changes were reductions to William Hahner from $262.70 to $242.70; Fred Run from $100 to $80; Charles A. Lindquist from $156 to $136; Anders Erickson from $188 to $124.

The petition of E. K. Gjerness for the formation of a new school district in Deer Park and Highlanding was granted.

The petition of Bergedal to be set off from one district to another was denied.

Applications of Christ. Moe, Helmer Ostrom, John Burg and Henry Reese for abatement of taxes were granted.

The sum of $200 was appropriated from the road and bridge fund for the town of Garnes.

An auction license was granted to Ingvald Huseby.

The sum of $100 was appropriated for the town of North, $200 to Silverton, $100 to Clover Leaf and $90 to Goodridge to aid in the construction and repair of the east and west road in those towns.

From the road and bridge fund was appropriated $100 to aid in construction of approaches to the bridge across the Clearwater river in town 152.

The county attorney was instructed to begin procredings against the contractor's bondsmen and engineer in Rocksbury and North ditch No. 1 to enforce completion.

James Brady was employed to look after the construction of the Louisville bridge

The sum of $50 was appropriated to secure additional teachers for the summer training school to be held at Thief River Falls.

The purchasing committee was authorized to purchase 100 copies of the pamphlets containing the school laws for distribution among the school districts.

Secret of Good Looks.

An English physician, after much careful study, has found out why woman are better looking than men. He says that they use their brains so much less then the men do that all the vitality goes to good looks. This doctor is one of the wisest in his land and according to his theory, men could put on a better apperance if they had vitality enough for both work and good looks. We will all admit that a man who has mental and physical power enough to handle his task with ease is always happier, consequently better looking. Here is another case where golden grain belt beer plays an important factor as a promoter. Order of your nearest dealer or be supplied by Alex Thompson, Crookston.

SHOWER FOR MISS LEMIEUX

Merry Crew Club Gives Entertainment for Bride-to-be.

Saturday afternoon the Merry Crew entertained at a china shower at the Harren home in honor of Miss Ida Lemieux, whose wedding to Mr. Omer Hall is announced to take place May 23.

Some thirty-five guests were present. The house was charmingly decorated with pink and white hearts and cut flowers filled the room with their perfume. On Miss Lemieux's arrival, she was met at the door by the members of the club each ringing a bell and as the bride-to-be walked through the hall a shower of rice was given her. A question "yes or no" game was played at which Miss Lemieux carried off the honor of the head prize, a heart-shaped box of candy. Miss Eva Paradis drew the consolation prize, a heart-shaped cookie cutter. Miss Lemieux was then asked to open her presents and found a number of beautiful and useful pieces in presentation. Supper was served and Miss Iza Thibbets played a wedding march as the guests marched around to their places. The Misses Ethel Bourdon, Ida Mathies, Florence Hennemuth and Rebecca Hunt acted as waitresses.

The event throughout was a complete success and will long be remembered by all the guests as one of the most pleasing affairs of the season

FIRE DEPARTMENT IS PROSPEROUS

Annual Financial Statement Shows Balance on the Right Side of the Ledger.

Officers for Coming Year Elected—Preparing for the Tournament at Warren.

The Red Lake Falls fire department is in a prosperous financial condition and at the annual meeting held Saturday evening the members were in an enthusiastic frame of mind over that fact, the coming tournament at Warren and the hope of bringing next year's tournament to this city. The financial statement as submitted by the finance committee is as follows:

Balance May 1, 1906	$ 94 10
From Blackduck	185 00

The following officers were elected: Chief, Henry Hennemuth; assistant chief, M. A. Converse; secretary, Fred Borchers; treasurer, Sam E. [illegible]; finance committee, George Hennings; Frank Brouillet and Joseph Sally. Recommended for fire warden, John Dryer.

The tournament this year will be held at Warren and the Red Lake Falls firemen will probably go there thirty strong arrayed in the new uniforms which have been ordered and ought to be here within a week or two.

The candidates for the running team are Harry Healy, captain; Ernest Buse, Walter Buse, Frank Brouillet, Ed. Bray, Ernest Gerlach, Harry Garceau, Albert Brunelle, Zeb Normandeau, Jack Phallen, Fred Richards, Sullivan Hall, Roy Blake, Hugo Ittner and Carl Krueger. Practice is being indulged in two evenings a week and the team that carries off the honors at Warren this year will have to show Red Lake Falls.

In Their Favor.

The High School base ball team, accompanied by their band and a number of rooters went to Thief River Falls last Saturday to play the High School of that city. The weather was too cold for anything like comfort but a very fast seven-inning exhibition was given, the Thief River Falls boys winning out by a score of 3 to 2. There is a possibility that it would not have made any difference in the score but there was just room for complaint that the Thief River team contained three rank outsiders, one at least of whom was certified by the professor of the schools of that city. Beyond that the visitors were agreeably entertained and pleased with the showing they made.

TEACHERS HAVE A GOOD MEETING

They Gather in Numbers at St. Hilaire for a Two Days Meeting Last Week.

Interesting Papers Were Read and Discussions Pleasantly Occupy the Time.

The Teachers association held a most interesting meeting at St. Hilaire last Friday and Saturday. There were not so many present owing to unfavorable weather conditions but there was no lack of enthusiasm or limit to the profit and pleasure for the forty or fifty who were there.

The Friday afternoon session was given over to an address by Prof. William Robertson of the Crookston Experimental farm, who spoke of rural agriculture. In the evening Supt. D. E. McIntyre of Crookston gave a lecture on the mammoth cave of Kentucky, illustrated with stereoptican views. Mr. McIntyre has but recently returned from an exploration of the cave so his lecture was of unusual interest. The views also were exceptionally good. The opera house was crowded with a delighted audience.

Saturday morning Miss Helen A. Dow, of the Crookston Normal, read a paper on arithmetic. It was warmly discussed by Supt. McIntyre, Supt. Hay of Thief River Falls, J. B. O'Brien of St. Hilaire, Supt. H. T. McAnulty of Red Lake Falls, Miss Dow and several of the other teachers.

Saturday afternoon Supt. Yeager of Fosston read a paper on arithmetic which was very well received as did also O. J. Leding. Percentage, proportion and stocks and bonds were the subjects then discussed by nearly all present.

The business meeting will be held at the summer school and the association will elect officers at that time.

The summer school will be held at Thief River Falls four weeks beginning July 5. The county commissioners at their meeting this week have allowed $50 for the employment of a fourth instructor at the summer school, which will permit of instruction in first grade subjects the same as last year when Mr. McAnulty paid the bill himself.

News to Mr. Boughton.

We are informed that Red Lake county will have another newspaper in the near future. It is to be established at Brooks, the necessary capital to be furnished by Red Lake Falls parties and the heaviest editorial end to be handled by Chas. E. Boughton. Its mission in life will be to educate the voters on the county seat removal question from a Red Lake Falls standpoint.—Plummer Pioneer.

ESTABLISH VALLEY ATHLETIC LEAGUE

Instructors Meet at St. Hilaire and Determine Upon a Field Meeting.

To Be Held at Thief River Falls May 26—Events That Will Be Pulled Off.

A number of school superintendents gathered at St. Hilaire last Saturday and organized the Red River Valley Athletic league. Supt. Chamberlain, of this city, presided and Professor Thoreson, of Crookston, was chosen secretary of the league. Crookston, Warren, East Grand Forks, Fosston, St. Hilaire and Red Lake Falls were represented.

An executive board of five was ordered to be appointed. The duties of this board will be to look after the affairs of the league and adjust matters of difference with absolute authority to debar.

All bona fide students are permitted to enter the contests. The student, however, must have three subjects for study in the school which he is to represent and must have been a bona fide student since the first of last October. Graduates may enter the meets but only under certain conditions.

The number of events to which any one person is eligible is limited to five and each represented high school is not entitled to any more than two representatives in each event. Following is a list of the events for the coming meeting:

1. Running hop, skip and jump.
2. Hammer (12 lb) throwing.
3. Shot (12 lb) putting.
4. Pole vaulting.
5. 880 yards relay race (4 runners).
6. 440 yard run.
7. 220 yard run.
8. 100 yard dash.
9. 120 yard hurdle (10 hurdles 2½ feet high.)
10. 220 yard hurdle.
11. Running high jump.
12. Running broad jump.
13. Standing broad jump.

FINAL CONCERT A SUCCESS

Band Delights Large Audience in Last Indoor Effort.

A large audience greeted the last indoor concert of the season given by the Red Lake Falls band at the opera house Friday evening. To say it was thoroly enjoyable is a mere repetition of what has been said many times before of this splendid organization. Whether it was lighter efforts of Stark or von Tilzer or the more pretentions works of Eilenberg, Herbert or Ganne, each peice showed the same careful preparations and the same charm of interpretation under the leadership of Professor Miller. The Orpheus Quintette added a most acceptable number to the program and Mrs. Emma F. Marshall sang in splendid voice "The Angels Serenade," graciously responding to a well deserved encore.

Beginning next week the band will give a series of open air conerts every two weeks in the city hall square.

CHAPTER XVII.

A Man of Nerve.

On the very summit of a high hill, almost worthy of the name of mountain, a man was standing. From his splendid point of vantage he could look far to the east, west, north and south. He calmly raised a pair of field-glasses to his eyes and scanned, with seeming indifference, the horizon on all sides of him.

Not far distant a man, clad in leathern jacket and great boots, knelt on the ground piling up some fagots of dried wood he had collected, and under them he placed a handful or two of long, dry grass. Then, taking a match-box from the pocket of his leathern jacket, he proceeded, solemnly and with an air of performing a most important duty, to light a fire. Close by his side lay the carcass of a deer, and not far away, tethered to a short, thick tree, were two horses.

The man with the field-glasses, having finished his survey of his vast surroundings, calmly let them fall to the length of the strap that passed over his stalwart shoulder, and taking a leathern pouch from his pocket, proceeded to extract enough tobacco therefrom to fill a short black pipe which he also drew forth from the same convenient pocket.

"William, a match," he said, turning toward his companion and standing with outstretched hand.

"Yes, yes, me lord," was the reply, and William leaped to his feet, whipped out his match-box again, and proceeded to light his master's pipe.

"Did you see hanythink hof them, me lord?" he asked, returning to his task of cutting a roast from the carcass of the deer.

The man addressed, who was no other than the renowned sportsman and globe-trotter, Lord Chugmough, of Chugmough Heath, puffed at his pipe a moment, so that the light obtained from William might be made to hold.

"No, William," he replied at last, speaking with the inimitable drawl that had made him famous in London, New York, Algiers, Australia, Africa, and every other spot on the footstool where a wealthy, eccentric and adventurous Englishman is likely to be found. "No, William, I do not see them." Then, eying critically the culinary performances of William, Lord Chugmough leaned against a stumpy tree and puffed contentedly on his pipe.

"William," he drawled again, "do you know, I fear they may be lost?"

William, who was by that time turning the savory hunk of venison over the fire, nearly lost it, but by an effort of his will retained his composure, which at all times he endeavored to make equal to that of his world-renowned master.

"Very well, me lord," he said.

The fact was that Lord Chugmough and William were lost themselves.

Now, Lord Chugmough had hunted elephants in India, gorillas in Africa, and had been, in his turn, hunted by the mammas of marriageable young ladies in England until his tranquil soul rebelled, and hearing that the untried forests south of the Orinoco teemed and swarmed with animal life, and were, in fact, a veritable paradise for sportsmen, he had forthwith set sail in his yacht, Cheerway, with as gay and adventurous a party as he could collect.

The Cheerway had put in at La Guayra; Lord Chugmough and his party had visited Caracas, and endeavored to obtain there a guide to the southern forests, and failed for much the same reason that a sportsman wishing to hunt the few remaining bison on the American prairie would fail to find a suitable guide in Washington or New York.

So the Cheerway set sail again, Lord Chugmough having satisfied the government that he was not engaged in filibustering, and after a pleasant sail, ascended the Orinoco to Bolivar, where the party landed, obtained guides and horses, and started for the mountains and forests far to the south.

But before they reached the mountains they enjoyed some sport, and it was not many miles from the Castle of Salvarez that the party had espied a deer, and Lord Chugmough, in following it, had become separated from his party; but, heedless of that fact, he kept on, covering mile after mile, followed by William, until his companions were no longer to be seen.

The deer was at last killed, but so far had Lord Chugmough traveled and so many ways had the deer turned that Lord Chugmough had not the least idea in which direction he ought to go to find his friends.

Therefore, having first gained possession of the dead deer, he went up on the summit of a hill of which he had come within a short distance, to survey the country, and learn, if possible, where the remainder of his party was; but not a sign of them could he see.

Thus it may well be understood how difficult it was for William to restrain his mirth when his master uttered his solemn announcement that he feared his companions, with their guides, were lost.

Now it so happened that Sir Galloping Grace and George, Viscount Elsmere, who were next of importance in the Cheerway's party to Lord Chugmough himself, grew pale with apprehension when their host failed to appear, after several hours' absence. They knew he had started in a northerly direction, but no one had ever yet known Lord Chugmough to keep in one direction very long, and it was highly probable that if a search-party was sent off to the north Lord Chugmough would calmly walk into camp from the south, and then it would be necessary to send out another party to recover the first one.

So they waited, and continued to wait until it became the unanimous opinion of the party that Lord Chugmough and William had been killed or lost their way, and the indecision of Sir Galloping Grace and George, Viscount Elsmere, gave way to a firm determination to go in search of their companion. But this resolve was nullified by the refusal of the guides to go a step.

"No, senor," said one of them, "it would be dangerous. See there!"

Sir Galloping followed the index finger of the guide with his glance, and at once began to fear, not only for Lord Chugmough's safety, but for his own and everybody's.

For the guide was not without reason in refusing to go farther into danger.

The sky, which had so far been decent enough, clear now and then, with intermittent rain clouds, was now frightful to behold.

Great banks of hideous blackness were rolling and tumbling toward them, and the wind, which had suddenly risen, increased to the force of a tempest.

"To shelter!" cried one of the guides, "Francisco's house is not far away. Follow me."

Forgetting Lord Chugmough and everything else save their own impending danger, they mounted their plunging, snorting horses and followed their fleeing guides over the long grass, now flattened to the ground by the wind, to a large two-story structure of wood and cement, where Pedro Francisco had his home.

Pedro, as we know, was away from home, but his house-servants welcomed the Englishmen and gave them shelter, and it was not a moment too soon that they reached the friendly roof.

The wind increased in fury, the clouds grew blacker and thicker and overspread the sky, and then there came a downpour of rain such as Venezuela had never known before.

The tiny streams in the mountains swelled to the dimensions of rivers. The rippling brooks became roaring, rushing torrents. The streams that flowed north into the Orinoco tumbled and roared and lashed their banks, and then rushed over them on the flatlands. The streams flowing into the Orinoco from the north copied after those on the south until the great river itself was lashed to a fury never seen on its broad bosom before, and up, up its angry waters came until even the hog-back was covered, the Turtle was torn from her moorings and carried out to sea, and the people of Bolivar were compelled to seek higher ground to save themselves from the overwhelming flood.

It was an occasion to wring the souls of men, to destroy hope, to plunge humanity into despair.

It even elicited from Lord Chugmough, as he watched the roaring, seething torrents about him, the remark to William:

"William, this is quite a—quite a shower, don't you know."

CHAPTER XVIII.

The Ruined Temple.

When the wind first began to roar and shriek over the hill on which Lord Chugmough and William had pitched their temporary camp, the first disastrous result was that their horses, which, perhaps, knew enough to recognize the warning in the sound, broke their bounds and galloped away.

As the patter of their feet on the hillside died away, Lord Chugmough shrugged his shoulders.

"Our 'osses 'ave gone, me lord," said William.

"So I have discovered, William," was the calm reply. "But I was getting rather weary of the brutes, to tell the truth. We will walk awhile now."

"Just so, me lord. Walkin' his 'ealthy herexcise, prowidin' a man 'as a comfortable sidewalk to take 'is constitutional hon."

Lork Chugmough waved his hand depreciatingly.

"Habout the deer, me lord, the 'osses bein' gone——"

"Don't alarm yourself needlessly, William," said Lord Chugmough. "I will carry the deer on my shoulder."

Suiting the action to the word, when Lord Chugmough had got his pipe fairly alight, he seized the half-skinned carcass of the deer and slung it across his shoulder with apparently no effort.

"Come, William," he said, and he led the way down the eastern slope of the mountain.

After he had walked some distance through cedar, caoutchouc and ebony trees, he paused.

"William," he said, "it seems to me that we have here a sort of path where people have recently walked."

The path did not lead straight up the mountain, toward the top, but wound around it. Lord Chugmough struck into the path, and William followed him.

After walking a short distance, they came upon an old stone ruin.

"What have we here, William?" asked Lord Chugmough.

"Looks werry like a hold stone chapel, my lord."

"Stone chapel! Stone prison, you mean. However, it has a roof and three sides. We will occupy it, William."

"Yes, me lord."

The old ruin to which they had accidentally found the way was one of the relics of an ancient barbaric power, the truth concerning which is vaguely guessed at by students of today.

Inside this strange place, the entrance to which was nearly the entire open front, the stones having here fallen down, there were the charred remains of what had once been a fire, and other evidences that the natives had adopted the ancient ruin for their modern worship, even though they were ignorant of its early uses.

Lord Chugmough threw the deer down on the earthen floor.

"William," he said, "it must occur to you that we are two most fortunate men."

"Hit 'as, me lord, werry true."

"I wish, William, that our friends had not been so careless and lost themselves. Judging from present indications, we are going to have a storm, and they may be less fortunate than ourselves in finding shelter. If they had not been so reckless—if they had kept closer to us, William——"

"Yes, me lord," said William, thinking that the portly Sir Galloping Grace and others of the party would have some difficulty in keeping close up with Lord Chugmough.

"William," said the English sportsman, "to be prepared for emergencies, you had better gather some sticks while they are dry. You know, William, that we have been in similar situations before, and our greatest trouble has always been in trying to make wet sticks burn."

"Werry true, me lord; they most halways splutter some."

William began at once, just outside the solid inclosure, to gather wood, and he was none too soon, for the gale had become so furious and the sky so black that it seemed impossible for even the old ruin to remain standing, and with a sudden "boom," the rain began to fall in torrents.

The wind wailed and shrieked around the thick stone walls, and the slanting roof of thatch and hide seemed in danger of being carried away.

But the ruined temple was not more than twenty-five feet high at the highest point, and the trees that towered above it and bent before the awful blast broke its power, so that down in its sheltered spot the fastenings of the roof held good, and the interior of the old temple was dry and comfortable.

All day it rained, and at night William made a fire of a portion of the wood he had gathered, and another chunk of the appetizing venison was swung into it to roast.

All night it stormed, and torrents of water rushed down the mountain past the stone ruin, where Lord Chugmough and William slept as calmly and as peacefully as they would in their beds on board the Cheerway, or at Chugmough Heath, where, in fact, they slept most uncomfortably of all.

And another day worse than the first followed, and Lord Chugmough began to wonder if the monotony of it would last much longer.

It was the evening of the second day of the storm, and Lord Chugmough sat smoking in one corner of the stone ruin, and William was preparing the usual meal of venison, when, in the gloom, a peculiar shadow loomed up in the opening at the end. Lord Chugmough at once saw that it was a man carrying a heavy burden.

He seized his rifle and took aim.

Emerson as a Model.

Mr. D. C. French, the sculptor, tells with much relish, the story of his experiences when he was commissioned to make the bust of Ralph Waldo Emerson, which is now in Memorial hall of Harvard university. At one of the sittings, says Mr. French, Mr. Emerson rose suddenly and walked over to where the artist was working. He looked long and earnestly at the bust, and then, with an inimitably droll expression, he said: "The trouble is the more it resembles me the worse it looks." After the sculptor had finished the bust he asked Mr. Emerson to inspect it. The philosopher's opinion was characteristically terse.

"Well," he said at last, "that is the face I shave." Mr. Emerson, Mr. French relates, made one of his quaint observations about another bust, the work of another artist. It was a characterless kind of thing, and showed not the slightest hint of the Emerson character. After looking it over Emerson said:

"It looks as harmless as a parsnip, doesn't it?"

Slatin Pasha.

A most exciting career has been that of Sir Rudolph Slatin, better known as Slatin Pasha. He left Vienna, his birthplace, when a lad of 17, to become a clerk in a commercial house in Cairo, and six years later came under the notice of Gordon, who appointed him governor of Darfur. In this position he became known as "The Hammer of the Arabs," owing to his many victories over the turbulent tribes, but in 1883 he had to surrender to the Mahdi. Then began an imprisonment that lasted till 1895, when, by secret aid from the authorities at Cairo, Slatin managed to escape. The late queen had Sir Rudolf at Windsor several times to hear him relate his adventures.

Officially Confirmed.

The Washington correspondent hastily called up the cabinet officer by telephone.

"Pardon me for disturbing you, Mr. Blank," he said, "but will you please tell me whether or not the rumor that is in circulation as to your retirement is true?"

"Yes, sir," answered the cabinet officer. "It is. I was just about to retire when you called me. Good night."

THE WHITE PAINT OF THE WHITE HOUSE.

The White House at Washington, which has been the "King's Palace" of the American people since it was first occupied by President Madison in 1809, has recently undergone a thorough course of remodeling, renovation and repair. Every American citizen is owner of an undivided eighty or eighty-five millionth part of the White House, as well as of the other Public Buildings and Monuments in the Capitol City. An item in the renovation of the remodeled White House was repainting. Every visitor to Washington knows why the White House is so called—because it is literally a "white house." The exterior paint must therefore be white. Now while the pure white surfaces and simple lines of the White House, set in the midst of green lawns and beautiful trees, produce a very satisfying effect of dignified simplicity, white paint from a practical point of view, is about the most unsatisfactory kind of paint that could have been selected by the original designers. First, because any white paint is easily discolored by smoke and dust, and second, because ordinary white paint itself gradually turns gray or brownish yellow from exposure.

But white the White House is and white it must remain or it would no longer be the "White House." So the renovators, making the best of a discouraging situation, sought for the best kind of white paint procurable. The average citizen if asked to guess what kind of paint they finally decided on would probably answer—"white lead and oil," but he would guess wrongly. The paint selected as the best obtainable was a ready mixed paint, such as can be bought in any well furnished village store, such as is used by more than half of the eighty or eighty-five million owners of the White House on their own homes. That one brand of mixed paint was used instead of another is a mere accidental detail—there are fifty or a hundred brands on the market that might have been selected in other circumstances, and in fact, a different brand was used in painting the Capitol.

Every property owner, therefore, who paints his house with a high grade ready-mixed paint is following the example set by the Government Authorities at Washington, who used ready-mixed paint, because they could find nothing else as good.

A Close Shave.

A little girl asked her mother if there were any men in heaven.

"Mamma," she said, "I never saw a picture of a nangel with a beard or a mustache. Do men ever go to heaven?"

"Oh, yes," replied her mother, "men go to heaven, but it's always by a close shave."

WILL FIGHT BIG OIL OCTOPUS.

Independents Prepare to Invade North Dakota.

The threatened invasion of this territory by the independent oil companies is causing much discussion. The unpopularity of the Rockefeller output and the reduced rates granted by the railroads on shipments in less than carload lots is thought to make this field a desirable one for the men anxious to buck the big octopus. Representatives of three independent concerns have been here and one is said to have secured a site and sidetrack privileges from the Great Northern.

REPAIRING BRAIN.

A Certain Way by Food.

Every minister, lawyer, journalist, physician, author or business man is forced under pressure of modern conditions to the active and sometimes overactive use of the brain.

Analysis of the excreta thrown out by the pores shows that brain work breaks down the phosphate of potash, separating it from its heavier companion, albumen, and plain common sense teaches that this elemental principle must be introduced into the body anew each day, if we would replace the loss and rebuild the brain tissue.

We know that the phosphate of potash, as presented in certain field grains, has an affinity for albumen and that is the only way gray matter in the brain can be built. It will not answer to take the crude phosphate of potash of the drug shop, for nature rejects it. The elementary mineral must be presented through food directly from nature's laboratory.

These facts have been made use of in the manufacture of Grape-Nuts, and any brain worker can prove the value of the proper selection of food by making free use of Grape-Nuts for ten days or two weeks. Sold by grocers everywhere (and in immense quantities). Manufactured by the Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

SCIENCE AND INDUSTRY

According to La Nature, American museums of natural history are remarkable for their restorations of vanished types. European museums lacking such interesting exhibits.

Residents in Edinburgh are much perturbed by the discovery that their water supply is polluted by the presence of a living organism, white in color, but described from its shape and general appearance as "a water flea."

Many of the Belgian papers dwell upon the necessity for good milk as a preventive against sickness, reports Consul McNally, of Liege. He states that many experiments have been made there on the absorbing qualities of milk, and that the Belgian department of agriculture is urging greater care in handling cows, and for sanitary stables, etc.

Hydrophobia, which has practically been stamped out in England, still flourishes in most Continental countries. Germany tops the list with an annual average of 2682 dogs and cats destroyed for this reason, while the figures of France are 2263. In Belgium, Switzerland and Holland cases of hydrophobia are rare, the total for all three countries combined being under fifty.

Another has just been added to the list of the world's recovered mammoths. It has been found at Terdonck, in Belgium, during the cutting for the Terneuzen Canal, and was met with at thirty-three feet below the surface. The skeleton was entirely complete. The pieces first struck by the drag included the sacrum, a piece of the mascillary, a femur and a tusk thirty-nine inches in length.

In riveting with pneumatic hammers, two men and one heater average 500 rivets in ten hours, whereas by hand 250 rivets is a good day's work for three men and one heater. The cost per rivet, according to the Engineering and Mining Journal, was 1.62 cents by pneumatic hammer, and 3.68 cents by hand. On 93,480 rivets in a shipyard at Chicago the machine cost was 1 cent to 3.5 cents, the hand cost 2.5 cents to 4.5 cents.—Scientific American.

Germany claims to be making wonderful progress in the adoption of wireless methods of communications for inland purposes. Several stations exist already, and another has quite recently been established at Oberschoneweide, which is to place Berlin and Dresden in communication over a distance of 111 miles. There are also reports that Germany is about to make a most remarkable step in advance of all the rest of the world in the installation at Nordeich, in Frisia, of long-distance telephoning by a wireless system.

The radium treatment of rabies is discussed in the Centralblatt fur Bakteriologie of Jena, Germany. A number of laboratory animals were inoculated with the rabies virus and subsequently treated with radium rays. At the time of the report, which was two months subsequent to the inoculation, the animals were considered cured. It was found that 10,000 radio-active units applied directly upon the eye of inoculated rabbits had the same effect whether the applications were continued for eight hours, or whether eight applications were made of one hour each. It is claimed that these studies show that the rabies virus is rapidly decomposed by radium rays and modified into very effective vaccine toward rabies.

Caught Napping.

"It pays sometimes to have the right kind of lawyer," remarked W. T. Purdy, a well-known mining man of the Northwest, at the Palace Hotel. "I was a witness in a case a few weeks ago in Seattle in which a colored man was seeking damages for permanent injuries sustained in an accident to an elevator which he was running. The plaintiff claimed that he had been maimed for life by being permanently deprived of the free use of his right arm. Although the accident had happened months before, his arm was still crippled, and he was unable to raise it above his waist. He explained all this with much feeling and earnestness during his direct examination. Then the attorney for the owner of the building took him in hand.

"'Show us how high you can raise your arm,' said the attorney.

"And the defendant feebly raised his arm a few inches.

"'Now show us how high you could raise your arm before you were injured,' pursued the attorney.

"And the defendant unhesitatingly and unthinkingly raised the crippled arm high above his head, thus knocking his damage claim skyward with one eloquent gesture."—San Francisco Chronicle.

Smokers' Contest.

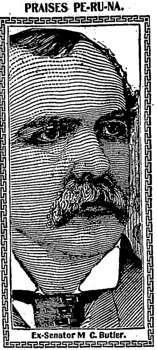
UNITED STATES SENATOR FROM SOUTH CAROLINA PRAISES PE-RU-NA.



Ex-Senator M C. Butler.

Dyspepsia Is Often Caused By Catarrh of the Stomach—Peruna Relieves Catarrh of the Stomach and Is Therefore a Remedy For Dyspepsia.

Hon. M. C. Butler, Ex-U. S. Senator from South Carolina for two terms, in a letter from Washington, D. C., writes to the Peruna Medicine Co., as follows:

"I can recommend Peruna for dyspepsia and stomach trouble. I have been using your medicine for a short period and I feel very much relieved. It is indeed a wonderful medicine, besides a good tonic."

CATARRH of the stomach is the correct name for most cases of dyspepsia. In order to cure catarrh of the stomach the catarrh must be eradicated. Only an internal catarrh remedy, such as Peruna, is available. Peruna exactly meets the indications.

Revised Formula.

"For a number of years requests have come to me from a multitude of grateful friends urging that Peruna be given a slight laxative quality. I have been experimenting with a laxative addition for quite a length of time, and now feel gratified to announce to the friends of Peruna that I have incorporated such a quality in the medicine which, in my opinion, can only enhance its well-known beneficial character.

The Will and the Way.

"No," snapped the woman with the square chin, "I don't want no burglar alarms."

"Then the lady next door was right, I suppose," rejoined the agent as he turned to go.

"What did she say?" queried the square-chinned female, somewhat eagerly.

"Oh, she didn't say very much," answered the agent. "After purchasing two of the alarms she said it would be a waste of time to stop here, as you had nothing worth stealing."

"The impudent thing!" exclaimed the other, indignantly. "Here, give me half a dozen of them alarms."

Young Wife—No, indeed.

Her Mother—You silly little goose. Why don't you read the riot act to him?

Young Wife—You seem to have forgotten that George is a professional humorist.

Her Mother—What has that got to do with it?

Young Wife—Why, when he comes home early he always insists on reading his jokes to me.

Branded as a Deserter.

Brantley Willis, a former railroad man of Fargo, enlisted in the regular army at the local station. He was ordered to Snelling and given transportation, with permission to spend a day or two with St. Paul friends before reporting. He used the ticket, but never reached the fort, and is now down on the local books as a deserter. Two others, one of whom was captured in South Dakota, failed to reach proper destination.

When do waters become like the wicked of the earth? When damned.

When is a street car like a man's boot being repaired? When the last is in.

When is a meal like a stylish bather's costume? When skimpy.

Another Version.

Jack was just about to build his famous house.

"Why don't you get some men to help you?" asked the curious friend.

"No, sir," replied Jack, "they would call a strike on me before the house was finished. I'll build it myself."

Thus we know why the house was called "the house that Jack built."

AN EVERY-DAY STRUGGLE.

Men and Women of Every Occupation Suffer Miseries from Kidney Complaint.

J. C. Lightner, 703 So. Cedar St., Abilene, Kansas, is one of the thousands who suffer from kidney troubles brought on by daily work. "I first noticed it eight or ten years ago," said Mr. Lightner. "The dull pain in the back fairly made me sick. It was hard to get up or down, hard to straighten, hard to do any work that brought a strain on the back. I had frequent attacks of gravel and the urine was passed too often and with pain. When I used Doan's Kidney Pills, however, all traces of the trouble disappeared and have not returned. I am certainly grateful."

Are You Tired, Nervous and Sleepless?

Nervousness and sleeplessness are usually due to the fact that the nerves are not fed on properly nourishing blood; they are starved nerves. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery makes pure, rich blood, and thereby the nerves are properly nourished and all the organs of the body are run as smoothly as machinery which runs in oil. In this way you feel clean, strong and strenuous—you are toned up and invigorated, and you are good for a whole lot of physical or mental work. Best of all, the strength and increase in vitality and health are lasting.

The trouble with most tonics and medcines which have a large, booming sale for a short time, is that they are largely composed of alcohol holding the drugs in solution. This alcohol shrinks up the red blood corpuscles, and in the long run greatly injures the system. One may feel exhilarated and better for the time being, yet in the end weakoned and with vitality decreased. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery contains no alcohol. Every bottle of it bears upon its wrapper The Badge of Honesty, in a full list of all its several ingredients. For the druggist to offer you something he claims is "just as good" is to insult your intelligence.

Every ingredient entering into the world-famed "Golden Medical Discovery" has the unanimous approval and endorsement of the leading medical authorities of all the several schools of practice. No other medicine sold through druggists for like purposes has any such endorsement.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" not only produces all the good effects to be obtained from the use of Golden Seal root, in all stomach, liver and bowel troubles, as in dyspepsia, billiousness, constipation, ulceration of stomach and bowels and kindred ailments, but the Golden Seal root used in its compounding is greatly enhanced in its curative action by other ingredients such as Stone root, Black Cherrybark, Bloodroot, Mandrake root and chemically pure triple-refined glycerine.

"The Common Sense Medical Adviser," is sent free in paper covers on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps to pay the cost of mailing only. For 31 stamps the cloth-bound volume will be sent. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Irish Wit.

Once upon a time an Irishman and a Yankee were riding along together. They happend to pass a gallows and the Yankee asked: "Where would you be, friend ,if the gallows had all that is due to it?" "Sure, an' I'd be ridin' meself to-day, sor," answered the witty son of Erin.

Once upon a time an Irish horse dealer sold to a man a mare that he assured the purchaser was "sound in mind and limb and without fault." After the mare's new oner took her home he found the animal was blind in one eye and could scarcely see with the other. Returning to the Irishman, he protested, saying: "You assured me the mare was without fault, and I find her blind of an eye."

To this the ready Irishman made answer: "Sure, an' the poor critter's blindness is not her fault, but her misfortune, soir."

The After-Glow.

BY STELLA MAY COFFIN.

(Copyright, 1906, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

The slant rays of an afternoon sun turned the brook to a golden tracery on an emerald background; slowly crept over the gentle slopes of the golf ground and peeped into the rustic summer house. Then they danced in an coquetted with the woman sitting on the bench till growing bolder they turned her hair to burnished copper.

The light and shade cast by the lattice played fantastically over her face and figure and threw dark shadows around the feet of the man beside her.

The two sat in silence for several moments; the man's voice breaking the drowsy stillness called the woman's gaze away from the sky line of the distant hills.

"Why should we care what the world says? It's code of ethics is warped and inconsistent. The modifying circumstances of an act determine its moral character. Those circumstances the world seldom knows and, even should it know, would not care to understand. When the evidence is all in and the Great Judge prepares to bring in His verdict of "Guilty" or "Not Guilty," I feel sure that He will take into account all the extenuating circumstances. Is your loveless marriage sanctified in the eyes of God simply because it has been legalized in the eyes of man? Your husband knows only the desire of possession; I love you with the complete trinity of body, mind and soul. Am I sinning because I love a woman who has made a misstep? Does God brand her a criminal because she returns that love? For one mistake will He forever shut us from Arcady? No! No! Such a belief would be a libel on the goodness of God."

His voice had risen in the intensity of his appeal, but the last words ended almost in a sob.

"You are sacrificing your self-respect. Do not high ideals count for anything? Where are yours? Trailed in the mire of soul-shrivelling sensualism, created and fostered by the races, the gaming table and the companionship of dissolute men and women. To me, you are an inspiration; my 'Pillar of Fire.' Together we shall begin anew; the best and noblest shall be ours. You are the one woman—mia carissima!"

He lingered over the words of endearment; his very tone an involuntary caress, but in no way did he try to play on the emotional side of the woman's nature. He was a just advocate seeking to present his case from an ethical standpoint.

"You say your husband refuses to divorce you. My yacht lies in the harbor; at a word from you she shall spread her wings. We—"

On the threshold stood a little lad. Simultaneously their eyes wandered from the tangled curls down over the ridiculously short expanse of bare, sun-browned legs and stopped at the dusty socks wrinkled down over the tiny sandals. He held a huge bunch of daisies in his arm. Entirely unabashed, he returned their look of surprise steadily.

"I was sure I would find you here," he began. "I followed you over the fields and brought you these daisies because you have no little boy; I was sorry for you."

The woman caught the child in her arms and strained him to her yearningly. His dusty little feet strayed at will over the skirt of her green linen gown.

"Thank you," she said simply, one of the rare smiles reserved for children illumining her face. "But tell me, dear, why you were sorry for me."

"Last night," the child began, nestling contentedly into the curve of her arm, "I heard father and mother talking of you, after I had gone to bed. I couldn't hear all they said, but I understood mother to say you had hurt yourself. Did you bump your head? (with a sudden inspiration) 'cause if you did, I know just how horrid you feel. I bumped mine once and it hurt and hurt ever so many nights. After it stopped hurting the ugly scar stayed just the same."

"The scar, John," the woman's head dropped lower and lower; a painful silence fell on the little company. The lad slipped down, and, kissing her hand, sped away over the hills. The child's quick intuition had perceived the strain of the situation.

The man rose and raised the woman's averted face to his, until their eyes met. He was the first to break the spell which held them.

"God sends revelations even in these days. We have entertained one of His angels unawares." His voice was tender and strangely softened. "Weighed in the balance and almost found wanting. The 'Grey Gull' shall sail to-morrow and I—I must be her only passenger. Forgive me, dear. I did not think about the scar."

He enfolded her trembling hands in his firm, strong ones and gazed into the deep, steady glow of her eyes. His own were very bright with unshed tears as he said, "Good-night; God bless you."

"The daisies," she whispered softly, carefully dividing the cluster of flowers beside her and extending half of them towards him shyly.

He took them reverently; a new, sweet diffidence had suddenly sprung up between them. His eyes traveled from her well-poised head in its frame of shining hair, to her feet, clad in their stout little Oxfords. He even noticed, his throat contracting sharply, the perky little bows of her wide silk lacings. Then he turned and walked steadfastly away; his shoulders erect, his face turned toward the setting sun.

The woman watched him until he disappeared around the curve in the road. Her hands idly folded in her lap, she saw the shadows deepen around her one by one. Her eyes feasted on the wonderful after-glow of the sunset; she saw a new significance in the faint ambers and dusky violets, which were superseding the flaring oranges and fiery reds.

When the west was veiled in a cloud of fleecy mist, the evening star came out and the pale crescent of the moon rose over the horizon. A wondrous quiet settled on the hills and vales; a soothing peace stole over her, and, sinking on her knees, she hid her face in the brown-eyed daises and gave thanks to God for the "Afterglow."

WAS A "GRAND OLD MAN".

Passing of the Foremost Citizen and Scholar of the Argentine Republic.

On the 19th of January, 1906, the "Grand Old Man" of the Argentine Republic, the Washington of his country, Gen. Mitre, passed from the scene of his 85 years of laborious and glorious record. His biography is the political history of the Argentine Republic during the last half of the nineteenth century, writes Jennie Howard, Buenos Ayres, in Boston Transcript.

A pure-hearted, brave, simple, honest man, whose patriotism was the inspiration and mainspring of his life, he is mourned to-day, not alone by his own country, which owes its life as a nation to him, but by the sister republics of South America, for whose liberty and welfare he was ever ready to sacrifice his fortune, his ambitions, and life itself.

He was a historian, and his histories of San Martin and Belgrano are everywhere admitted to be true monuments of his erudition and distinguished literary ability. He was a poet, and a translator from English, French and Italian. Dante's "Inferno" and Victor Hugo's "Ruy Blas" being among his most famous translations. His translation of "Gray's "Elegy" and Longfellow's "Psalm of Life" are among his finest translations of shorter poems.

From an early period of his life, Gen. Mitre had the distinction of being elected a member of the leading literary and scientific institutions of the world. These included the Geological Society of Berlin, the Scandinavian Royal Antiquarian society, the Historical Institute of France, the Royal Academy of Science and Art of Spain, the Academy of Sciences of Lisbon, Historical Society of Rhode Island, U. S. A., and was granted the high honor of the "Insigne Artistica Congregazione de Virtuosi al Pantheon," besides being a member of many similar societies in Europe and the South American republic. There is neither time nor space for a list of the literary works of Gen. Mitre, nor the honors showered upon him from all parts of the civilized world.

THE INDIAN PRODIGAL.

He, Instead of the Fatted Calf, Was the Object of Paternal Severity.

Solomon Homer, the brilliant Choctaw Indian, said at his home in Caddo that he needed to be a very intelligent and industrious Indian who would go out into the world and make a name, relates the Kansas City Journal.

"Many Indians," he said, "go out into the world and some of them, of course, succeed. Those who fail return home; and that is a sad returning, for every one sneers at the young man whom the world has conquered and driven back.

"There was Black Eagle, a Choctaw He went to Chicago, failed and came back home. But he was afraid to go to his father's house till an old man said:

"'Are you going to your father's, Black Eagle?'

"'I don't know,' answered the youth

"'Go there,' said the old man, 'for you will be very welcome. There is no doubt of it.'

"Heartened a little, Black Eagle did go to his father's, and the next day he met the old man again.

"The old man smiled kindly.

"'So the prodigal returned,' he said. 'And did your father kill the fatted calf?'

"'No,' Black Eagle answered, 'he didn't kill the fatted calf, but he nearly killed the prodigal.'"

UNSOPHISTICATED BRIDE.

Didn't Want the Chickens Killed Unless They Were Perfectly Fresh.

Harvard's football coach, W. T. Reid, Jr., was talking about the danger of overtraining and the staleness that overtraining brings, relates the New York Tribune.

"What, precisely, is staleness?" a freshman asked.

Mr. Reid smiled.

"Don't you know what it is to be stale?" he said. "Well, it is time you learned. You are as bad as the girl a friend of mine married last October.

"This girl, a few days after she had set up housekeeping went to a poultry dealer's and said:

"Have you any fresh roasting chickens?"

"'Have I?' said the dealer. 'Well, madam, just look here'.

"And he showed her his back yard, crowded with handsome live chickens that had just come in from his farm in the country.

"'How many do you want, madam?' he said. 'I'll kill them and send them up to you.'

"'I want two if they're fresh,' the bride answered. 'But don't kill them unless you're positively sure of their freshness. My husbnd will only eat fresh chicken.'"

HE WENT ON CRUTCHES

All Medicines Failed Until Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Cured His Rheumatism.

"Some years ago." says Mr. W. H. Clark, a printer, living at 612 Buchanan street, Topeka, Kans., "I had a bad attack of rheumatism and could not seem to get over it. All sorts of medicines failed to do me any good and my trouble kept getting worse. My feet were so swollen that I could not wear shoes and I had to go on crutches. The pain was terrible.

"One day I was setting the type of an article for the paper telling what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills had done for a man afflicted as I was and I was so impressed with it that I determined to give the medicine a trial. For a year my rheumatism had been growing worse, but after taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I began to improve. The pain and swelling all disappeared and I can truthfully say that I haven't felt better in the past twenty years than I do right now. I could name, off hand, a half-dozen people who have used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills at my suggestion and who have received good results from them."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are guaranteed to be safe and harmless to the most delicate constitution. They contain no morphine, opiate, narcotic, nor anything to cause a drug habit. They do not act on the bowels but they actually make new blood and strengthen the nerves.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure rheumatism because they make rich, red blood and no man or woman can have healthy blood and rheumatism at the same time. They have also cured many cases of anæmia, neuralgia, sciatica, partial paralysis, locomotor ataxia and other diseases that have not yielded to ordinary treatment.

All druggists sell Dr. Williams' Pink Pills or they will be sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

WORST CASE OF ECZEMA.

Spread Rapidly Over Body—Limbs and Arms Had to Be Bandaged—Marvelous Cure by Cuticura.

"My son, who is now twenty-two years of age, when he was four months old began to have eczema on his face, spreading quite rapidly until he was nearly covered. We had all the doctors around us, and some from larger places, but no one helped him a particle. The eczema was something terrible, and the doctors said it was the worst case they ever saw. At times his whole body and face were covered, all but his feet. I had to bandage his limbs and arms; his scalp was just dreadful. A friend teased me to try Cuticura, and I began to use all three of the Cuticura Remedies. He was better in two months, and in six months he was well. Mrs. R. L. Risley, Piermont, N. THREE FACTS

For Sick Women To Consider

FIRST.—That almost every operation in our hospitals performed upon women becomes necessary through neglect of such symptoms as backache, irregular and painful periods, displacements of the female organs, pain in the side, burning sensation in the stomach, bearing-down pains, nervousness, dizziness and sleeplessness.

SECOND.—The medicine that holds the record for the largest number of absolute cures of female ills is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It regulates, strengthens and cures diseases of the female organism as nothing else can.

For thirty years it has been helping women to be strong, curing backache, nervousness, kidney troubles, inflammation of the female organs, weakness and displacements, regulating the periods perfectly and overcoming their pains. It has also proved itself invaluable in preparing women for childbirth and the change of life.

THIRD.—The great volume of unsolicited and grateful testimonials on file at the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., many of which are from time to time published by permission, give absolute evidence of the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Mrs. Pinkham's advice.

Mrs. Pinkham's Standing Invitation to Women.—Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. All letters are received, opened, read and answered by women only. From symptoms given, your trouble may be located and the quickest and surest way of recovery advised. Mrs. Pinkham is daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham and for twenty-five years under her direction and since her decease she has been advising sick women free of charge. Out of the vast volume of experience in treating female ills Mrs. Pinkham probably has the very knowledge that will help your case. Surely, any woman, rich or poor, is very foolish if she does not take advantage of this generous offer of assistance.

MISSIONARY WORK.

In another column will be found an article by the Rev. Mr. Knox, in which he argues cogently and well in behalf of the exceptons he takes to what the COURIER did not say. The COURIER did not indorse the Brahmim priests attack on foreign missions and the comment of the COURIER, read understandingly, cannot be tortured into an indorsement. For a better understanding, the comment of a week ago is here quoted:

> This is expert testimony from a country that has been the subject of much missionary invasion and aligns itself with the opinion of many laymen who have ever entertained a doubt either as to the efficacy or wisdom of foreign missionary work when there is such a vast field which remains uncultivated within our own country.

Now let us take up Mr. Knox's exceptions seriatim.

First, the Brahmim isn't competent to give expert testimony. Did the COURIER say he was competent? But merely for the sake of argument if a man upon whom an experiment is being tried is not in a position to give expert testimony as to wheather or not it is agreeable to him, then the COURIER doesn't know the meaning of the phrase. We admit that expert testimony is not necessarily conclusive. The Brahmim may be wrong in every statement he made, the COURIER hasn't pretended to concern itself with that for an instance, but that he must be considered an expert in those matters that affect him personally may be intelligently re-asserted.

Second, Mr. Knox protests that there is no reasonable doubt either as to the efficacy or wisdom of foreign missionary work. Stick a pin where the COURIER says there is, it isn't to be found in the office copy. Read it again, the testimony of the Brahim "aligns itself with the opinion of many laymen who have ever entartained a doubt." Will Mr. Knox, or any one else, assert there never was a man who entertained a doubt? If so, the COURIER will admit its error without proof. Let Mr. Knox go forth into the world and inquire of the men he meets. Will he find "many laymen entertaining a doubt?" He will. And that was every bit the COURIER said on that score.

Third. Mr. Knox protests there is no vast field which remains uncultivated within our own country. The COURIER didn't say there was. That statement was given as a part of the opinion of many laymen and there is no suggestion, except on Mr. Knox's part, that the editor of the COURIER is one of them.

Mr. Knox's controversy is with the Brahmin, not with the COURIER. Yet on the whole the COURIER is well pleased with its comments for it has been the means of bringing forth a most able exposition of a subject that there is very little general knowledge of.

The Question of Foreign Missions.

To the Editor of the COURIER:—

I notice with deep regret that you endorse in your editorial of May 3rd an attack upon Foreign Missions, made recently by a Brahmin missionary in Kansas City. The Christian church is a missionary church, always has been and always will be. This is today the position of all branches of the Protestant church, and I understand is also the position of the Roman Catholic church as well. An attack, therefore, upon Foreign Missions is an attempt to thrust a dagger into the heart of the church.

I do not ask for space for an extended defense of Foreign Missions nor even to answer the charges of the Brahmin, except incidentally, but I do wish to protest against three mistatements in your editorial comment:

First, the Brahmin missionary is not competent to give "expert testimony" as you affirm, because he betrays his ignorance of essential facts, because he can not reason accurately, and finally because he is prejudiced. His ignorance is manifest in his statement that "there were no famines, no plague in India, before England's invasion." Johnson's Cyclopedia in a list of the "most famines of history" gives the following dates: Ghor, India, 1052-1060 A. D.; Deccan, India, 1344 A. D.; India (Asia generally) 1631 A. D. The English occupation of India dates from the battle of Plassey, in 1757 A. D. Therefore before the English came, we have three great famines, one of which lasted eight years. The Brahmin also states "the country does not exist where missionaries have been that is prosperous." He is either ignorant of the prosperity of Japan, or is he ignorant that Japan "has been subject to much missionary invasion." These two errors prove the Brahmin either an ignorant man or a "bluffer." In either case he is not competent to speak as an "expert" upon any subject.

Further an "expert" should be able to interpret facts correctly, and should be able to assign reasonable causes, when he attempts to argue. Now the Brahmin affirms that there are no countries where missionaries have been that are prosperous, and he implies that the presence of missionaries is the sole cause, or at least the chief cause, for the lack of prosperity. What about the degrading immorality of heathenism? What about the vices of civilization which have been carried by soldiers and traders into every heathen country? What about the slave trade in Africa? The opium traffic forced upon China by England? What about the liquor traffic, which has cursed every country, Christian and pagan? What about the caste system, which has paralyzed India for twenty centuries? What about the destructive wars of conquest, waged by European nations? Are the missionaries responsible for all these things? Certainly the Brahmin is no "philosopher," although he demands that Christian missionaries should be.

The statement just referred, shows also the Brahmin's prejudice. He is no more entitled to give "expert testimony" about the work of Christian missionaries in India, than the priests and Pharisses were able to give impartial testimony about the teaching and character of Jesus Christ. Knowing that you are a lawyer as well as an editor, I am surprised that you should give much weight to the testimony of a prejudiced witness; I am amazed that you should speak of a prejudiced man, who betrays his ignorance in his own statements, as competent to give "expert testimony."

Second, I protest that there is no reasonable "doubt either as to the efficacy or wisdom of foreign missionary work." It would require all the space in this paper to recount the triumphs of Foreign Missions in the last century alone. I will mention only a few of the most notable. The African slave trade was practically crushed by two foreign missionaries, David Livingstone and Henry M. Stanley, whom our Brahmin friend would call "senseless" no doubt. The cannibals of the South Sea islands, once a terror to ship-wrecked sailors, have been converted, have forsaken their barbarism, and now assemble in their own churches and welcome travellers and sailors to the sacrament. In India mothers no longer throw their babes to the alligators in the Ganges, nor are widows burned alive with the bodies of their husbands, according to the teachings of the religion, the Brahmins would "like to export." It is needless to extend this list, for these triumphs prove the efficacy. As to numerical results, Johnson's Cyclopedia, states that in 1891 there were 2,284,380 Christians in India after less than a century of missionary work. There can be no more eloquent testimony to the efficacy of missions in India, than the following quoted from a leaflet of the Hindu tract society: "They have cast their net over our children by teaching them in our schools, and they have already made thousands of Christians, and are continuing to do so. They have penetrated the most out-of-the-way villages and built churches there. If we continue to sleep as we have done in the past, not one will be found worshipping in the temples in a very short time; nay, temples themselves will be converted into Christian churches." That is the way Brahmins attack Christianity at home, but they are compelled to confess the success of missionary work.

In regard to the wisdom of Foreign Missionary Work, which you have called in question, I will not emphasize the divine imperative: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature," which is sufficient for every Christian, But I would like to remind you that when this command was given, our own ancestors, the Celts, the Saxons, and the Teutons, were all barbarians worshipping idols with human sacrifice. The missionary invasions of the early Roman church were the chief, if not the sole canse of their moral uplift. Let the man who doubts the wisdom of Foreign Missions go and live as the heathen live in India; he is unworthy of the benefits of a Christian civilization. Furthermore, Christianity must be a missionary religion, must evangelize the Orient, or the Orient will one day paganize America. If space permitted I would gladly submit proofs from history for this assertion.

Third, I protest that there is no "vast field which remains uncultivated within our own country," as you state. I admit there are many in every community, who deliberately and persistently reject Christianity. "There are none so deaf as those who will not hear." But if you will kindly point out to me any community, which missionaries do not visit, or any class of people, for whom special effort has not been made, or any nationality, who do not receive the Gospel in their own tongue, I will gladly call the attention of the church to the opportunity. I can assure you that we are looking for just openings. The Protestant church has missions among the Chinese, the Japanese and the Arabians, and no doubt the Roman Catholic church has also. We are working in the mining camps and in the lumber camps; among the Indians and the Negroes. We are carrying on special work among criminals and in the slums. Special study is now being given to the problems of the laboring men, and noonday services are being held in shops to reach "the man with the dinner pail." Evangelists are even holding meetings in saloons to reach the men who won't come to church. Therefore if the COURIER can suggest any "field," however small, "which remains uncultivated within our own country," the writer will be most grateful, and will do all in his power to meet the need, and he will be happy to receive a contribution for this new work from the COURIER. Thanking you for the use of space in your paper, I am

Respectfully yours,
—HERBERT W. KNOX,
Pastor of Presbyterian Church.

$8.50 PUNCTURE-PROOF TIRES ONLY $4.80 PER PAIR

Regular Price $8.50 per pair. To Introduce We Will Sell You a Sample Pair for Only $4.80

NAILS, TACKS OR GLASS WON'T LET OUT THE AIR

(CASH WITH ORDER $4.55)

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES.

Result of 15 years experience in tire making. No danger from THORNS, CACTUS, PINS, NAILS, TACKS or GLASS. Serious punctures, like intentional knife cuts, can be vulcanized like any other tire.

Two Hundred Thousand pairs now in actual use. Over Seventy-five Thousand pairs sold last year.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. That "Holding Back" sensation commonly felt when riding on asphalt or soft roads is overcome by the patent "Basket Weave" tread which prevents all air from being squeezed out between the tire and the road thus overcoming all suction. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C.O.D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. We will also send one nickel plated brass hand pump and two Sampson metal puncture closers on full paid orders (these metal puncture closers to be used in case of intentional knife cuts or heavy gashes). Tires to be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination.

We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. Ask your Postmaster, Banker, Express or Freight Agent or the Editor of this paper about us. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a small trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

COASTER-BRAKES, built-up-wheels, saddles, pedals, parts and repairs, and everything in the bicycle line are sold by us at half the usual prices charged by dealers and repair men. Write for our big SUNDRY catalogue.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

CONTAGIOUS BLOOD POISON
THE WORST DISEASE IN THE WORLD

Contagious Blood Poison is the worst disease in the world; not only those who contract it suffer, but the awful taint is often transmitted to innocent offspring whose lives are blighted and bodies diseased because the virus of Contagious Blood Poison has been allowed to remain in the family blood. The first sign of this disease is usually a little pimple or blister, then a red rash breaks out, the mouth and throat ulcerate, the hair comes out, copper colored spots appear on the limbs, back and breast; and as the disease more thoroughly pollutes the blood, sores and ulcers form and if the trouble is not checked the finger nails drop off, and the soft bones of the nose and head are destroyed. S. S. S. goes down into the blood and forces out every particle of the poison and makes a complete and lasting cure. As soon as the system gets under the influence of the remedy the symptoms begin to pass away, and when the cure is complete the patient is left in perfect health. So thoroughly does S. S. S. rid the system of the virus that no signs of the disease are ever seen in after years, and posterity is born with a rich, pure blood supply. Book with complete instructions for home treatment and any medical advice desired will be given without charge.

I contracted Contagious Blood Poison by using a towel used by some infected person and had every symptom of the vile disorder. I tried everything I heard of but the disease got worse until I heard of S. S. S. which I commenced, and continued the treatment until I was entirely well. This was some time ago and I have never seen the slightest sign of the disease since. JOS. SCHLOEMER.

Halvor Starndvolt of Thief River Falls has had a Lewiston, Pa., girl, named Miss Edna Kirk, arrested on a charge of having used the mails to fleece him under promise of marriage. He alleages that he answered the matrimonial advertisement of Miss Kirk and that after an exchange of several letters he proposed and was accepted. She wrote that she did not have the money to come to him and he thereupon sent her $24. He never heard from her again.

An action has been commenced in the district court by the Wylie Farmers Elevator company against the Great Northern to compel the road to allow the construction of an elevator on its right of way at Wylie. Until a year ago there were two elevators at Wylie but they were removed, as the petition alleges, at the request of the company and the company has refused to allow the Wylie Farmers Elevator company to erect their building. On Friday an order to show cause was served on the Great Northern and a hearing will be held in this city within a few days.

Joseph Mathews, deputy treasurer of Polk county, who defaulted in 1897 to the extent of about $6,000 and who was supposed to have died in London a year later, is reliably living in one of the larger cities of the United States. It is also said he wishes to return to Crookston, make good his defalcations and begin life over again. From these facts a peculiar condition arises. With indisputable proofs of his death, Mrs. Mathews collected $5,000 life insurance and later married a former sweetheart with whom she is now living and has raised a family of children.

We have all lost friends and acquaintances from appendicitis. So closely has the surgeon's knife become identified with this disease that people have been led to believe that there is no cure without operation. Such was the case until Dr. Conrad Adler of Berlin, Germany, perfected a treatment for the prevention and cure of appendicitis. We have secured the agency for Dr. Adler's Treatment for this city. Ask for a free copy of Dr. Adler's illustrated book telling how to cure and prevent appendicitis.—W. A. Schrieter.

At the Capital.

A new and important source of prosperity to Turkey consists in large amounts of cash sent by Macedonian emigrants from the United States to their families, reports Consular Agent Lazzaro from Salonica. This income is estimated at $1,500,000 annually and is increasing.

The house military committee has ordered favorable report on the bill awarding medals of honor on volunteer soldiers who remained in the Philippines after the declaration of peace with Spain. Among those who will receive medals if this bill passes are members of the Thirteenth Minnesota, First North Dakota and First South Dakota regiments.

A bill amending the existing laws relative to notices of land entries so as to require that papers in which they are printed shall be in the county or district in which the lands are located, was passed by the senate. Mr. Spooner then resumed his speech on the railroad rate bill, again taking up the question of the distinction between judicial power and jurisdiction.

Crimes and Criminals.

Mrs. Mary McKittrick of Uniontown, Pa., who recently celebrated her 108th birthday, committed suicide by cutting her throat with a small knife.

When called upon to pay for a 30-cent breakfast which he had eaten in a restaurant at Ottumwa, Iowa, an unidentified man drew a revolver and was killed after a running fight with the police.

Robbers entered the general store of Becker Bros., at Columbus, Ohio, removed the safe, weighing 1,000 pounds, rolled it along a road three blocks away, pried it open and took $500 and a certified check for $2,000.

The body of Walter W. Somers, missing cashier of the International bank of Hulls, Ill., was found in the cellar of a residence adjoining his own. He disappeared April 14, leaving a deficit of $2,200 in his accounts.

Samuel L. Bennett, a banker of Robinson, Ill., was attacked by Mrs Nora Plunkett, a domestic. Mr. Bennett was asleep in his room when the woman attacked him with a razor. The woman accused Bennett of wronging her. He will recover.

Theodore Flack, a native of North Dakota, where his brother resides, committed suicide in the Fernte hotel at Winnipeg, taking carbolic acid. He had been a resident of Montana for years and was a member of the Eagles. He was thirty years of age.

George Drinkwater, who recently came from Chicago and caused the arrest of his wife and brother Edward, charging them with having fled to San Francisco with $14,000 of his money, has notified the police that he would not press the charge. The couple were consequently released.

William A. Brewer, Jr., formerly president of the Washington Life Insurance company, has been indicted by the grand jury at New York for alleged perjury. The charge grows out of a report to the state superintendent of insurance in 1903 regarding the condition of the company.

The Roswell, N. M., grand jury, which has been investigating alleged land frauds, has returned four indictments against each of the following persons: Chester L. Tallmadge and E. R. Tallmadge, Chicago; R. F. Tallmadge, Denver; Karl C. Young and John H. McKinstry, Kansas City.

Jacob Mettlock, a baker, aged fifty years, wound up a spree at Great Falls, Mont., by taking his life by drinking carbolic acid. He once ran one of the principal bakeries in St. Paul, but is said to have lost his business through drink. He came to Great Falls twelve years ago. He is survived by a large family.

Gov. Terrell of Georgia has granted further respite to J. G. Rawlings and his two sons, Milton and Jesse, who were to have been hanged Friday. The extension is until June 8, to give time for a final appeal to the state prison commission. The Rawlings were convicted of the murder of the two children of W. I. Carter.

Casualties.

Jacob Edwards' farm house, fifteen miles north of Manitique, Mich., burned. Nearly all the furniture burned. Loss, $1,800; no insurance.

Herman Johnston, the three-year-old son of Gustav Johnston, of Des Moines found a sack of peanuts and two packages of gum. He promptly ate them and died a few hours later, the mess having clogged in his stomach.

The government tug Mina was rammed by the submarine torpedo boat Porpoise, during maneuvers in Coddington cove, at Newport, R. I., and the tug was forced to run full speed for the shore to escape sinking.

While driving from Postville, Iowa, to his home, eight miles north, in an intoxicated condition, George Bull, aged about seventy years, fell from his buggy and struck on his head, breaking his neck, death resulting a half hour later.

Eight unconscious men were taken out of the McAdoo tunnel under the Hudson river, connecting Jersey City and Manhattan island, after an explosion in the depth of the tunnel. Five of them were removed to hospitals in Jersey City and four were not expected to recovor. The explosion was supposed to have been caused by gas.

Foreign Notes.

Every building of the dynamite factory near Vintervicken, Sweden, belonging to the Nitroglycerine company, was destroyed and six men were killed by an explosion, the cause of which is not known.

Reports concerning the latest disaster at Vesuvius show that the damage caused by the torrents of mud was great. At Pacciano the flood obstructed the doors of houses so that the people had to escape through the windows.

George Hesser, a lineman employed by the street railway company at Winnipeg, came in contact with a live wire and sustained a shock of 2,000 volts. He fell twenty feet, but was caught by fellow workmen and came off practically unhurt.

The London Daily Mail correspondents at Kobe report that much anxiety is felt there regarding the threatened failure of the silk crop in Japan. Late frosts have damaged the mulberry trees in the province of Fukushima alone to the extent of $2,500,000.

Since the recent disorders stirred up the native fanatics against "foreign witch devils," the plague situation in Seistan (on the Persian-Afghan border)has assumed appallling dimensions, spreading rapidly into Eastern Persia and numbering its victims by hundreds.

The fact that King Edward had a slight fall on the stairs on the royal yacht Victoria and Albert at Naples before leaving for Mount Vesuvius caused the circulation of exaggerated rumors about the accident. The king, however, was not injured, and laughed at the mishap.

Louis Schmidt, a sailor from Newark, N. J., was seriously wounded by a pistol shot, and another sailor was slightly wounded, at Guartanamo, Cuba, in a row between sailors from American warships and Cuban police. Thirty sailors attempted to lower the flag over the Spanish club, when the police interfered.

Presents valued at $250,000 were received by Miss Mary Park, daughter of William G. Park, the Allegheny, Pa., millionaire, who was married to Midshipman Raymond Perry Rogers Neilson of New York and Annapolis, a cousin of Mrs. Reginald Vanderbilt.

The women of All Soul's Unitarian church, Washington, hit upon a novel expedient of shining the shoes of the male members of the congregation as a means of raising money for the California sufferers. About twenty-five of them were thus occupied at the parlors of the church three days and their net receipts averaged more than $100 a day.

An interesting situation was developed at Springfield, Ohio, when the will of John Snyder was filed for probate. It leaves an estate valued at about $10,000 to the saints after the death of his wife. He does not designate which saint shall be his heir or how the conveyance shall be made. His wife died ten days after he did, and a contest has been filed by persons who claim to have a contract for the purchase of the property.

The bodies of two men were discovered floating in the Chicago river near Eighteenth street, both apparently having been in the water at least two months.

Morningside college at Sioux City, Iowa, has received a check for $50,000 from Andrew Carnegie. Some time ago Dr. W. S. Lewis, the president, asked Mr. Carnegie for $150,000 on the provision that the college raise another $150,000. Mr. Carnegie agreed to give $50,000. Dr. Lewis since then has been devoting his energies to raising the $150,000.

SUGAR REBATE INDICTMENTS

NEW YORK FEDERAL GRAND JURY RETURNS SEVEN TRUE BILLS.

OVER 200,000 ARE BEING FED

GEN. GREELY REPORTS ON CONDITIONS EXISTING IN SAN FRANCISCO.

New York, May 6. — The April federal grand jury in concluding its labors yesterday handed down seven sealed indictments in the sugar rebating cases. The indictments are against the following:

The New York Central Railroad company.

The American Sugar Refining company.

The New York Central & Hudson River Railroad company and Nathan Guilford, vice president of the company.

The American Sugar Refining Company of New York and C. Goodlee Edgar and Edwin Earle, the latter two being wholesale sugar dealers of Detroit, Mich.

The New York Central & Hudson River Railroad company and Nathan Guilford, vice president, and F. L. Pomeroy, general traffic manager.

The American Sugar Refining company and the American Sugar Refining Company of New York and C. Goodlee Edgar and Edwin Earle.

Nathan Guilford, F. L. Pomeroy, C. Goodlee Edgar and Edwin Earle.

Violate Elkins Law.

The first six indictments were found under the Elkins anti-trust law, which provides penalties of a fine not exceeding $10,000, or imprisonment not exceeding two years, for giving, granting, applying for, or accepting any rebate or concession from the regular freight rates, as published by a railway company as a common carrier.

The seventh indictment found against Guilford, Pomeroy, Edgar and Earle, charges them with having collectively conspired to violate the provision of the Elkins anti-trust law.

RELIEF WORK CAUSES ANXIETY.

Question of Caring for Destitute Is Very Serious Problem.

Washington, May 6.—The question of caring for the destitute in San Francisco is causing the officials there great anxiety as shown by the following telegram from Gen. Greely, received at the war department last night:

"Number of destitute being fed enormous, aggregating to-day, as just reported, 191,637 in San Francisco. Apparently conservative estimates placed destitute refugees at 40,000 in Oakland and Berkeley. How these terrible conditions are to be met is a subject of most earnest consideration between Devine, the finance committee and myself. While exertions of army to reduce aid to smallest possible limit has effected important changes, yet solution of situation without enormous suffering appears impossible. While daily hoping for great decreases in number of destitute, am not confident. Far reaching extent of this disaster cannot be appreciated without personal observation."

Dismiss Subcommittees.

San Francisco, May 6.—With the increasing number of daily dismissals of its subcommittees, the general municipal committee will doubtless soon pass out of existence, and the direction of the affairs of the city will be restored to the regularly constituted officials. Many of the subordinate bodies have reported their labors completed and have been relieved from further duty. When the general committee finally adjourns there will remain of the various organizations that were formed immediately following the days of the disaster only the committee on reconstruction and the finance committee.

State Militia Leaving.

The force of state militia on duty here is gradually diminished, and those of the regular soldiers who are not engaged in assisting in relief work are doing simple patrol duty.

There has been no perceptible diminution in the number of persons applying for free transportation to points outside the city and state, and despite measures taken to prevent unworthy persons from profiting by the generosity of the railroads, it is believed that this privilege has been abused.

The railways have perfected their plans for the removal of debris on a large scale.

SUICIDE IN CHURCH.

Cincinnati Woman Sucks Carbolic Acid Through a Straw.

Cincinnati, May 6.—Using a straw to prevent disfiguring her face, Mrs. Emma Reybert, wife of a printer, last night in the solemn quietude of St. Philomena church, committed suicide with carbolic acid. She died a few minutes after being found, but her identity was not established until after midnight. Despondency, because of her health, is believed to have been the cause of the suicide.

IS IN HANDS OF MITCHELL

ENTIRE SITUATION BELIEVED TO REST WITH MINERS' PRESIDENT.

Scranton, Pa., May 6.—The United Mine Workers' convention of delegates from the three anthracite districts which have been in session here the past two daps considering the refusal of the mine operators to grant the demands of the mine workers, will declare itself finally to-day. That is the only thing that can be said with any certainty now. The entire situation is now believed to rest with president John Mitchell. Theoretically it is in the hands of the general scale committee, but in reality Mr. Mitchell is the guiling spirit of that body. The convention at its session yesterday afternoon, which was a very brief one, decided to refer the entire question to the general scale committee of thirty-six with instructions to report recommendations to the convention to-day. The reference brought into the situation for the first time since the delegates began to arrive in the city a possible suggestion of peace, though it is generally believed that the majority of the delegates still favor the declaration of a strike.

SEVEN DEAD IN TRAIN WRECK.

Fast Trains Going at Full Speed Collides Head-on—Twenty Injured

Altoona, Pa., May 6.—The most disastrous accident on the Pennsylvania railroad since the disaster east of Harrisburg nearly a year ago, when about twenty persons were killed, occurred last night about 10 o'clock on the Petersburg banch, about 500 yards east of Clover Creek Junction.

The Chicago mail, east-bound, and the Chicago and St. Louis express, bound west, two of the fastest trains on the system, going at full speed, met head-on. Seven cars were wrecked and both engines badly damaged.

The best information obtainable is to the effect that seven persons were killed and about twenty injured. Later particulars may change these figures, but not to any appreciable extent.

The disaster was indirectly due to a freight wreck on the Middle division at 8:24 o'clock, when twenty-seven loaded cars of an east-bound freight train were wrecked at Union furnace, about twenty miles south of here, blocking all tracks.

In order to avoid detentions of trains passenger traffic was sent over the Petersburg branch. The Pennsylvania special, the eighteen-hour flyer, west-bound, was the first train to pass around and made the trip in safety.

No. 21, the St. Louis and Chicago express, was the next train to be sent west-bound over the branch. It collided with No. 16, the Chicago mail, going in an opposite direction, on a single track near Clover Creek Junction.

The accident appears to have resulted from a misunderstanding of orders on the part of the train crew of the Chicago and St. Louis express.

FEAR WAR IN SOUTH AMERICA.

Colombia and Venezuela Almost at Swords' Points.

Washington, May 5.—Colombia and Venezuela are more estranged than ever before as a result of the refusal of Vice President Gomez of Venezuela to receive Dr. Herrera, the minister plenipotentiary who went to Caracas three weeks ago to perfect a treaty with Venezuela for the settlement of navigation and frontier questions.

War is being freely talked in South American diplomatic circles. The insult to Colombia is regarded by some of the diplomats here as one she cannot well overlook, especially since this is the second time the Castro government has refused to receive a representative of Colombia.

Dispa' hes from Minister Russell in Venezuela say Vice President Gomez refused to receive Dr. Herrera officially until the treaty had been perfected.

Latin American diplomatists are at a loss to know just how the Castro government expected the treaty to be perfected and signed if the Venezuelans refused to receive the man empowered to act for Colombia. It is through the good offices of Mr. Russell that the protocols looking to a settlement were framed, and it is suggested here that what is termed "the slap at Colombia" is an indirect thrust at the United States.

Probably Fatally Hurt.

Winona, Minn., May 6.—Arlie Nelson, a lineman in the employ of the Winona Telephone company, met with a serious accident on Thursday afternoon. He fell twenty-five feet from a cable wire and struck on his chest on a gas pipe hitching post. The fall rendered him unconscious and the physician attending him does not hold out much hope for his recovery.

Silk Crop May Fail.

London, May 5. — The Daily Mail's correspondent at Kobe reports that much anxiety is felt there regarding the threatened failure of the silk crop in Japan. Late frosts have damaged the mulberry trees in the province of Fukushima alone to the extent of $2,500,000.

Confesses Big Shortage.

Peoria, Ill., May 5. — Harvey M. Hutchinson, for eight years mail clerk at the Peoria postoffice, has confessed to a shortage of $8,985.

Congress.

Resume of the Week's Proceedings.

Monday.

Washington, May 1. — The senate will begin voting on the amendments to the railroad rate bill on Friday, May 4. An agreement to that effect was reached yesterday, but it proved impossible so to extend the understanding as to have it include the fixing of a date for taking a final vote on the bill as a whole. The general impression among senators is that the final vote will be reached within a week from the time of the beginning of the consideration of amendments.

Yesterday was both a field day and a "seed" day in the house, the major portion of the legislative session being given over to the consideration of the agricultural appropriation bill and incident thereto the free distribution of seeds which the bill does not provide for but which many members desire to be restored to the bill.

Tuesday.

Washington, May 2.—The proceedings in the senate yesterday included an extended discussion of the railroad rate bill by Mr. Daniel, an explanation of the status of the appropriation for the relief of the earthquake sufferers of California, and a controversy among several senators as to the propriety of adopting without referring to a committee a resolution tendering the thanks of congress to Gen. Horace Porter for his services in rescuing the body of John Paul Jones from their long lost resting place in Paris. In the last mentioned proceeding Mr. Aldrich opposed action by the senate in advance of committee consideration and succeeded in having the measure referred to the committee on foreign relations.

By a vote of 153 to 59 the house yesterday decided to continue the free distribution of garden and flower seeds.

Wednesday.

Washington, May 3.—That the California senators do not consider that there should be an effort now to secure government aid in the reconstruction of San Francisco, was made evident in the senate yesterday. The question came up on Mr. Newlands' resolution directing the finance committee of the senate and the ways and means committee of the house to consider a government guarantee of bonds to aid the city. Both Mr. Flint and Mr. Perkins deprecated the introduction of the resolution as unwise, and both said that the California delegation should have been consulted before its presentation. The resolution was referred to the committee on finance.

Mr. Daniel concluded his speech on the rate bill.

The house yesterday completed the agricultural appropriation bill and passed the military academy bill. The former bill carries $7,481,440 and the latter $1,663,115.

Thursday.

Washington, May 4. — Yesterday was the last day for general debate in the senate on the railroad rate bill, and it was fully occupied. Following a brief speech by Mr. Nelson, Mr. Tillman tried to show, by criticism of individual judges, that the power of granting temporary injunctions by inferior United States courts should be taken from them in interstate commerce cases, and he was followed by Messrs. Bacon, Bailey, Teller and Foraker in speeches of some length.

The army appropriation bill, carrying an appropriation of about $74,000,000, was passed.

The naval appropriation bill, which carries nearly $100,000,000, was taken up by the house yesterday.

Friday.

Washington, May 5. — The senate yesterday entered upon the consideration of amendments to the railroad rate bill under the fifteen-minute rule, but made little progress. The greater part of the day was devoted to Mr. Lodge's provision bringing pipe lines within the terms of the bill, and it was ultimately unanimously agreed to, after so amending it as to exclude gas and water lines from its operation, thus practically confining it to oil lines.

A proposition by Mr. Foraker to exclude refrigerator cars from the requirements of the bill, and another by Mr. McCumber making the requirements concerning those cars more stringent than in the original bill were impartially voted down.

The house spent another day in consideration of the naval appropriation bill, the speeches in large measure being in support of the bill and the naval program therein outlined.

A feature of yesterday's session was the close attention paid by the house to the reading of the president's message on oil transportation and the generous applause which was accorded it on its conclusion.

DEAD BODY IN BRUSH.

One-Armed Stranger Kills Self With Acid at West Duluth.

Duluth, Minn., May 6.—The body of an unidentified man was found in the brush back of West Duluth, not far from the Missabe railroad tracks. A bottle of carbolic acid with the contents half gone indicates that it was a case of suicide. The man was about forty years old and had lost one arm, it being severed at the shoulder. He wore good clothing and was neat and well cared for in appearance.

EXPOSES CRIMES OF THE OIL TRUST

PRESIDENT GRILLS THE OCTOPUS IN SPECIAL MESSAGE TO CONGRESS.

BRAZEN VIOLATION OF LAW

GROSS FAVORITISM OF RAILROADS ENRICHES POWERFUL MONOPOLY.

Washington, May 6. — President Roosevelt yesterday transmitted to congress the report of James R. Garfield, commissioner of corporations, giving the results of his investigation of transportation and freight rates in connection with the oil industry.

The president expresses the view that the report is of capital importance because of the effort now being made to secure such enlargement of the scope of the interstate commerce commission as will confer upon it power to meet the demonstrated needs of the situation. The facts in the report, he declares, are for the most part not disputed.

Trust Profits Enormously.

That the Standard Oil company has benefited enormously, up almost to the present moment, by secret rates, many of which were clearly unlawful, the president says the report clearly shows, the benefit thereby secured amounting to at least three-quarters of a million a year. On this subject he says:

"This three-quarters of a million annually represents the profit that the Standard Oil company obtains at the expense of the railroads; but, of course, the ultimate result is that it obtains a much larger profit at the expense of the public.

Corrected When Caught.

"A very striking result of the investigation has been that shortly after the discovery of these secret rates by the commissioner of corporations, the major portion of them were promptly corrected by the railroads, so that most of them have now been done away with. This immediate correction, partial or complete, of the evil of the secret rates, is, of course, on the one hand an acknowledgment that they were wrong and yet were persevered in until exposed; and on the other hand a proof of the efficiency of the work that has been done by the bureau of corporations."

Prepares to Prosecute.

The statement is added that the department of justice will take up the question of instituting prosecutions in at least certain of the cases, and the hope is expressed that congress will enact into law the bill of Senator Knox to correct the interpretation of the immunity provision rendered in Judge Humphrey's decision. Continuing, the president says:

"But in addition to these secret rates the Standard Oil profits immensely by open rates, which are so arranged as to give it an overwhelming advantage over its independent competitors."

Gross Favoritism Enriches.

It is not possible, he says, to put into figures the exact amount by which the Standard profits through the gross favoritism shown it by the railroads in connection with the open rates.

"The profit, of course, comes not merely by the saving in the rate itself as compared with its competitors, but by the higher prices it is able to charge by the complete control of the market it secures, thereby getting the profit on the whole consumption."

The president calls attention to that feature of the report regarding the manner in which the law is evaded by treating as state commerce what in reality is merely a part of interstate commerce.

Thwarts the Law.

He says it is clearly shown "that this device is employed on the New York Central railroad, as well as on many other railroads, in such fashion as to amount to thwarting the purpose of the law, although the forms of the law may be complied with."

It is unfortunately not true, he says, that the Standard Oil company is the only corporation which has benefited and is benefitting in wholly improper fashion by an elaborate series of rate discriminations.

The sugar trust, he adds, according to the investigation now in progress, rarely if ever pays the lawful rate for transportation.

He favors as an element of competition the passage of some such law as that which has already passed the house, putting alcohol used in the arts on the free list and of keeping the fee to oil and coal lands of the Indian tribes or on the public domain in the government, the lands to be leased only on such terms and for such periods as will enable the government to entirely control them.

GARFIELD UNEARTHS CRIMES.

Trust Profits Enormously Through Illegal Rebating.

Taking up the output of refined oil, Mr. Garfield finds that it amounts to about 26,000,000 barrels annually, of which the Standard Oil company directly and indirectly controls about 23,000,000 barrels and approximately the same proportion of the other finished products of petroleum. Continuing, the report says:

Obtained by Unfair Methods.

The Standard claims that the location of its refineries and the use of pipe lines are natural advantages to which it is justly entitled by reason of the energy and foresight of its managers. While in a measure this is true, it must not be forgotten that these advantages were in part obtained by means of unfair competitive methods after years of fierce industrial strife.

"The development of the pipe line system by the Standard Oil company was the result of special agreements with railroad companies.

Monopolistic Control.

"Furthermore, those so-called natural advantages have been and are being greatly increased by discrimination in freight rates, both published and secret, interstate and state, which give the standard monopolistic control in the greater portion of the country, and which so limit competition as to practically prevent the extension of the business of any independent to a point which even remotely endangers the supremacy of the Standard.

JAMES RUDOLPH GARFIELD.
Commissioner of Corporations.

Exorbitant Profits.

"An immediate result of this delimitation of the competitive area is shown by the prices of ordinary illuminating oil throughout the country. After deducting the freight rate the price of such oil is usually from 2 to 5 cents a gallon higher in the non-competitive than in the competitive fields. A reasonable profit upon refined oil is about one-half a cent per gallon. It is clear that exorbitant profits are obtained in the non-competitive fields. This monopolistic control extends from the well of the producer to the doorstep of the consumer."

Nails a Lie.

Mr. Garfield cites the fact that only the New York Central Railroad company refused for itself and affiliated lines to give access to records of state rates.

At the beginning of the investigation, he says, "the Standard Oil company denied that it had obtained in recent years, or is now obtaining, any rebate or other transportation discrimination, and yet a careful review of the facts and the explanations leads to the conclusion that the Standard Oil company has habitually received from the railroads, and is now receiving, secret rates and other unjust and illegal discriminations."

Save $750,000 a Year.

In 1904 these secret rates saved to the Standard Oil company three-quarters of a million dollars, representing the difference between the open rates and the rates actually paid.

"These discriminations," he says, "have been so long continued, so secret, so ingeniously applied to new conditions of trade and so large in amount as to make it certain that they were due to concerted action by the Standard and the railroads."

Unjust Discriminations.

He says further, that the Standard Oil company is receiving unjust discriminations in the matter of open rates, the published rates from the leading Standard shipping points being relatively much lower than rates from the shipping points of its competitors.

Mr. Garfield then refers to seven instances of important discriminations in favor of the Standard Oil company in various parts of the country, and says that most of the secret rates and some of the open discriminations discovered by the bureau were abolished by the railroads shortly after such discovery.

After calling attention to the good which already has resulted from the investigation, Mr. Garfield says that the changes effected have put the independents upon a fairer footing and make competition possible in territories heretofore inaccessable.

GAS IGNITED IN TUNNEL.

Eight Men Are Found Unconscious as Result of Explosion.

New York, May 4. — Eight unconscious men were taken out of the McAdoo tunnel under the Hudson river, connecting Jersey City and Manhattan island, yesterday, after an explosion in the depth of the tunnel. Five of them were removed to hospitals in Jersey City, and four were not expected to recover. The explosion was supposed to have been caused by gas.

KILL UNMUZZLED DOGS.

Oakes Girl Is Bitten and Strict Order Follows.

Oakes, N. D., May 4.—The five-year old daughter of O. H. Grogen was bitten by a dog yesterday and is now in a serious condition from the effects of fright and of the wound she received. When the mayor heard of the affair he called a special meeting of the city council and an order was issued directing that all unmuzzled dogs found on the streets should be shot.

COAL STRIKE IS ALMOST CERTAIN

FEELING AT MINERS' MEETING IS THAT NOTHING BUT MIRACLE CAN AVERT IT.

MITCHELL TALKS OF STRIKE

PRESIDENT USES WORD FOR FIRST TIME SINCE NEGOTIATIONS BEGAN.

Scranton, Pa., May 5.—Yesterday's sessions of the miners' tri-district convention here showed that nothing short of a miracle can prevent a strike from being declared. At the conclusion of the afternoon executive session President Mitchell made a statement in the course of which he used the word "strike" for the first time since the present negotiations began. Here is what he said:

Mitchell Talks of Strike.

"There is not much to say at this time. The sentiment seems very strong against accepting the conditional and restricted arbitration schedule proposed by the operators or renewing the award of the anthracite strike commission for three years. The strike feeling has been intensified by the unfortunate and unjustifiable action of the state constabulary at Mount Carmel, as well as by their conduct in other parts of the coal regions. Of course it cannot be stated positively whot the vote will be. That will not be known until Friday afternoon or Saturday."

Mitchell Loudly Applauded.

The morning session of the convention, which was held in the main court room of the court house, was purely formal.

President Mitchell was loudly applauded and was elected chairman. After the credentials had been taken up the convention adjourned until afternoon, when the credentials committee made its report, which was adopted. Then Mr. Mitchell made a brief oral report for the joint scale committee. He reviewed the negotiations and said that the committee had, perhaps, gone beyond its powers in endeavoring to bring about a peaceful settlement. He told of the propositions made by both sides, and added:

Regrets Failure to Agree.

"I am sure I voice the sentiment of every member of the committee when I say that we regret that we have not been able to make a report that would be satisfactory to you. We regret that we have not been able to make a tentative agreement that would secure for you better wages and better conditions."

The convention remained in executive session until 5 o'clock, when an adjournment was taken until this morning at 10 o'clock.

PRESIDENT TOASTS KING.

Says Edward's Visits Are Pledge of Cordial Relations Which Exist.

Paris, May 5.—King Edward dined last night at the Elysee with President Fallieres and most of the French cabinet ministers. The president toasted the king, saying:

"Your majesty's frequent visits are a precious pledge of the cordiality of the relations between France and England. Both are happy to sincerely act together for civilization and peace."

King Edward expressed the pleasure his visits to France afforded him, saying:

"I am sure the entente cordiale will do more than anything else to safeguard peace."

STRANGER DASHED TO DEATH

Evidently Killed by Fall From Cliff in Idaho.

Weiser, Idaho, May 5. — The dead body of a man bearing a ticket made out to William Bryan, Rogersville, Mo., was found yesterday at the foot of a big cliff a short distance below Old's Ferry. The face and head were mangled beyond recognition. It is believed that the man either jumped or fell from the top of the cliff, being dashed to death on the rocks hundreds of feet below. Nothing is known of the man or how he came to lose his life.

POWDER WORKS BLOW UP.

Two Men Are Killed and Several Injured.

Louisiana, Mo., May 5. — The machine house, gun cotton house and dry cotton house of the La Motte Powder works blew up yesterday. Two men were killed and several were injured. The shock was felt and the report heard here, twelve miles distant.

QUIET REIGNS IN PARIS.

Strike Is Now Confined to Scattered Agitations.

Paris, May 5—The strike has ceased to present any general menace and is now confined to scattered agitations, which promise prolonged struggles in several industries. The explosion of a bomb which was being carried by two Russian anarchists has recalled attention to the continued presence of a violent element, despite the wholesale expulsions and arrests of the last few days.

WEALTHY BADGERS ARRESTED

FIVE MEN CHARGED WITH CONSPIRACY TO DEFRAUD UNCLE SAM.

Oshkosh, Wis., May 5. — Five lumbermen and bankers representing an aggregate wealth far in excess of $1,000,000 were arrested here yesterday by the federal authorities on the charge of conspiracy to defraud the general government by means of alleged land frauds in the State of Oregon.

The men arrested are Leander Choate, James Matt Bray, Benjamin Doughty, James Doughty and Thomas Daly. Mr. Bray is the president of the Bray & Choate Lumber company and Choate is the treasurer of the company. The Doughtys are retired lumbermen. Daly is cashier of the Commercial National bank and all of the men are large stockholders in that institution.

Each was placed under bonds of $2,000 and the hearing adjourned to Friday, May 11. Besides the above defendants, warrants have been issued for August Anderson and Joseph Black of Shawano.

The charges contained in the federal grand jury indictments under which the men are being prosecuted, is that of conspiracy to defraud the federal government by having furnished money to Oregon parties to make entries and buy homesteads in the state named.

PREACHER HAS BIG PARISH.

Missionary Circuit Is 100 Miles Long by 70 Wide.

Miller, S. D., May 5. — Having his parishioners scattered over an area 100 miles long by 70 wide, and traveling by team 600 to 800 miles each month, is the experience of O. E. Tell, Sunday School missionary for Stanley county, the only preacher and organizer in that immense circuit. In his present field he preaches at ten different points and has four fully organized Sunday schools. Six horses are required to stand his driving. Other preachers of different denominations there are as homesteaders, but Mr. Tell, being on a salary, alone can claim the immense circuit, which now is without church buildings.

STATE CAN PROVE MURDER.

Strong Claim Is Made in White Earth Trial.

Fergus Falls, Minn., May 5. — The trial of Joseph Jordan, who is charged with the murder of his squaw on the White Earth reservation, was begun in the United States court here yesterday. The last juror was secured and the case opened late in the afternoon. The state surprised the defense by announcing that one witness would be placed on the stand who would testify that she saw the fatal shot fired. In addition to this there is a great deal of strong circumstantial evidence.

DROWNS IN BAD RIVER.

Railroad Employe Is Thrown From a Horse in Midstream.

Pierre, S. D., May 5—Thomas Engle, a young man employed in the Richardson railroad camp, about five miles up Bad river from Fort Pierre, was drowned last evening while attempting to ford the stream on a pony. The current carried the animal off his feet and threw the young man into the water. The body has not been recovered.

BIRDSALL RENAMED.

Third District Republicans Also Behind Cummins.

Waterloo, Iowa, May 5.—Congressman J. H. Birdsall was chosen by the Republicans of the Third district here yesterday to succeed himself. Gov. Cummins was indorsed, as were also the Iowa delegation in congress and President Roosevelt. The Cummins resolution called for the support of the district for the governor.

Pastor's Daughter Is Killed.

Grand Forks, N. D., May 5. — The wife of Rev. J. H. Armstrong of Webster, who was here yesterday en route home from a visit to Cincinnati, was shocked to receive a telegram stating that her sixteen-year-old daughter Ruth had been accidentally shot and killed. The telegram contained no details of the accident, and only stated that the young woman had been shot and later died in the hospital.

Shot His Sweetheart.

Racine, Wis., May 5.—Lillian Cole, aged twenty-eight, was shot and perhaps fatally injured by her lover, Henry Chancaos, aged forty-eight. Wednesday night he took her to a theater. Yesterday morning he went to her home, accused her of being cool to him, which she denied. Then he shot her three times. He fled and has not yet been found.

Slaughter House Is Burned.

Blue Earth, Minn., May 5.—Froehlich & Dieter's slaughter house was burned to the ground yesterday. It was located just west of the city. The loss is over $1,000, and there was no insurance. Hides and tallow to the value of $200 were destroyed.

Cripple Takes His Own Life.

Helena, Mont., May 5.—Despondent over the loss of his hands, Joseph Dougherty wandered away from Missoula April 28 and committed suicide by drinking carbolic acid.

NO REVOLT, BUT MUCH VIOLENCE

PARIS TURNED INTO AN ARMED CAMP TO PREVENT A REVOLUTION.

CHARGE WITH DRAWN SWORDS

TROOPS DISPERSE DISORDERLY CROWDS AND MANY ARE INJURED.

Paris, May 3. — The long-dreaded May day failed to bring the revolution which inflammatory journals predicted, but it brought plenty of violence. The labor districts, which thousands of troops controlled with difficulty, and even central portions of Paris, are armed camps.

In the West end, far from the riots, people were disposed to treat the events in the labor quarters as harmless effervescences. They were, however, much more than that. Throughout the afternoon dragoons, republican guards and cuirassiers charged disorderly masses, sweeping the Place de la Republique and the broad Boulevard de Magenta.

Charge With Drawn Swords.

Toward nightfall cavalry charged with drawn swords and many persons were wounded. The manifestants overturned omnibuses and threw up hasty barricades. Over 1,000 arrests were made.

At no time did the demonstration reach the magnitude of a revolt. It was rather a leaderless tumult in which the serious labor element, struggling for a principle, was hopelessly confused with violent agitators, anarchists, revolutionists, roughs and a large number of the curious. The workmen succeeded neither in forming processions nor in assembling more than scattered bands.

Stick to Their Demands.

Their chief action was a reunion of several thousands in the labor exchange, at which a resolution was adopted not to return to work until the eight-hour day shall have been granted.

The worst hour of the day came at 5 o'clock when the police practically lost control and were compelled to rely on the mounted troops. The latter, forming in lines twenty files across and fifteen yards apart, swept around the Place de la Repubique, driving the disorderly crowds into the surrounding streets, and trampling and injuring many.

Rescued by Cavalry.

A body of foot-guards became surrounded by manifestants and was rescued with difficulty by cavalry with drawn swords. Here a considerable number were wounded. By 6 o'clock calm had been measurably restored and most of the troops returned to barracks.

Throughout the disorders the authorities succeeded in executing their original plan of holding the disturbers strictly within the labor district and not permitting them to encroach upon the wealthy commercial and residential sections.

The night was quiet throughout. Several bombs were discovered by the police but none were exploded. A further attempt was also made to derail the Tidal train to Dieppe.

Reports from the provinces show that there were violent demonstrations at Marseilles, Brest, Bordeau, St. Etienne, Lyons and Rouen.

WOMAN SLASHES BANKER.

Uses Razor on Man to Whom She Attributes Her Downfall.

Robinson, Ill., May 3. — Samuel L. Bennett, a banker, and one of the wealthiest men in this county, was attacked early yesterday by Mrs. Nora Plunket, a domestic. Mr. Bennett was asleep in his room when the woman attacked him with a razor. Two gashes were inflicted in his throat. He will recover. Mrs. Plunkett accuses Bennett of being responsible for her downfall, which Mr. Bennett denies.

DESPERADO IS KILLED.

Surprised in Thicket and Shot Before He Can Pull Gun.

Oregon City, Or., May 3. — Frank Smith, the desperado who killed Policeman Hanlon of this place last week and who later killed Sheriff Shaver and Capt. Henderson of the Oregon national guard, was killed yesterday in the woods south of New Era, Clackamas county. Smith was surprised in a thicket where he had hidden, and was shot through the head before he could use his weapons.

Woman Shoots Intruded.

Kokomo, Ind., May 3. — Mrs. Earl Lindsay found a man under her bed here last night, confronted the intruder with her husband's shotgun, and when he tried to escape, shot him in the back. The man was arrested and identified as James Wilson, said to be wanted in several Indiana towns for burglary.

CARE OF DAIRY STOCK

State Dairy Inspector Winkjer Writes Interestingly.

The following communication on the subject of the care of dairy stock is by State Dairy Inspector Winkjer and will be found of much importance to those who devote any portion of their time to dairying:

"It is not one single thing that makes a co-operative creamery successful but it is the combined work of many essential things. The buttermaker is generally considered the most important factor for a successful creamery but his importance is mainly in that he is in a position to bring together and harmonize the forces to bear on the important place. The buttermaker has an unlimited amount of pressure behind his creamery business if he goes to work and develops it right. Of course a buttermaker generally has his hands full in keeping his creamery presentable and he should receive a liberal assistance from all concerned and those concerned mostly in that work are the farmers themselves and while there are many ways in which he may give this assistance I want to point to one, especially, that the farmer is even more interested in than the buttermaker. This is the improvement of the dairy herd so as to get a bigger yield from the number of cows already on hand. The farmer is the one who is benefited most and should feel most interested. Now I want to call attention to one way in accomplishing this that is practical and a way that every dairyman should use and that is to keep such a record of each cow in the herd that will show at the end of the year what each individual cow has done. This at first thought, would seem like something that would entail a great deal of work and I will not deny but what it takes some extra work but I think it is safe to say that it will be the best paying work that you can do in connection with your dairy. The things necessary are, a spring scale, pencil and memoranda book, all of which need not cost over $2.00 and the extra work necessary need not be over 30 minutes a month outside the time it takes to do the figuring and that will depend on how quick you are to figure. The thing to do with this aparatus is to place them where you empty the milk, after milking. Taking the milk from each cow you first hang the pail on the scale and with the pencil and book you have handy you make a record of what the cow has given. You can repeat this for every milking if you wish but for a beginning about four times a month will give you good results and show you where you have the cow that is stealing her board and where you have the one that is paying for it. In connection with this it is also necessary to have the milk from each cow tested about three times or more a year. With the number of pounds of milk and per cent of fat in milk you have a basis to figure the value of your cow. The value of such a record is well expressed by Mr. Sly in a late number of the Dairy Record where he says: "If a farmer has two cows and loses $10.00 on one and gains $10.00 on the other it does not take much of a mathmatician to see that he did not make any money; but if he disposed of the cow that he lost $10.00 on he will be $10.00 ahead besides saving the extra time and labor required to care for the extra cow." There are many interesting things that come up with such a record peculiar to each dairyman's conditions and many questions will come up that you want answered and it is well to keep some dairy papers on hand to gather to your use the experience that other dairymen have had."

A WORKING GIRLS' HOME

Institution for the Care of Working Girls in Minneapolis.

The COURIER is in receipt of a letter from the Working Girls' Christian Home of Minneapolis which tells its own story and is as follows: "As so many girls come from the country to hire their services among our chief families, and do not know when they land here where to go and what to do to find out work, don't you think it would be a good idea to let them know thru your good paper of this Home work in their behalf?"

"You might mention the fact that we do not charge girls for laboring and locating them; also that they can earn from $3.50 to $6 per week, according to their abilities in their work."

"We do not desire them to leave their country homes, but if they do, let them know of this place of safety which is run under a responsible board of clean men and women."

Yours truly,
Carrie Butler, assistant matron.

Ready for the Firemen.

Warren, Minn., May 17—Preparations are being made for the Northern Minnesota firemen's tournament, to be held in this city June 26, 27, 28 and 29. This will be the event of the season. Fire companies will attend from all the leading towns of this part of the state, including Crookston, Thief River Falls, East Grand Forks, Bemidji, Black Duck, Red Lake Falls and towns north of here. Valuable cash prizes will be offered to companies contesting. In addition to the regular tournament there will be horse racing, ball games and other sports. There will probably be at least three good bands. It is expected there will be from 2,500 to 3,000 visitors, making nearly 6,000 in all. Tents will be used for sleeping accommodations and temporary arrangements will be made with the citizens to help out.

ANNUAL TAX SALE DELINQUENT TAXES

County Auditor Ford Successfully Disposes of All Taxes Delinquent.

Only Two Pieces Bid for Less Than the Twele Per Cent.—Bidding Lively.

The annual tax sale was held Monday by County Auditor Ford at the court house. A number of interested parties were present and all the property on which the taxes were delinquent for the year 1904 was sold.

Under the law the annual tax sale must be held the second Monday in May and at that time the auditor is required to sell all parcels of lands against which judgment has been entered and which remains unsatisfied for the taxes, for the preceding year or years.

The auditor had six days in which to sell the delinquent property, but the list in Red Lake county was disposed of in about a day. Each parcel was sold separately and to the person who bid the lowest annual rate of interest, 12 per cent being the maximum rate permitted.

The majority of the sales were made on 12 per cent bids. There were two instances where the bidding cut the rate to 11 and 5 per cent. The sales amounted to about $4500.

Under the sales made the purchaser of a tax title will acquire an absolute title if the owner does not redeem within the time set by law. If his title is found void the county will have to refund.

Among those present or represented at the sale were F. H. Welcome of Minneapolis, G. Vandertook and Hiram Brown of St. Paul, Miller & Foote of Crookston, Netherlands American Land Co. of Minneapolis, M. McAndres of St. Hilaire, First State Bank, Merchants State Bank and Bank of Red Lake Falls, P. B. Gaass, L. C. Simons, J. A. Duffy, M. O. Sortedahl and Theo. Garceau.

It Will Be Harder.

Judge Knight returned to Red Lake Falls yesterday. He received word from the citizens down there that they were getting tired of the way in which the present committee had managed things thus far in the county seat matter, and a large number want the judge to take charge of the matter. It is usually very poor policy to swap horses while crossing a stream, but in this case we do not blame the citizens of Red Lake Falls, although we greatly regret seeing the Judge take up the battle against Thief River Falls, as it means harder sledding for us.—Thief River Falls News.

THE STUDY CLUB CLOSES SEASON

Elabortely Entertain Themselves Saturday Night With Progressive Banquet.

Something of What The Club Has Done—Officers Elected For the Coming Year.

The Study Club, the leading social organization of the city, closed its season of work and pleasure Saturday evening and sealed it with so happy a function that the members must be all too anxious for the next season to come. It was a progressive banquet and from fruit cocktail to toasts was replete with merriment and good cheer.

The members and a few friends gathered first at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bourdon where the Misses Hanson, Trudo and Allen greeted them with a fruit cocktail. At the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Tibbets cream of chicken soup was served; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Germo prepared a lobster mousse; Mrs. C.E. Boughton was assisted by Mrs. Chamberlain and Mrs. Chas. Bourdon and it was at her home that the more solid meats and relishes were had; at the Rev. and Mrs. Knox's it was an asparagus salad; Mrs. J. E. Argue, aided by Mrs. L. C. Simons, served chocolate ice cream and cake; at Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Sivertson's, candies and nuts; and to Mrs. E. F. Marshall was given the honor of entertaining the company for the balance of the evening and this she did in her own particularly happy manner. After the coffee and creme de menthe were nicely discussed there was a program of toasts responded to by Messrs. Germo, Boughton, Simons, Watson and Knox.

Those present were the Messrs. and Mesdames Charles Bourdon, S. M. Sivertson, L. C. Simons, J. E. Argue, H. W. Knox, C. E. Boughton, E. W. Chamberlain and Thomas Germo; Mrs. E. F. Marshall and Mrs. Henry Tibbets; Misses Allen, Trudo, Hanson and Germo; Messrs. Miller, Hunt, Zaiser, Watson and Tonning and Hegland of Fertile.

The club has been in existence during the past two years and numbers twenty-five members. The first year was devoted to the study of several of the Shakespeare plays and the second year to the sources and development of English literature up to the time of Shakespeare; for the next year there is outlined a continuance of the work of the past year down to the present time of modernity of literature. One of the chiefest things of general good the club has accomplished has been the maintenance of a travelling library in the city and it is the aim to sooner or later secure to the city a permanent library.

A meeting was held Tuesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Boughton and the following officers were elected for the next year: President, Dr. J. E. Argue; vice-president, Mrs. C. E. Boughton; secretary, Mrs. H. W. Knox; treasurer, Mrs. C. N. Bourdon; chairman of the program committee, Thomas Germo.

WE SURELY BEAT THEM UP SOME

The Fertile High School Ball Team Acquires a Very Large Fat Drubbing.

Red Lake Falls Boys Administer Defeat 24 to 5—Case of Being Outclassed.

It was certainly something awful the things the Red Lake Falls high school ball team did to the babes of Fertile toyland in the contest in this city last Saturday. The Red Lake Falls pitcher wouldn't allow them to make hits, the basemen wouldn't allow them to encircle the bases and altogether it was the most unnicest treatment. On the other hand the Red Lake Falls boys would persist in slamming the ball any old time and any old place where it could not be fielded. So the merry carnage went on through nine innings and until the home boys had accumulated 24 runs to 5 for the opposition.

It was particularly too bad to slaughter the innocents in the way it was done as the Fertile boys were a mighty nice lot and played a nice clean game but if the beating was essential to putting them wise to the inner secrets of the game, it might as well be the Red Lake Falls boys. Healy was strong in the box for the Falls and allowed but 5 hits while his team totalled 15. There were also a difference in the error column, Fertile getting 11 to 7 by the Red Lakers. The late pleasantness is herewith set forth in detail:

HE MODIFIED HIS ORDER

Judge Watts Extends Time in County Seat Hearing.

Judge Watts Monday signed an order modifying his decision recently which ordered the county board of Red Lake county to meet May 17 and pass upon the legality of the signers of the petition for division, by extending the time of the meeting of the commissioners to June 11. No reason was given for the modifications of judgement, and it is not known which faction desired the delay.—Crookston Times.

An Honest Man.

Cassius R. Peck, assistant United States district attorney of Oklahoma, at a banquet in Guthrie recently spoke on honesty. One thing he said was this:

"What are we coming to? Are we coming to such a pass that our ideas of an honest man will correspond with the idea of old Hiram Stroode?

"Hiram Stroode, for the seventh time, was about to fail. He called in an expert accountant to disentangle his books. The accountant, after two days' work, announced to Hiram that he would be able to pay his creditors four cents on the dollar.

"At this news the old man looked vexed.

"'Heretofore,' he said, frowning, 'I have always paid ten cents on the dollar.'

"A virtuous and benevolent expression spread over his face.

"'And I will do so now,' he resumed. 'I will make up the difference out of my own pocket.'"

Pie Crust.

Two tablesponfuls sifted flour, one tablespoon cold lard, two tablespoons cold water and a pinch of salt. Chop the lard in the flour until it is fine, then mix with the water, using all the flour. Turn out upon a well-floured board, divide equally and roll out one-half. Cover the pie pan, patting the crust to get out the air. Fill with whatever fruit you have, roll out the upper crust, fold in half and cut three short slits near the center of the fold, place over the pie and pat down the edges. Trim off the rough edges and mark around the edge with the tines of a fork. Bake until a nice brown. Gather up the scraps and roll them out again, and cut out with a can cover about the size of a silver dollar. Prick each piece with a fork and bake a delicate brown. Place a bit of jelly in the center of each piece and you have a plate of dainty tarts.

Embroidered Pique Coats.

Embroidered pique coats are much worn by little children, and if you buy a good pique with a rather fine cord it will launder and wear very well. One charming little coat that I saw recently had a wide shoulder cape with an embroidered scallop on the edge, and with several rows of large round dots worked above it. The turnover collar and cuffs were embroidered in the same manner. The best way to make the dots is to work them in the over and overstitch from side to side, and then, using the same stitch, work them from top to bottom. This pads them thoroughly, and makes them stand out most effectively.

Dish Cloths.

Excellent dish cloths are made of knitted cotton, for they are very strong and can be washed and boiled again and again, and will come out like new. Every time a dish cloth is used it should be washed with soap and soda, and hung out to dry. A dirty dish cloth is a disgrace to its user. Children who are beginning to learn to knit are generally very willing to make dish cloths, but, when there is no little knitter and the housewife is very busy, neatly hemmed squares of coarse crash will answer the purpose very well, and these are made "in no time."

Water at Meals.

Water taken with meals should be sipped as well as taken sparingly. Ice water should be taken as seldom as possible; never would be a better rule. And the habit of putting chipped ice in the drinking water is to be avoided, as one never knows what may be taken into the stomach through this medium. The better way is to fill bottles with water and allow them to stand beside ice to chill.

Hang of a Skirt.

There are two rocks on which women, who might otherwise be well dressed, frequently suffer shipwreck: the one is the gaping placket, the other a skirt shorter in front than behind. Both of these, even the most inexperienced of amateur dressmakers can avoid. Make the placket on the side, and fasten with patent clasps sewn close together.

London Conveyances.

'Buses and cars cease running in London at 12:30 a. m., and one of the reasons why the labor men in the house of commons want earlier sittings is that they have no autos or broughams and cannot afford cabs, so would have to walk home in all weathers if the house sat late.

An Expensive Bump.

Jill—Wouldn't that bump yer?—Yonkers Statesman.

The News of the Week

Notes From Washington.

President Roosevelt has signed the bill recently passed by congress providing for a delegate in the house from Alaska.

The state department received the following cablegram from the American consul at Hanku, China: "Immense flood in Hunan province. Great loss of life and property. All foreigners safe."

A message was received at the navy department from Rear Admiral Harrington, commanding the navy yard at Norfolk, saying that the battleship Rhode Island, which ran aground off York Spit last week, is now lying off Yorktown, uninjured.

The Panama canal commission had 27,000 employes on its rolls during the month of April. Five thousand of these were paid in gold and 22,000 in silver. The number of men at work exceeds by 9,000 the greatest number the French company ever had in its employ.

From Other Shores.

The governor general of Ekaterinoslav has been assassinated by six persons who fired volleys from revolvers at him and escaped.

The Barcelona police discovered an anarchist conspiracy. There have have been sixteen arrests and eight bombs have been seized.

The London Daily Telegraph's St. Petersburg correspondent says it is reported that Count Witte may be appointed Russian ambassador at Paris.

The London Times correspondent at St. Petersburg says he is able to state positively that Emperor Nicholas intends to select future ministers from the national parliament and that the Goremykin ministry is merely transitional.

The typhoid epidemic is practically stamped out in Mexico City, only two cases and one death being reported. The magnitude of the success accomplished is shown by the fact that since Oct. 1 there were 3,372 cases and 788 deaths.

Archbishop Ireland left Rome, charmed with the complete success of his visit. He has gained the friendship of the pope, who looks upon him as an old friend, and the admiration and esteem of many members of the sacred college.

Walter Wellman has received the consent of Norway to the establishment of a wireless telegraph station at Hammerfest in connection with his polar expedition. Mr. Wellman is going to Paris for the purpose of testing the airship which has been constructed there for use in the Arctic regions.

The body of a man who ascended to the second landing of the Eiffel tower in Paris and jumped off and was killed on the floor below, has been identified as that of August Braun, born in Germany, naturalized an American citizen and formerly a resident of Cincinnati. Braun's suicide is attributed to mental derangement.

The results of the French election are considered chiefly important in confirming the policy which the government has thus far pursued. Out of 501 constituencies the government has carried 262 and the opposition 169. In 155 districts there will be reballotings. The results in colonial districts have not yet been reported.

It has become known that the authorities of San Domingo discovered a plot to assassinate President Caceres as he was leaving the theater. Several arrests have been made. Shots were exchanged last night near the city between rural guards and supposed revolutionists. The city and its surroundings are calm now.

Crimes.

Rev. C. Stewart Bain, who is in jail at Waterloo, N. Y., accused of setting fire to his church, which was destroyed March 6, claims that if he did the deed it was a sort of Jekyll-Hyde proceeding.

Sam Sims, a negro who killed the horse upon which Constable Lamar Hendricks, who was attempting to arrest him, was riding, was taken from his captor and lynched near the public road about six miles west of Jackson, Miss.

Driven to desperation by suffering from Bright's disease, Edwin W. Clark of New York, for thirty years a member of the cotton exchange and a man of wealth, shot and killed himself. He was distantly related to the Vanderbilt and Duer families.

In a desperate pistol fight at New Point, Ind., Pleasant Land was shot and almost instantly killed, and his brother, Winfield Land, was shot through the head, dying a few hours later. Jeff Williams was shot also, and is not expected to live. Garfield A. Williams and William Hare, the other participants in the affair, were not injured and are now in the county jail at Greensburg. The trouble followed a drunken quarrel.

Over 300 citizens of Franklin county, Miss., including the sheriff, charged with being members of an alleged "Whitecap" organization, pleaded guilty before Judge Niles on the charge of intimidating government homesteaders, and were each assessed the minimum fine of $25.

A tragedy was enacted in Preble county, Ohio. Isaac Mackey, aged sixty-five, crushed the skull of his brother, David Mackey, aged seventy-five, with a hatchet, and then took poison in an attempt to end his own life. The assailant died, and his victim survived him only a few hours.

Jacob Hengri, residing north of Milledgeville, Ill., committed suicide because his wife persisted in moving from the country to Savannah.

An unknown man, who walked down the main street of Hoboken kicking an American flag along in the dirt, was mobbed by indignant citizens, clubbed by a policeman, sentenced by a court and put to work breaking stones in a penitentiary before the day was over.

Using a straw to prevent disfiguring her face, Mrs. Emma Reybert, wife of a printer, in the solemn quietude of St. Philomena church at Cincinnati, committed suicide with carbolic acid. She died a few minutes after being found, but her identity was not established until after midnight. Despondency because of her health is believed to have been the cause of the suicide.

Twenty county jail prisoners, composing the squad used in cleaning public streets at Washington, Pa., went on a strike which lasted until they were supplied with their daily allowance of tobacco. Heretofore the county commissioners had supplied the prisoners with tobacco, but an order was issued that no more be furnished. The sheriff appealed to the commissioners, who rescinded the order.

MORE STANDARD OIL INIQUITY

CHARGES OF COLLUSION WITH ST. LOUIS & IRON MOUNTAIN RAILROAD.

OLD EMPLOYE TELLS SECRETS

RAILROAD AGENTS ACT AS AGENTS OF STANDARD OIL COMPANY.

Chicago, May 13.—Direct charges of collusion between the Standard Oil company and the St. Louis & Iron Mountain railroad were made during the second day's hearing of the investigation of the relations between the oil company and the common carriers of the country, before the interstate commerce commission here.

H. J. Cohn of St. Louis, for fifteen years connected with oil companies, declared that the agents of the railroad acted as agents of the oil company, and received commissions on the amount of oil they sold. He, himself, acting as an agent of the Standard Oil company, had, he said, appointed agents at various places on the Iron Mountain road in Missouri.

Take Away Their Fat.

He had known station agents to rehign, he said, because the oil business was taken away from them, and the position was not sufficiently remunerative otherwise.

Attorneys for the Standard Oil company, during the cross-examination of Maxon, the Illinois operator who testified in chief Thursday, showed that he had repeatedly written letters to officers of the oil company threatening to make trouble because he did not consider himself well treated. Maxon admitted writing the letters, and said that he had done so "just for amusement."

Other witnesses were A. J. Davidson, president of the St. Louis & San Francisco road; J. F. Tucker, chairman of the Central Freight Traffic association, and S. L. Hibbs of Peoria, Ill.

MUST HOLD FORTY ACRES.

White Earth Mixed Bloods Affected by Amendment.

Washington, May 13. — Only one amendment in the Indian appropriation bill, that removing the restrictions upon alienation of lands by the mixed bloods on the White Earth reservation in Minnesota, is in dispute. A satisfactory agreement probably will be reached on that amendment to-day, and the bill be reported to both houses and passed. It is proposed that the amendment affecting the White Earth mixed bloods shall be modified so that the Indians shall be required to hold at least forty acres of land for their own use. No serious objection will be made to this by Senator Clapp, who is a member of the conference committee having the bill under consideration.

DOWIE'S DEATH NOT FAR OFF.

A Week or Ten Days Most Doctor Can Promise Him.

Chicago, May 13.—The condition of John Alexander Dowie is said to be nearing a critical stage. The venerable "first apostle" has taken to his bed and his strength is failing. The swelling of the extremeties, which is a noticeable characteristic of his affliction, is said to have extended to within a few inches of the heart. Dr. Blanks, who has been in attendance upon Dowie, said that he might, by reason of his great vitality, live a week or ten days, but that a fatal termination of the disease within two or three days would not be surprising.

GERMANS VIOLATE FRONTIER.

Pursue Rebels Into British Territory —Protest Lodged.

Cape Town, South Africa, May 13. —It is authoritatively stated that in a fight May 4 the Germans pursued the rebel chief Merengo four miles over the eastern border of German Southwest Africa into British territory. The cape police protested but the German commander refused to retire, saying that he intended to "finish his job." Merango, who lost 27 men in the engagement, is believed to be hiding near the border. The Cape government, through the German counsel, has formally protested against the violation of the frontier.

Paroled Prisoner Breaks Faith.

MAY YIELD TO GREAT BRITAIN

AMICABLE SETTLEMENT OF TABAH DIFFICULTY IS EXPECTED—NAVY READY.

London, May 13.—Diplomatic activity seems to foreshadow an amicable settlement of the Tabah difficulty. Both at London and Constantinople Turkey is seeking to make an arrangement. The grand vizier was to have had an interview with Sir Nicholas O'Conor, the British ambassador at Constantinople at 11 o'clock last night. The latest dispatches from Constantinople state that Foreign Minister Tewfik Pasha, the grand vizier, and other of the sultan's advisors counsel yielding to the British demands, and that the Shiek-Ul-Islam is neutral and that on on Thursday Turkey offered to evacuate the disputed points, but on conditions that were not acceptable to Great Britain.

It is understood that the decision now rests with the sultan, who is said to have ordered all the documents on the subject translated into Arabic to enable him to pass upon them.

Meanwhile the British naval preparations are maturing. A dispatch from Athens announces that the Mediterranean fleet under Vice Admiral Lord Charles Beresford is ready for immediate departure.

DECLARES BET WAS A BRIBE.

Illinois Man Meets Contested Election With New Charge.

Sterling, Ill., May 13.—Bribery in the recent election of a supervisor of Jordan township is charged on the ground that a judge of election gave $5 to a supporter of Elmer E. Mensch, one of the candidates, to bet on Eugene Blank, Mensch's opponent. The judge is said to have promised the voter half of the winnings if Blank won, and, it is charged, thereby caused the man to change his vote, accepting a bribe of $2.50 for voting for Blank. Mensch was declared elected by one vote and Blank is contesting the elecaion, making charges of illegal voting. It is in reply to these charges, filed in the county court, that Mensch makes his allegation of bribery.

MANY FUNERALS TIED UP.

Fifteen Hundred Funeral Drivers on Strike in New York.

New York, May 13.—The strike of 1,500 funeral drivers, ordered Thursday night, tied up the undertaking business in New York city yesterday so completely that about 150 bodies remained unburied. Hearses and carriages were driven away from churches, mourners were kept waiting all day in houses of the dead and in several instances non-union drivers of hearses and carriages were attacked in the street and police protection was necessary. The strikers declared that their fight for $14 a week instead of $12 is on in earnest.

PANAMA MUST KEEP THE PEACE

UNITED STATES MAKES EMPHATIC DECLARATION OF ITS POSITION.

PLOTS AGAINST AMADOR AFOOT

ENEMIES OF PANAMA'S PRESIDENT ARE PLANNING TO UNSEAT HIM.

Washington, May 12.—"Revolutionary movements or election troubles in Panama which in any way interfere with work on the canal zone justify interference by the United States in support of the Panama government."

Such is the tenor of the instructions sent to Gov Magoon of the canal zone by Secretary Taft, who also submitted a letter from Secretary Root of the state department setting forth in detail a justification for American interference in case of disorder in any part of Panama.

Will Prevent Trouble.

This emphatic declaration of the position of the United States, it is believed, will prevent serious trouble at the elections to be held in June. As Secretary Taft makes it clear that any disorder in the republic will hinder canal work, the letter will be doubly discouraging to opponents of President Amador, who are reported to be planning a movement against him outside the canal zone, believing that the United States would not suppress any insurrection unless it extends within the zone.

No Interference in Politics.

Gov. Magoon communicated his instructions to the Panama government Wednesday and yesterday Secretary Taft made public both his letter to Gov. Magoon and the letter from Secretary Root.

It is made clear by the secretary of state that the United States does not purpose relieving Panama of responsibility for the maintenance of peace and has no thought of interfering with the political parties in the republic. He emphasizes the fact that the United States does not assume to protect the government and people of Panama "from the inevitable results of indifference and indiscretion on their part."

Not an Act of War.

He then says the United States would not be committing an act of war by sending troops into Panama upon the request of the president of the republic, as under the Panama constitution such a request may be interpreted as the assent of the Panama government. The right of the United States to protect its property, wherever located, is set forth by Secretary Root. Any hindrance to the construction of the canal is interference with the rights and privileges of the United States, and accordingly the secretary of war is directed to instruct all United States officials on the isthmus to hold themselves in readiness to meet any emergency.

LOSES HAND UNDER TRAIN.

Billings (Mont.) Woman Has Serious Accident.

Billings, Mont., May 12.—Mrs. Minnie Carlson, who is employed at a steam laundry in this city, lost one of her hands at the wrist yesterday in the wheels of a freight car. She was en route home to lunch, and while crawling under a string of freight cars to which was an engine attached a number of other cars were switched against them. A wheel ran over her wrist, severing her hand. She was taken to the hospital.

MORE CHARGES AGAINST TRUST

SECOND SECTION OF STANDARD OIL REPORT PROMISED BY GARFIELD.

WORSE EXPOSURES TO COME

CRUEL TACTICS USED TO CRUSH COMPETITION ARE LAID BARE.

Washington, May 9.—When the senate met yesterday a communication from the secretary of commerce and labor was read, stating that the full report of the commissioner of corporations on the subject of the transportation of oil is now in the hands of the public printer and that as soon as received from that official it will be transmitted to congress as requested by a recent resolution.

The first section of the report convicted the trust of demanding and receiving rebates, which is punishable by fine under the Elkins act; the second will charge that the Standard Oil company has been guilty of conspiracy in restraint of trade and commerce, an offense which carries the penalty of dissolution and fine and imprisonment.

Will Prosecute.

It is the purpose of the department of justice to institute proceedings against the trust and its officials, both on account of its action in receiving rebates and in conspiring to crush out competition.

This is the program of the executive branch of the government.

Representative Campbell of Kansas has introduced a bill imposing a fine and imprisonment upon any person or corporation which, for the purpose of destroying competition and creating a monopoliy, discriminates by selling an article at a lower price in one section than in another. Mr. Campbell will appear before the interstate and foreign commerce committee of the house this week and demand a hearing in support of his bill.

Hard Hit in Ohio.

Columbus, May 9.—In a preliminary report of the findings as to the methods of the Standard Oil company in Ohio, made public yesterday, Attorney General Ellis says that though the Standard Oil trust, in obedience to a decree of the supreme court of Ohio, reorganized in 1899, cancelling the trust certificates then outstanding and putting all the property they represented in the hands of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, it has continued to violate the Valentine-Steward anti-trust act just as before.

The Standard absolutely fixes the price of crude oil. Independent companies run run their bids up or down with the Standard prices. But by organizing "fake" or "pirate" companies the Standard manages to drive out competition without changing oil prices everywhere, which would be disastrous to the Standard itself.

KILLS WIFE AT HER REQUEST.

Woman Prefers Death to Return to Insane Asylum.

Newport News, Va., May 9.—Alleging that because his wife feared a return to an insane asylum and that he fulfilled a promise to take her life in consequence, Pulian Pautinie, an Austrian, yesterday entered the police station in this city and announced that he had killed the woman by shooting her seven times in the head while she slept. The man declared that his wife was discharged from an insane asylum in February last and that he took her life in compliance with a wish expressed by her that he do so rather than have her return to the institution. After killing her, he says, he bathed and shrouded her and then surrendered to the authorities.

MILLIONS FOR IRRIGATION.

First Section of a Mammoth Oregon System Is Completed.

Whalen, Or., May 9.—An epoch in the history of irrigation in the West was reached yesterday when water was turned into the first section of the interstate canal. The portion of the canal operated is forty-five miles long and cost about $600,000. The two remaining sections will cost about the same, and the reservation reservoir and lateral systems, which are being constructed by the government, will bring the total expense up to $3,500,000. An area of approximately half a million acres will be reclaimed.

FIERCE FIGHT WITH SHOWMEN

ONE STUDENT SERIOUSLY INJURED AND SEVERAL OTHERS HURT.

Columbia, Mo., May 13. — Several hundred University of Missouri students engaged in a fight with showmen from Cole Brothers' circus at midnight Thursday night, and as a result Maynard McDole, a freshman from Craig, Mo., was shot in the head and is in a critical condition in the hospital here and several others are slightly hurt.

A body of about 500 students assembled at the court house and marched to the evening performance of the circus on the fair grounds north of town. They demanded a 25-cent rate of admission, which was granted. They occupied seats together throughout the main performance and maintained an orderly behavior, occasionally giving Missouri yells and songs. After the performance a number of the leaders demanded that they be allowed to remain during the concert which followed. Showmen armed with tent poles drove the students from the tent, striking several of them. This incensed the students and they ran to a siding near the Wabash railroad station, where the circus train was preparing to depart. Here a battle ensued between the circus employes and 250 students, in which bricks were thrown, shots were fired and tent poles wielded vigorously by both students and showmen. The students say the circus men were the aggressors.

IS KILLED IN QUARREL.

Itasca County Homesteader Is Shot by Neighbor.

Duluth, Minn., May 13.—As a result of a quarrel between two homesteaders living close to Laurel postoffice, about twenty miles west of International Falls, in Northern Itasca county, Fred Hemming died yesterday and Albin Johnson, in charge of Deputy Sheriff Connors, is on his way to Grand Rapids, where he will be held to answer to the charge of murder. On Saturday evening both men returned from Laurel, where they had been drinking to some extent throughout the day, and at which place they had some dispute over a trifling matter. Hemming stopped at his home and took supper. After supper he went to the home of Johnson, as he stated, to have it out with him. He entered Johnson's house and immediately renewed the quarrel and struck at Johnson several times, whereupon it is said, Johnson took a revolver from the mantle and shot him three times. Hemming is said to have been of a quarrelsome disposition. He came from Hibbing a few years ago. Johnson always has borne a good reputation and seemed to be a peaceable and industrious citizen, and is well thought of by those who knew him After the shooting Johnson was arrested and brought before Justice Erickson and bound over without bonds to await the action of the grand jury.

FUGITIVE SHOT TWICE.

Daring Dash for Liberty in Montana Is Futile.

Missoula, Mont., May 13. — After making a daring dash for liberty and eluding the officers for over a week, Mike Makahus, who escaped from the Deer Lodge penitentiary, has been captured near here and is now in the county jail with a bullet wound through his arm and another in his thigh. Makahus was captured near Fort Missoula by a colored rancher named Golden, who had been told to look out for the escaped convict, Makahus resisted arrest and tried to get away from Golden, whereupon the latter shot him twice with a rifle, the shots striking him in the wrist and thight.

HOLES SHOT IN PARSONAGE.

Farmer Is Alleged to Have Riddled Home of Pastor.

Aberdeen, S. D., May 13. — Deputy Sheriff Hazle was called to Gem township last night to arrest a farmer named Anton Salberg, who, it is alleged, had been terrorizing the neighborhood, and who was held to await the result of an examination as to his sanity. Salberg, it was charged, had been threatening the people in the neighborhood in which he lived and had riddled the house of Rev. C. M. Grimsrud, a Lutheran preacher, with bullets. Salberg accuses his neighbors of stealing from him.

Two Drowned.

Iowa City, Iowa, May 13.—William N. Thornburg and Miss Elizabeth Ogden of Linden, Iowa, are thought to have been drowned last evening while on their way home from a picnic up the Iowa river. Their boat was found floating bottom up below a break in the dam. The bodies have not been recovered.

ROBBERS RIFLE STORE.

Men Seen in Iowa Town Are Sought by Police.

Vinton, Iowa, May 12. — Robbers made a big haul of cash and jewelry at Dills & Son's jewelry store. Two suspicious looking characters had been seen hanging about the place and they are supposed to have committed the robbery and escaped on a Rock Island train. The men gained an entrance to the store through a rear window. The safe was not molested, but the goods in the showcases and the money in the cash drawers were taken. The sheriff has sent descriptions of the suspects to all surrounding towns, and a reward of $50 is offered for their apprehension.

HANDCAR IS DYNAMITED.

Explosive on Track Injures Workman Near Bemidji.

Bemidji, Minn., May 12.—A stick of dynamite which got on the railway track in some mysterious manner blew up a handcar which was being operated by four men, and Harold Swanson received a serious wound. The other men escaped. The car was being operated at a fair speed, and when at a point four miles east of here it suddenly struck the dynamite and an explosion of great violence occurred. The car was lifted into the air and dropped in a ditch. An investigation is being made in an endeavor to explain the presence of the dynamite on the track.

FIRE LOSS IS $20,000.

Coal Chute and Cars Burned at Grand Forks.

Grand Forks, N. D., May 12.—The Great Northern coal chute building caught fire from an engine spark late yesterday afternoon, and before the fire was under control property valued at $20,000 had been destroyed. The coal chute, section house, five cars loaded with coal, ties and lumber of a probable value of $10,000 belonging to the railroad company are a total, and $6,000 damage was done to the wood working establishment of Bailes & Perkins, where the fire was controlled after a 50 per cent loss on the frame factory buildin.

NEARLY DIG OUT OF JAIL.

Three Prisoners Are Caught Working at Last Layer of Bricks.

Wahpeton, N. D., May 12.—Three prisoners in the county jail tried to make their escape by digging through the wall of the jail. They were discovered in the act by the sheriff, who heard a noise in the jail. When discovered they had dug through all but the last layer of brick, and would have gained their liberty in another half hour had they not been caught. The jail is old and the cement is soft, so that the work was easy. The only tools the prisoners had were a couple of knives and a small file.

BOY LOST OR KIDNAPPED.

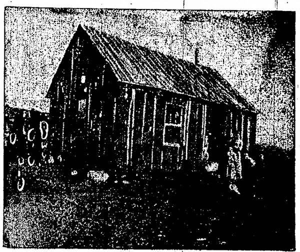
SLAYER GIVEN LIFE SENTENCE

Charles Houtari Sent Up for Life for Murdering Jacob Pakkonen.

Charles Houtari of Menogha has been sentenced at Frazee to life imprisonment for the murder of Jacob Pakkonen while he and the latter were returning home from the Dakota harvest fields. He was convicted of murder in the second degree.

Herbert Morton, while hunting rabbits, found the body of Pakkonen hidden in a swamp and under a brush heap near McHugh on Nov. 16 last. To this lonely spot the body had apparently been dragged by a horse. A trail of trampled grass led from a camping ground near the main road where travelers to and from the Dakota harvest fields were accustomed to camp.

A blood-stained letter to Pakkonen from his sweetheart in Finland was the talisman which pointed out the first faint clue upon which the officers were able to work. It bore the postmark of Leonard, N. D., and investigation there led to the discovery that the boy's name was Jacob Pakkonen, and that he had been there at work in company with Charles Houtari, Matt Kukonen and Walter Smith, all from Wadena county, and the three former being Finlanders. The men had separated later in the harvest season, and Houtari and Pakkonen had started home together. It is admitted that the two men traveled together as far as Moorhead, but at that point Houtari claims that Pakkonen left him and that he made the remainder of the homeward juourney alone.



HOME OF BOY WHO DISCOVERED THAT MURDER HAD BEEN DONE.

WHERE HERBERT MORTON FOUND THE BODY OF PAKKONEN.

The prosecution attempted to prove that the two men passed through Detroit on Nov. 4, camped for the night near McHugh, and that at some time before morning the young man was murdered by his partner, Houtari, for the money he was known to carry upon his person.

On Nov. 7 Houtari is shown to have gone to the state land sale at Wadena, and the prosecution attempted to prove that the watch which he carried was Pakkonen's. A shotgun, found by Sheriff Larson in Houtari's granary also was introduced. It was claimed that it had accompanied the men on their trip to Dakota, and that the gun wads found near the dead man in the swamp fitted the gun.

Matt Meskonen, who had been about the Houtari farm for some time, was placed upon the stand. An ordinary rubber shoe was introducer in evidence and Meskonen testified that in the granary, on April 6, he had discovered this rubber hidden behind the end of a board against the rafters of the building, and that in the rubber he had found a watch and chain which afterward were identified as Pakkonen's property, worn by the latter when he worked in Dakota, and also worn by Houtari upon his trip to Wadena, but of which no trace had been discovered since that time, or subsequent to Houtari's arrest. This disclosure came into the case like a thunder clap from a clear sky.

It was noticed at the time the gun was found there were some spots, or stains, upon the wooden stock, and these, together with a red and black wool neck scarf which was taken from the body of the murdered boy, were submitted to Dr. F. F. Wosbrook, professor of pathology and bacteriology and director of laboratories of the state board of health, for scientific analysis of the materials contained in the spots or stains upon both. He stated that in his opinion the spots were blood stains.

DITCH WORK WOULD PAY.

Project at Cost of $250,000 Is Regarded as Good Investment.

The ditch work pending in Freeborn county at this time probably would cost $250,000 to carry it out, but large as the sum is, it is thought that the sum would be more than returned to the owners of the 20,000 or more acres of land that would be affected. If the work was completed it would greatly increase the taxable valuation of the county and the result would be a lower rate, benefiting all taxpayers. Fully 20,000 acres, it is claimed, would be affected by the systems of drainage suggested in the petitions now nending. The redemption of every quarter section in the county means about $50 in taxes; a hundred of them would equal fully $5,000, and in a few years it would amount to a large sum of money.

As a result of the police incestigation into the death of Patrick Shea, who was found dead on the railroad tracks near Dundas, March 18 last, George, alias Dick, Palton, living at Dundas, has been placed under arrest charged with assault in the second degree. Shea had been to Faribault on March 17, and had had some trouble in a saloon. Late at night he started home, and next morning his dead body was found on the railroad track, having been run over by a train. The authorities do not accept the theory of accidental death, but believe Shea was a victim of foul play.

WORK ON NEW PRISON SOON.

Grounds selected at Stillwater by the board of control for the new state prison are now being surveyed, and in a few days grading will be commenced. Clarence H. Johnston, state architect, has nearly completed the plans for the two new structures which will constitute the nucleus of the new prison plant, and a week or two will see the advertisements for bids for erecting the buildings.

The estimated cost of the buildings is about $30,000 each. The board has $75,000 on hand for a new prison, but in addition to the cost of the buildings, there must be built a power plant, and the plumbing and heating provided.

One of the new buildings will be a warehouse. The other will be a manufacturing plant on the first floor, and on the second a dormitory for men. The building will be so constructed that eventually, as the demand becomes imperative for more machinery room, the dormitory can be done away with and the entire building used for manufacturing.

IN the national cemetery at Chattanooga hundreds of government tombstones are raised above the bones of dogs, cattle and other animals. It is not the fault of the government but the greed of the people about Chattanooga, who, when the bones of the buried soldiers fallen in the three days fighting at Chicamagua were exhumed, took advantage of the pay to impose the bones of animals upon the government. And now comes the story that in the place of the remains of John Paul Jones, reverently placed in a tomb at Anapolis, there lie buried there the remains of a Welch coachman, plain "Bill" Jones who was killed in a drunken brawl in Paris. But in neither case is the honor paid to the material dust or bones but to the memory of men who will always be held in reverence while the government shall endure.

A very large number of country newspapers are being taken in by a baking powder company. They have been sent articles criticizing this company's competitors and are asked to publish them to all intents and purposes upon their own responsibility and at two cents a line. The COURIER feels like Sen. Sorghum who was offered two dollars to vote for a certain measure. "How dare you offer me a bribe," he exclaimed, "besides" he added, "two dollars isn't enough."

ONE Beeman who used to build chewing gum, and who is now receiving $27,000 a year in dividends, has asked the government to increase his pension from $8 to $12 a month because of "total incapacity for manual labor." That is the complete and grand finale of the uttermost limit and hereafter we shall refuse to eat any more of his blooming old gum.

THE COURIER is pleased to welcome to the city Mr. F. R. Creglow, the new editor of the Gazette. He is at once a good newspaper man and a good fellow. May he stay long and prosper.

$8.50 PUNCTURE-PROOF TIRES ONLY $4.80 PER PAIR

Regular Price $8.50 per pair. To Introduce We Will Sell You a Sample Pair for Only $4.80 NAILS, TACKS OR GLASS WON'T LET OUT THE AIR

(CASH WITH ORDER $4.55)

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES.

Result of 15 years experience in tire making. No danger from THORNS, CACTUS, PINS, NAILS, TACKS or GLASS. Serious punctures, like intentional knife cuts, can be vulcanized like any other tire.

Two Hundred Thousand pairs now in actual use. Over Seventy-five Thousand pairs sold last year.

HEDGETHORN RECORD PUNCTURE PROOF SELF HEALING TIRE CO CHICAGO USA

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. That "Holding Back" sensation commonly felt when riding on asphalt or soft roads is overcome by the patent "Basket Weave" tread which prevents all air from being squeezed out between the tire and the road thus overcoming all suction. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C.O.D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. We will also send one nickel plated brass hand pump and two Sampson metal puncture closers on full paid orders (these metal puncture closers to be used in case of intentional knife cuts or heavy gashes). Tires to be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination.

We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. Ask your Postmaster, Banker, Express or Freight Agent or the Editor of this paper about us. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a small trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

COASTER-BRAKES, built-up-wheels, saddles, pedals, parts and repairs, and everything in the bicycle line are sold by us at half the usual prices charged by dealers and repair men. Write for our big SUNDRY catalogue.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

Overhanging Street Cars.

In Berlin, Germany, a project is before the city to put in a nonrail hanging street railway. The cars to run on wheels hooked over a rail above in a way much like the old system of the sliding barn door. Elictric power to be supplied by a second rail. The special advantage of this system. like the subway, is its speed. The tracks are much higher than the ordinary elevated road and there is not so much overhead construction to shut out the sunlight. To have bright sunny homes serve golden grain belt beer with your meals. It makes a clear brain, good nerves, strong muscles and a happy home. S.S.S. PURELY VEGETABLE

The fact that S. S. S. is a purely vegetable preparation, containing not the slightest trace of mineral in any form, has been one of the strongest points in its favor during its forty years of existence. It is recognized everywhere not only as the best of all blood purifiers, but the one medicine that can be taken with absolute safety by the youngest child or the oldest member of the family. Next in importance to removing the cause of any disease is the condition in which the system is left after a course of medical treatment. Medicines containing mercury, potash or other strong mineral ingredients often do permanent injury by eating out the delicate lining and tissues of the stomach, producing chronic dyspepsia, unfavorably affecting the bowels and so damaging the system that even if the original cause of the disease has been removed, it is left in such a deranged and weakened condition that the health is permanently impaired. S. S. S. enjoys the distinction of being the only blood medicine on the market that does not contain a mineral property in some form. Being made entirely of roots, herbs and barks it is absolutely harmless to any part of the system, and while curing disease adds strength and health to every part of the body. S. S. S. removes all poisons, freshens and purifies the blood and gives better and more lasting results than any other blood medicine. S. S. S. is the very best treatment for Rheumatism, Catarrh, Scrofula, Sores and Ulcers, Skin Diseases, Contagious Blood Poison and all troubles due to an impure or poisoned blood supply. Besides being the King of blood purifiers S. S. S. is the best and most invigorating of all tonics.

County Superintendent McAnulty has received advices from State Superintendent Olson that the law set forth in the new code regarding the ages at which children of the public schools could draw apportionment is unconstitutional, and that the old law will obtain in the future. The new law fixes the ages at from six to twenty-one years. This is the part which is declared unconstitutional, according to the state superintendent, and the old law, which allows children from five to twenty-one to draw the apportionment, will continue to prevail.

WASTED TO A SHADOW.

But Found a Cure After Fifteen Years of Suffering.

A. H. Stotts, messenger at the State Capitol, Columbus, O., says: "For fifteen years I had kidney troubles, and though I doctored faithfully, could not find a cure. I had heavy backaches, dizzy headaches and terrible urinary disorders. One day I collapsed, fell insensible on the sidewalk, and then wasted away in bed for ten weeks. After being given up, I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. In a couple of months I regained my old health, and now weigh 188 pounds. Twelve boxes did it, and I have been well two years."

Sold by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Didn't Like It.

"Johnny, did I not hear you say something in the pantry just now?"

"Yes'm, I said 'Rubber!'"

"And what made you say that in such an angry tone of voice?"

"I was goin' to steal some jam an' I remembered what you said about the Lord seein' everything I do."

Danger.

"How did Mr. Scadds make his money?" asked the inquisitive girl.

"My dear," answered Miss Cayenne, "you must never again ask such a question about any one. People will think you are writing for a magazine."

A Valuable Agent.

The glycerine employed in Dr. Pierce's medicines greatly enhances the medicinal properties which it extracts and holds in solution much better than alcohol would. It also possesses medicinal properties of its own, being a valuable demulcent, nutritive, antiseptic and antiferment. It adds greatly to the efficacy of the Black Cherrybark, Golden Seal root, Stone root and Queen's root, contained in "Golden Medical Discovery" in subduing chronic, or lingering coughs, bronchial, throat and lung affections, for all of which these agents are recommended by standard medical authorities.

In all cases where there is a wasting away of flesh, loss of appetite, with weak stomach, as in the early stages of consumption, there can be no doubt that glycerine acts as a valuable nutritive and aids the Golden Seal root, Stone root, Queen's root and Black Cherrybark in promoting digestion and building up the flesh and strength, controlling the cough and bringing about a healthy condition of the whole system. Of course, it must not be expected to work miracles. It will not cure consumption except in its earlier stages. It will cure very severe, obstinate, chronic coughs, bronchial and laryngeal troubles, and chronic sore throat with hoarseness. In acute coughs it is not so effective. It is in the lingering coughs, or those of long standing, even when accompanied by bleeding from lungs, that it has performed its most marvelous cures. Send for and read the little book of extracts, treating of the properties and uses of the several medicinal roots that enter into Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and learn why this medicine has such a wide range of application in the cure of diseases. It is sent free. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y. The "Discovery" contains no alcohol or harmful, habit-forming drugs. Ingredients all printed on each bottle wrapper in plain English.

Sick people, especially those suffering from diseases of long standing, are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter, free. All correspondence is held as strictly private and sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Send 21 one-cent stamps for paper-covered, or 31 stamps for cloth-bound copy.

Hospitality.

"Talk about hospitality," observed the portly passenger as he lighted an obese cigar with a red and gold life preserver around its stomach, "they certainly have it down in Atlanta. During a three days' sojourn there recently they would not let me spend a cent."

"Must be something like Chicago,' rejoined the tin can drummer. "The last time I was there they didn't let me spend a cent, either."

"So?" queried the other, skeptically

"It is even so," continued the tin can man. "They held me up half a square from the depot and took every cent I had away from me."

Appropriate.

When the verdict was rendered, the friends of the fair plaintiff gathered about her and congratulated her on having obtained a divorce.

"What will you do with your alimony?" they asked.

"I think I shall build a house," she replied, "if I can find the right location."

..The Filibusters of Venezuela..

Or the Trials of a Spanish Girl.

By SEWARD W. HOPKINS.

Copyrighted 1900 by Robert Bonner's Sons.

CHAPTER XVIII.—(Continued.)

"Who are you?" he asked in English. As no reply came he repeated the question in Spanish.

"Don't shoot, senor!" came a voice in Spanish. "I am only a poor Carib."

"Advance, poor Carib, and give the countersign," said Lord Chugmough; whereat William, who did not understand Spanish, lunged forward to have a good look at the intruder.

Suddenly both he and his master were startled at hearing a low, sweet voice, as of a frightened child, cry:

"Save me! Oh, save me!"

"Bless my soul!" said Lord Chugmough. "It's a girl!"

"Ha young lady, me lord," said William.

Lord Chugmough strode forward and took the yielding form from the arms of the cringing Carib.

"Who is she?" he asked. "Why is she here?"

"Alas, senor," was the reply, "the river has risen, and I fear the land will be flooded, and I brought the senorita here for shelter. She has been very ill, senor, and in my care, and I must give her some medicine at once."

"Ah! You are a doctor, then?" said Lord Chugmough, looking down upon the beautiful upturned face of the girl he held in his arms.

"Yes," replied the Carib. "I am Namampa, the herb-doctor."

"Oh!" said Lord Chugmough, as if he knew all about it. "William, take the panther and deer skins and prepare a bed for this young lady. She is ill. She—'pon my word—she has fainted."

"No, no! I am ill—weak!" murmured the girl. "That man is an enemy. He——"

"Fear nothing," said Lord Chugmough, in English. "He cannot harm you. Will you tell me your name, senorita?"

"My name is Lola Garza," she whispered. And then, in truth, she fainted.

"She is ill," said the old Carib. "I will give her her medicine, and when the storm has ceased I will take her away again."

Lord Chugmough tenderly laid the slight form down on the skins that William had spread, and then placed his hand on Namampa's arm with a grip that made the old Carib writhe with pain.

"Not till I know where you are taking her," he said. "And, mind, if your medicine doesn't bring her round fair and square, I'll riddle you with lead."

CHAPTER XIX.
The Flood.

The great storm had an influence upon all the characters of this history, and to this influence some of the stirring events which follow may be attributed.

It placed a great barrier between the royalists on the south and the republicans on the north side of the swollen Orinoco, and delayed the departure of Philip of Aragon toward the capital.

But to no one did it bring such distress and danger, change of plan and disaster, as to the two young Americans and the wife and daughter of General Salvarez, who had up to that time been secure in their underground retreat.

The first day of the storm they were content to wait quietly in their apparently safe shelter, fearing nothing.

But on the second day, when the roar of the rushing waters reached their ears, they began to feel anxious, not only for themselves but for Salvarez, for they did not know how far he had got on his journey.

On the third day their anxiety for themselves became so great that nearly everything else was driven from their minds. Toward night, on this third day, the Coroni so far overflowed its banks as to send a rushing, roaring stream into the secret passage.

"We are lost!" cried Dona Maria, when the water began pouring in and spreading out over the floor of the caverns. "Once before there was a storm like this, and the caverns became filled with water."

"Is there any possibility of escape?" asked Tempest.

Jacinta looked dubiously from one to the other.

"The flatboat!" cried Dona Maria, suddenly. "If we could but reach it. It is strong—it can outlive the storm. It is not far from the entrance to the secret passage, if it has not been carried away. Nothing could upset it."

"The very thing!" said Medworth. "Remember, Jack, the large boat at the wharf just above? We have seen it often enough."

"Good!" said Tempest. "We ought to be able to go to it, even if we had to swim."

"Come on," said Medworth, now thoroughly alert and alive to the dangers and possibilities of the situation.

He darted toward the entrance with Tempest splashing along close behind him, leaving Dona Maria and Jacinta huddled together, fearing, hoping, silently watching and trusting their brave companions.

The stream of water that poured in through the entrance was about a foot deep, and the roar of the storm and torrent about them was deafening.

There was no need for caution. The night was dark, and so fierce was the storm that no sentry was outside of the castle or the soldiers' quarters.

Medworth took his knife from his pocket and severed the rope.

With a mighty rush the boat swung down stream and across it, bringing up with a crash against the opposite bank, a short distance below the secret passage.

"Hurray!" shouted Tempest. "If we can wind up forty feet of rope we can bring it to the entrance."

They entered the deck-house and found that with only one mooring the boat moved against the stream as easily as across the current. Ten minutes of hard work brought them to the mouth of the caverns.

Without hesitating, Medworth leaped off and made his way to the hole.

"Dona Maria!" he shouted. "Jacinta! Come! We have the boat and are waiting for you."

The voice of Dona Maria answered him, and soon the wife and daughter of Salvarez were at the entrance.

"Can you get out?" asked Medworth, extending his hand to assist them.

"With your assistance," replied Dona Maria, as, half by her own exertions and half by Medworth's help, she scrambled out of the hole. Jacinta followed her.

To reach the boat, which could not be brought nearer than twelve feet to the mouth of the passage, they were forced to flounder through from one to four feet of water, the depth increasing as they drew nearer the boat, and Medworth found himself unable to keep both women on their feet.

"Come and help me, Jack," he called.

Tempest leaped from the boat and splashed through the water to Arthur's side.

"Dona Maria, your hand," he yelled.

The wife of Salverez put her hand in his, and he led her to the boat, Arthur following with Jacinta.

"Now up," said Tempest. "A hand here, Medworth."

Between them they assisted Dona Maria aboard the flatboat and then lifted Jacinta out of the water and placed her by her mother's side.

Just then a terrific gust of wind lashed the water into increased fury; the strain on the rope was doubled, and it snapped. The boat was hurled away down the Coroni, leaving Tempest standing in the darkness, up to his waist in the rushing waters.

CHAPTER XX.
Tempest's Flight.

"Here's a pretty mess I'm in," said Tempest, when he had realized the full extent of the disaster that had come upon him. "The water rising rapidly, ground almost covered and the rain coming down harder than ever, and the flatboat, our last and only hope, gone and left me. What am I to do, I'd like to know."

He raised his voice to its full volume and shouted Medworth's name, but had he possessed twice the lung power he could not have made himself heard on the boat that was being rapidly borne away in the darkness.

He scrambled back to the highest point of land along the river, the top of the sloping side that led down to the water's edge when the river was at its proper level, and here, just above the flood that was rising to meet him, he stood a moment to collect his scattered senses. If he wished to live, it was plain that he must think quickly and to some purpose, and to act as quickly. His first thought was to return to the secret passage. It suddenly occurred to him that he had no weapon. But in great emergencies, when Tempest was obliged to think quickly, he acquitted himself creditably. It was so in this instance, as it had been in many others all over the world.

"First," he muttered to himself, "I will make His Royal Nibs a visit and see if I can borrow a gun. Then I'll borrow a horse and get away to a higher country, for, if I am not much mistaken, this part will be entirely under water in twenty hours more."

Upon reaching this conclusion he did not hesitate, but plunged through the increasing depth of water that was pouring in through the entrance to the caverns, and floundered through the swash toward the lantern that still hung high up where the water would not reach it for a few hours at least. He hurried up the stone steps to the sliding panel.

Putting his ear to this, he heard voices. At first they were low and indistinct, and Tempest could not hear the words. But a heavy footstep sounded, and then he heard the well-known voice of Gomez.

"By all the saints!" he exclaimed. "This is a wet kingdom of yours, Philip."

"Is the water still rising?" asked the Spaniard.

"Yes," replied Gomez. "Reports have come in from the surrounding country that are truly disturbing. The Caribs at the head of the Coroni are moving up into the mountains. The llanos between here and the Orinoco are becoming completely submerged. Cattle by the thousand are being drowned, and those that have not yet be overwhelmed are huddling together on the high points, and if the storm keeps on forty-eight hours more they will be taken too."

"Is this castle in any danger?"

"No. Francisco tells me that once before they had a storm nearly as bad as this, and the land was covered with water for miles around, yet this castle, and Francisco's own house, both being built on high ground, escaped."

"Is there any danger of starvation—hunger among the troops, I mean?"

"Of course, if the storm continues many weeks, or even one week, I fear there would be; but I hope it will not come to that. The waters subside quickly after the storm ceases."

"But the Orinoco?"

"Ah, that is a serious matter. I fear it will be a good many days before we can cross the great river. The waters may subside here, but the Orinoco will be a raging torrent for days to come. I fear the ships that were on the river when the storm began are by now swept out to sea."

"Then the Turtle, with the remainder of our rifles and ammunition, is gone."

"I fear so, but she may outride the storm and return."

"Let us hope so, at least," said Philip. "But I seem to see only disaster and failure before us."

After a few more words they left the council room together. Tempest listened carefully to the receding footsteps and waited even after they had died away, to learn if any one had been left.

Hearing nothing, he cautiously slid back the panel and peered inside the room.

Finding no one there, he stealthily crept inside and glanced hastily around for a weapon.

"No gun!" he muttered. "Not even a pistol."

Then he chanced to look down at the table.

There, lying upon a map that had been stained by dripping blood, was the knife that had been taken from the dead sentinel.

"Ah, the knife!" said Tempest. "Well, if this is all, it must be made to do."

Hastily seizing it, he crept again through the aperture, closed the panel carefully and went down into the underground passage and out in the terrible torrent.

Above the storm he heard a shrill scream as of a horse in mortal terror, and blindly following the sound as well as he was able to locate it, he soon found himself at the stables.

The stables upon which he had come were not the well-kept stables where the family horses of Salvarez were kept, but the sheds of the artillery and cavalry beasts. They consisted of little more than a long, peaked roof with outreaching eaves, supported by strong posts. Under this roof the horses stood tied in rows.

Tempest plunged in among them and holding the lantern to light his way, severed the leather halters with quick strokes of his knife, and set the horses, one after another, free.

This took him some time, and his arm was weary when he had finished.

When there was but one horse left, he flung himself upon its back, and, cutting the halter, clung to its mane, giving it perfect liberty to go where it would.

And with an abiding faith in the sagacity of the beasts he had liberated, Tempest clung tenaciously to his position and was borne swiftly over the marshy, storm-beaten ground.

GREATEST FRENCH DRAMATIST.

Sardou's Romantic Marriage and His Row with Sarah Bernhardt.

Mlle. Sardou, daughter of the dramatist and academician, was married recently at St. Augustin, Paris, to Comte Robert de Flers, a member of an old French family and a dramatist and critic. The President sent his son, M. Paul Loubet, to express his good wishes. M. Victorien Sardou was himself married under the most romantic circumstances. As a young man he worked and starved in a garret, and disappointment preyed upon his nerves till he fell ill. A young actress, Mlle. de Brecourt, took compassion upon him, nursed him back to health, and introduced his work to the famous actress, Dejazet, through whom he was first acted. Sardou fell in love with and married his benefactress, whose death, ten years later, was the one great sorrow of his life. Sardou has made more money than any other dramatist, and he is probably the only man who ever gave Sarah Bernhardt a shaking. The incident occurred at a rehearsal, and at a period when the divine Sarah was less eminent than she is now. They differed as to the way in which a passage should be declaimed, and Sardou, losing his temper, seized the actress by the shoulder, and gave her a shaking. She retorted by slapping his face, and afterward challenged him to a duel!—London Star.

Done, But Wouldn't Stop.

Sir William Long tells a story of an old Scotch lady who could not abide long sermons. She was hobbling out of kirk one Sunday, when a coachman, who was waiting for his people, asked her: "Is the minister dune wi' his sermon?" "He was dune lange syne," said the old lady, impatiently, "but he winna stop!"

Present to Contemporary King.

It is noted in the annals of Charlemagne as a great occurrence, that he sent a contemporary king a present of two silken gowns as the most valuable gift he could confer.

"I have played a desperate game and I have lost," remarked the stage villain just before his final disappearance. "But you are a darn sight better off than we are," murmured a tired looking man in the front row; "we paid money to get in."

Bath and Beauty.

It is necessary for a person to take as good care of the body as the face to obtain the clear, healthy complexion so much desired by all. A cold bath every morning for very vigorous persons, or once or twice a week, and thoroughly rubbing with a coarse towel or flesh brush mornings when the bath is not taken, for the less robust is necessary to keep the functions of the skin in health and very invigorating. After warm baths at night a dash of cold water will prevent chills. Clothing worn during the day should never be slept in, and that worn at night should be exposed during the day to the air. Quantities of moisture filled with the waste of the body are given off every day and mostly absorbed by clothing. Exposure to air and sunlight purifies the clothing and bedding of the poisons which nature is trying to get rid of and which would otherwise be brought again in contact with the body. By following these healthful everyday directions and taking equally good care of the face you will soon notice a decided improvement in the tone of your whole system.

Crown of Gold.

"The late Paul Lawrence Dunbar, the negro poet," said an editor, "once addressed a Sunday school in New York. An odd incident happened, though, at its end, an incident that Dunbar laughed at as heartily as the rest of us.

"Dunbar, toward the close of his remarks, said:

"'And, my little friends, if you do all these things some day you will wear a gold crown. Yes, each of you some day will wear a gold crown.'

"A little chap in the front row, catching the poet's friendly eye, piped:

"'My fader wears one now.'

"'No!' said the poet.

"'Yes, he does—on his toof,' said the little chap."

The Eyes.

When the eyes have been irritated through excessive use a compress of fine linen wet with very cold water will generally bring relief. An eyewash that is particularly excellent when inflammation has set in can be made by combining 15 drops of spirits of camphor, one teaspoonful of boric acid and two-thirds of a cupful of boiling water. Cool, strain through muslin and apply every hour with an eyecup. Veils with thick, heavy dots are extremely bad for the eyes, and they are not half as pretty as the finer French veils with a large dot scattered here and there. Reading in the twilight or continuing to do fancy work when the eyes are tired should be forbidden.

The "Dead Line."

Look around the world to-day, and see what some of the men who have long passed the "dead line" are doing, and what they have accomplished. Look at the young old military leaders in little Japan who conquered great Russia. Oyama was 20 years past his fatal line when he won his great victories, and all of his corps commanders were past 50. Marquis Ito, the grand old man of Japan, her greatest statesman, and the one who has done more than any other to make Japan what it is to-day, is still active in the service of his country.—Success Magazine.

Cheap and Filling Food.

Now these be the virtues of the cereals; they are cheap, easily swallowed and of moderate nutritive value. There is an element in the average human mind, half puritanic, half stingy, which is inclined to count as a virtue the ingestion of any food which is not especially attractive but believed to be nutritious. In fact, to eat that which is cheap and filling is one of the petty vices.—McClure's Magazine.

Leather Chairs.

To clean and polish the leather coverings of chairs, etc., mix together equal parts of vinegar and linseed oil. Apply very sparingly with a piece of flannel and polish with a soft cloth. The same treatment is excellent for French polished furniture, but it must be remembered that the vinegar and oil mixture is to be applied sparingly, and that "elbow grease" is to be used generously.

Word of Warning to Girls.

Girls, we never tried it, but it is our opinion you had better be an old maid than to be the slave of some worthless man, and there is a great quantity of them in circulation. So don't be in a hurry to marry, you can do that almost any time. Those who have tried it say it is quite a task to cut loose from a stick of a man after you tie up to one.

One of Those Questions.

"So," said Capt. Bragg, describing an experience in the Philippines, "the scouts came up and rescued me just in the nick of time. But, I tell you, I felt at one time that I should become hopelessly insane—"

BOY'S HEAD ONE SOLID SORE.

Hair All Came Out—Under Doctor Three Months and No Better—Cuticura Works Wonders.

Mr. A. C. Barnett, proprietor of a general store in Avard, Oklahoma, tells in the following grateful letter how Cuticura cured his son of a terrible eczema. "My little boy had eczema. His head was one solid sore, all over his scalp; his hair all came out, and he suffered very much. I had a physician treat him, but at the end of three months he was no better. I remembered that the Cuticura Remedies had cured me, and after giving him two bottles of Cuticura Resolvent, according to directions, and using Cuticura Soap and Ointment on him daily, his eczema left him, his hair grew again, and he has never had any eczema since. We use the Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and they keep our skin soft and healthy. I cheerfully recommend the Cuticura Remedies for all cases of eczema. A. C. Barnett, Mar. 30, 1905."

A Change.

"Quarrel, eh? You don't mean it? Why, before they were married she used to say there wasn't another man like him in the world."

"Yes; but now she says she'd hate to think that there was."

"In Love" and Loving.

Being "in love" is very different from loving, and may be only a selfish emotion which is the direct opposite of loving. Being in love without loving is bondage—sometimes pleasant and sometimes painful, but always bondage. True loving means freedom—freedom both for ourselves and, as far as it is in our power to give it, for all whom we love; for when we truly love anothe rhuman being we love him for the sake of his best strength, his best use, and his best happiness, and not at all for the sake of ourselves.

Dog as Guest of Honor.

Shot, a handsome retriever, was the guest of honor and the recipient of a testimonial at a dinner at Hanley on Saturday.

While Mr. Harold Godwin, the son of a builder, was walking through a quiet part of his father's works in December, a man flung a heavy piece of jagged iron at him and stunned him. Shot flew at the ruffian's throat and kept him a prisoner until aid arrived. The dog is the hero of the place and Mr. Godwin's workmen subscribed for a silver collar for him with an inscription.

TRANSFORMATIONS.

Curious Results When Coffee Drinking Is Abandoned.

It is almost as hard for an old coffee toper to quit the use of coffee as it is for a whisky or tobacco fiend to break off, except that the coffee user can quit coffee and take up Postum Food Coffee without any feeling of a loss of the morning beverage, for, when Postum is well boiled and served with cream, it is really bettter in point of flavor than most of the coffee served nowadays, and to the taste of the connoisseur it is like the flavor of fine Java.

A great transformation takes place in the body within ten days or two weeks after coffee is left off and Postum Food Coffee used, for the reason that the poison to the nerves has been discontinued and in its place is taken a liquid that contains the most powerful elements of nourishment.

It is easy to make this test and prove these statements by changing from coffee to Postum Food Coffee.

KIDNEY TROUBLES

Increasing Among Women, But Sufferers Need Not Despair

THE BEST ADVICE IS FREE

Of all the diseases known, with which the female organism is afflicted, kidney disease is the most fatal, and statistics show that this disease is on the increase among women.

Mrs. Emma Sawyer

Unless early and correct treatment is applied the patient seldom survives when once the disease is fastened upon her. We believe Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the most efficient treatment for chronic kidney troubles of women, and is the only medicine especially prepared for this purpose.

When a woman is troubled with pain or weight in loins, backache, frequent, painful or scalding urination, swelling of limbs or feet, swelling under the eyes, an uneasy, tired feeling in the region of the kidneys or notices a sediment in the urine, she should lose no time in commencing treatment with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it may be the means of saving her life.

For proof, read what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for Mrs. Sawyer.

"I cannot express the terrible suffering I had to endure. A derangement of the female organs developed nervous prostration and a serious kidney trouble. The doctor attended me for a year, but I kept getting worse, until I was unable to do anything, and I made up my mind I could not live. I finally decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as a last resort, and I am to-day a well woman. I cannot praise it too highly, and I tell every suffering woman about my case."—Mrs. Emma Sawyer, Conyers, Ga.

The Dilly Dialogues

A HUMOROUS DISCUSSION OF AFFAIRS OF THE TIME

By

CAMPBELL MAC CULLOCH

Dramatic Critic of the New York Telegraph.

(Copyrighted)

"Tell me dear uncle," said little Dilly, looking up from a copy of the Daily Roaster, with a puzzled glance. "What is a chorus girl?"

"A chorus girl?" said uncle George with a queer twinkle in his starboard eye. "A chorus girl, my dear nephew, is equivalent to a multitude of sins heaped upon the devoted shoulders of a millionaire who has more money than experience. She is also a shrinking young thing of frugal habits and a long line of charms, the result of constant vigilance. If we believe the daily prints, she is invariably born of parents socially prominent, of culture and refinement so great that she recoils in horror from the mention of a table leg, has a couple of quarts of diamonds, two automobiles and a fuzzy white dog. She is also willowy, thirsty and hungry. Her food is never anything but lobster a la Newburg, champagne and oysters, and she knows more millionaires than Col. D. Mann. That, Dilly, is the newspaper estimate of the young woman, fed by the fevered imagination of the press agent who labors ceaselessly in her interest."

"But is she really all those things, you have taken pains to enumerate, dear uncle?" asked little Dilly.

"Not always, my boy. I have had a —I mean I knew a man who had a large experience with chorus girls, and er—judging from his remarks, they are an entirely different species. The fact that they occasionally marry a millionaire is not to be set down to their total discredit, for, poor young things, they frequently know not what they do. To their plain untutored minds, a millionaire is the equal of many men, and frequently as good as several. By many of these girls he is almost considered honest enough to go to congress, which, Dilly, will exhibit to you the simple nature of these poor girls."

"But do they all come from high social positions, dear uncle?" inquired Dilly.

"That my poor boy is a pleasant little fiction. The average chorus girl is as familiar with social matters as a wild bull is with the inner mind of a Standard Oil director. As to their descent I can but quote a remark of my dear friend, Oscar Hammerstein, who recently said: 'Servants are not to be had. There are no more servants. In fact they are all in the chorus.' Once, Dilly, I witnessed—er, I mean my friend witnessed a performance of a play from behind the scenes. To my—I mean his—utter astonishment, the coarse individual who presided over the affair took occasion to reprimand a young woman of the chorus by remarking that she might return to the laundry. That, Dilly, shed a great light upon the origin of chorus girls. Not but what chorus girls are useful. Were it not for them I am puzzled to think what our young men would do for amusement. There would be no stage doors to hang about, and in fact nothing to take the place of that pastime. And here, my dear nephew, is a curious fact. Rich young men of good social position will heap attentions, presents and personal service upon girls they would not look at twice were they not upon the stage."

"Are all chorus girls actresses, dear uncle?" asked Dilly.

"No, Dilly. Just on the stage, that's all. Few of them would know the first thing about the art of Booth if it ran rapidly around a corner and made signs in front of them. But for all that they have their uses. Some of them become Coreyized and in this way the poor divorce lawyers manage to eke out a miserable existence. Others rise to the great height and prominence of marrying the delicatessen dealer around the corner, while others develop a marvelous talent for chafing dish work, and in time graduate to the counters of the dairy lunch. Still others manage to do very well with their position. They amass wealth and such trifles, which only goes to show you that a chorus girl of careful habits and frugal disposition may rise in time to a position of affluence, and ease. One can very easily maintain a carriage and an expensive suite of apartments, my boy, on a salary of fifteen per, provided one is careful. It may seem difficult to you at first, but you possibly lack experience.

"Then again, there is always the chance of making a great name for oneself by having one's husband stolen by his indignant relatives, which will enable the deserted wife to go into vaudeville at a salary that is positively out of all proportion to the value received. I may say, my dear nephew, that the chorus girl has on more than one occasion disrupted some important bit of political history, and that she has had considerable influence upon the fate of nations. Four or five American chorus girl interfered so greatly with the Russo-Japanese war that the czar was compelled to halt Prince Boris and cut off the supply of wine and choristers in order that the war might proceed upon regular lines. I could cite you other instances, but this will suffice. Avoid the chorus girl as you would a ripe watermelon, Dilly, for they are not for youth. Leave them severely alone and to your elders."

"Why do old men marry chorus girls, uncle?" queried little Dilly.

"Generally because they are old men," replied Uncle George with considerable feeling. "Sometimes old men despair of ever getting married at all, and they hope to renew their youth in a young and active wife. From the history of such marriages, Dilly, I am led to believe the wife is always particularly active, and takes pride in her activity. Also elderly men who have put in 16 hours a day amassing a fortune are not usually hooked up with experience, and one fluffy-haired charmer in a ballet skirt who knows her business, can tangle an aged goat up so badly in one performance that before he comes out of his trance he is being put through the last stages of the marriage game. After that it is his cue to lie down, roll over and play dead, and he does it without a whimper. I have seen an aged lothario of this type jerked around the country at the heels of the blonde charmer, carrying the fluffy dog, three hat boxes, two gripsacks, an umbrella and a look of pain, until I wondered that the S. P. C. A. did not interfere and prevent further torture, but I have also noticed that the old gazaboes like it and stand for it nobly, until wifey drives them to heart failure and gets into a suit with the sorrowing relatives over the terms of the will. You see, Dilly, rich men have no time to cut loose with the wild oats business, and by the time they get around to it, they are scooped at the start. There is nothing that a rich steel manufacturer, leather merchant, or tallow purveyor will fall for as quick as a chorister, and—but the history is written in the supreme court."

"But are chorus girls of no use, dear uncle?" asked little Dilly.

"Just as much as a national bank, my boy," said Uncle George.

DISASTERS OF VESUVIUS.

Record of Eruptions Dating Back to the Reign of Nero in Rome.

The story of Mount Vesuvius is one of disaster. The first record of the volcano's eruption dates back to 63 A. D., when Nero ruled Rome. Herculaneum and Pompeii were partly destroyed. The following year Naples was threatened with another eruption, but escaped with an earthquake. It was in the reign of Titus, August 24 A. D., 79, that Vesuvius broke loose in all its fury and completely buried the cities of Pompeii, Herculaneum and St. Abiae.

Then the mountain slept and the next eruption is recorded in the reign of Alexander Severus, A. D., 203. There was another eruption, A. D., 473, during which ashes were carried as far as Constantinople. Between that date and the year 1500 nine eruptions of more or less destructiveness occurred.

December 16, 1631, more than 3,000 persons lost their lives in a severe earthquake and flow of lava that extended as far as Tarentum, and destroyed Bosco Trecase, the town which suffered yesterday, and other towns in the vicinity. Another eruption in 1707 lasted four months and kept people of Naples in constant fear of death. Again in 1737, 1760 and 1767 Vesuvius poured forth rivers of lava and showers of ashes, covering Portici and reaching as far as Naples.

In August, 1779, redhot stones were thrown 2,000 feet above the crater of the volcano, and in 1794 more than 400 people lost their lives. On that occasion the lava flowed to the sea. Other eruptions followed in 1804, 1805, 1822, 1850, 1855 and 1858. In the last mentioned year the crater sank 195 feet below its former height.

Torre del Greco was destroyed December 8, 1861. Becoming active again 1871, Vesuvius vomited threateninn lava and hot mud until April of 1876, when the eruption burst suddenly and buried 20 persons who were watching the spectacle and partly destroyed the towns of Mass and San Sebastiano. In 1885, signs of unrest were noticed about the mouth of the crater and for a number of years slight eruptions occurred.

In 1894 a new peak was formed by the slag thrown from the crater, and in 1895 another still. A violent eruption occurred in 1900, since which date the volcano has been almost constantly active. Only last February the flow of lava destroyed the railroad that climbs to the top of the mountain. But it was repaired and sightseers have continued to venture up the sides of the volcano.

Fairest and Most Deadly.

The most deadly lands were ever the fairest, the most opulent in nature's bloom and glory. The golden coast of America is the unstable coast. The greatest profusion of flowers and the richest groves and orchards flourish in an earthquake land. St. Pierre lay in a marvelous profusion of tropical vegetation, looking out on a sea of sapphire, until Mount Pelee blasted all the life and beauty in a breath of flame. The Bay of Naples is world-famed for loveliness. Japan is a dream of exquisite blossoms, foaming waterfalls, noble trees and every alluring form of nature's beauty. It is also a country of many earthquakes and some most terrific storms. The glory of life and the doom of sudden death and destruction run riot together in the East and West Indies. Equatorial America is a marvel of gorgeous color and magnificence in form. Lisbon is famous for the beauty of its site and also for the awful work of the earthquake which laid it in ruins in 1755.—Cleveland Leader.

Views of an Eminent Reformer.

Correspondent—Senator, do you believe in limiting the size of individual fortunes?

Senator Lotsmun—Yes, sir, I do. I believe that when a man has accumulated—well, say twenty or twenty-five millions—he ought to be compelled to give all he makes above that to the campaign fund of whatever political party he happens to belong. That will be the quickest way to get it back into circulation again, particularly, of course, as to the small bills, of which there is always the greater scarcity."

A Difficult Role.

"You ask me if I ever failed in any role I attempted," repeated the great actor. "Yes, once when I tried to look like a sober man."

"Why," exclaimed his friend, "you're alway ssober. You never did drink, did you?"

"No; but on this occasion I was taking two drunken friends home."

She Lost Out.

Mrs. Caller—It doesn't always pay to husband one's resources.

Mrs. Homer—Why not?

Mrs. Caller—Well, I judge so from Mrs. Backer's experience. She let her husband have the $5,000 she inherited from her grandmother, and he lost it all in speculation.

FAINTING SPELLS

Cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, the Remedy Which Actually Makes New Blood.

Anæmia makes the patient short of breath so that there is often a sense of suffocation, sometimes there is a cough and the sufferer seems to be going into consumption, at others there is a murmur of the heart and heart disease is feared. In the following case severe fainting spells were an alarming symptom resulting from "too little blood."

Mrs. George Forrester, of 7 Curtis street, Watertown, N.Y., says: "Some time ago I took a heavy cold and it left me in a very weak condition. I became worse and worse until finally I had anæmia. I lost flesh and appetite, had no color and was subject to fainting spells. Sometimes they would attack me suddenly and I would fall to the floor with hardly any warning.

"I had one of our best physicians, but after he had been attending me about a month without any improvement in my condition, I decided to see what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills would do.

"The pills were well known to me for, about two years before, members of my family had taken them with the best results. I soon found that the pills were just what I needed for I soon began to notice an improvement. After I had taken them a while longer I was entirely cured, and we all believe in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and recommend them highly."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make new blood. They do that one thing and they do it well. Impoverished blood is deficient in red corpuscles. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills increase the number of these red corpuscles and in this way send health and strength to every tissue.

All druggists sell Dr. Williams' Pink Pills or they will be sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

Don't Poison Baby.

FORTY YEARS AGO almost every mother thought her child must have PAREGORIC or laudanum to make it sleep. These drugs will produce sleep, and A FEW DROPS TOO MANY will produce the SLEEP FROM WHICH THERE IS NO WAKING. Many are the children who have been killed or whose health has been ruined for life by paregoric, laudanum and morphine, each of which is a narcotic product of opium. Druggists are prohibited from selling either of the narcotics named to children at all, or to anybody without labelling them "poison." The definition of "narcotic" is: "A medicine which relieves pain and produces sleep, but which in poisonous doses produces stupor, coma, convulsions and death." The taste and smell of medicines containing opium are disguised, and sold under the names of "Drops," "Cordials," "Soothing Syrups," etc. You should not permit any medicine to be given to your children without you or your physician know of what it is composed. COUNTY COMMISSIONERS

Red Lake Falls, Minnesota,
May 7, 1906.

On the call of the county auditor, pursuant to the provisions of Chapter 230 of the laws for 1905, the board of county commissioners of Red Lake county met in special session at the court house at one o'clock p. m., for the purpose of hearing and considering the petition of P. A. Ekstrom and others for the establishment and construction of County Ditch No. 25 in said county and the Engineer's and Viewers' report thereon.

Commissioners Ekstrom, Johnson, Shaw and Falardeau were present.

Commissioner Demann, absent.

The said petition was read and the arguments and objections of all persons interested were heard.

On motion duly carried the report of the viewers was referred back to them for correction as to the assessments against certain tracts of land. The viewers were present and proceeded to make the necessary corrections in their report as agreed upon, after which on motion made by Commissioner Ekstrom and seconded by Commissioner Johnson, the petition and the reports of the engineer and viewers thereon were accepted and the following order establishing County Ditch No. 25 in Red Lake county was made:

STATE OF MINNESOTA, } ss
County of Red Lake.

In the matter of the petition of P. A. Ekstrom and others for a public ditch in the county of Red Lake, state of Minnesota.

The above entitled matter came on duly to be heard by and before the Board of County Commissioners of the county of Red Lake, state of Minnesota at a special meeting of said board duly called for the purpose of hearing and considering the petition for said ditch in the above entitled matter on the seventh day of May, A. D., 1906 at one o'clock p. m., of said day; and it appearing by proper evidence that due notice had been given of the pendency of said petition and of said time of hearing thereon and that James K. Wood, the civil engineer appointed by this board to survey the route of said ditch has completed his work and duly filed his report thereon in the office of the county auditor of said county, and that the viewers appointed by said board and county auditor to view and report thereon upon said work have duly completed their labors and made and filed their report in due form of law in the office of the county auditor, the said board of county commissioners did, at the time above specified, proceed to hear said petition and said viewers' report thereon; and said board having duly considered said petition and heard all the parties interested for or against the construction of said ditch and all other matters pertaining thereto, find as follows, towit:

FIRST: That the said civil engineer has completed his work and made and filed his report therein in all respects according to law.

SECOND: That the said viewers appointed herein have duly completed their labors and have made and filed their report thereon according to law.

THIRD: That the estimated benefits to be derived from the construction of said work are greater than its total cost, including damages awarded.

FOURTH: That the damages and benefits arising from the construction of said ditch have been duly awarded and assessed, and that said reports of said engineer and viewers are complete and correct.

FIFTH: That notice of this hearing of said petition and of said viewers' report and said Engineer's report has been duly given, published and posted and mailed as by law required, and that proofs of said service of said notice have been duly made and filed in the office of the county auditor of said county.

NOW, THEREFORE, As conclusions from the foregoing findings, we, the board of county commissioners of said county of Red Lake, state of Minnesota, at said special session of said board held at the time above specified, being satisfied that the proposed ditch will be of public utility and conducive to public health and public benefit and convenience, and that the same is necessary for the reasons stated in the petition therefor, do hereby locate and establish the said ditch according to the report and the specifications of said Civil Engineer made and filed herein; and do hereby establish and confirm the report of the viewers made and filed herein.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the damages awarded to the persons and corporations named in the Viewers' report herein, in excess of benefits, be paid out of the County Treasury of said county on warrants to be drawn and attested by the Auditor of said County and signed by the chairman of this board of county commissioners: and that said warrants be issued at the expiration of the time for appeal from this order in favor of such persons and corporations as shall not then have appealed, and shall be dated and become due and payable immediately after the letting of the contracts for the construction of the ditch herein referred to; and that in case of appeal from this order, or in case of any postponement or delay in determining the amount of damages due to any persons or corporations, the warrant in favor of such persons or corporations shall not be issued until the final determination thereof.

Given under our hands this seventh day of May, A. D., 1906. By the Board,
(Seal) —DANIEL SHAW,
Chairman, Board County Commissioners, of Red Lake county, Minnesota.
Attest: James E. Ford,
County Auditor
and Ex-officio Clerk of Board.

The vote on the foregoing order was as follows:
Aye, Commissioners Ekstrom, Johnson, Shaw and Falardeau.
No, None.

On motion duly carried the Board adjourned sine die.

WEDDED AT HIGH NOON

Prominent Red Lake Falls Couple Married on Tuesday.

Mr. Dan Omer Hall and Miss Marie Ida Rosalba Lemieux were married Tuesday at high noon at the residence of Rev. Father Fayolle of St. Joseph's church, Father Fayolle performing the ceremony. The bridesmaid was Miss Rosa Harren and the best man Mr. Adlard Lemieux, a brother of the bride. The four flower girls were Florence Stuhr, Rosalba, Laura and Leonora Lemieux.

The bride was most charmingly gowned in a dress of white chiffon and carried bride's roses. Miss Harren was dressed in white China silk and carried pink roses. After the ceremony a bridal dinner was served at the home of the bride's parents where the house was beautifully decorated, a color scheme of purple and white prevailing. The purple and white are the colors of the Merry Crew club of which the bride is a member. There was a profusion of violets and white carnations, purple and white ribbon. Only the Merry Crew and most intimate friends were bidden to the feast where joy reigned thruout the afternoon. There were many presents.

Mr. and Mrs. Hall departed on the afternoon train for Auburn, Nebraska, where Mr. Hall's parents reside. They expect to be gone a month and on their return will be at home to their friends after July fifteenth. At the depot there gathered a large number of friends who decorated the train inside and out with flags and pink and white hearts. It was a fitting bon voyage.

Miss Lemieux is a daughter of Dr. Israel Lemieux, born and raisen in Red Lake Falls, a most charming young lady. The groom occupies the position of operator at the Great Northern depot. He is of the sterling qualities that make for good citizenship and both he and his bride are subject of congratulation and good wishes.

Among those from out of town attending the wedding were Mrs. C. Sture, P. Stuhr of Euclid, Minn., and Miss Albina Lemieux of Mondak, Mont.

WILL PLAY BALL GAME

High School Team and Have-Beens Next Wednesday Afternoon.

The high school ball team will play a bunch of misfits, for complimentory purposes called the Have Beens. next Wednesday afternoon. The Have-Beens number several who knew something of the game when it was in its infancy, and while a good game may result, it's a two-dollar dog against a three-dollar horse that 'the school boys win. Following is the line up.

Have-Beens—H. Healy, third base; A. Pouliot, first base; Sam Hunt, left field; Adlard Lemieux, shortstop; Carl Peterson, second base: F. Richards, catcher; J. Pahlen, right field; V. Healy, center field; E. J. Buse, pitcher.

Game will be called at 3 o'clock and admission to the grounds will be free.

Stubborn Fact.

There are those who have grown tired of all the talk about health and sanitation, have lifted the banner of reaction, and crying: "Let's stop thinking about one's insides! The watched kettle doesn't boil. We are in danger of becoming a race of hypochondiacs." True, there is nothing worse for one's insides than thinking about them expect, possibly, tinkering with them. But there's the stubborn fact that buckwheat cakes aren't as good as they taste—it's one of the tragedies of life. And, then' we must all admit that golden grain belt beer is actually a necessity rather than a luxury. It aids digestion and tones up the whole system. MEMORIAL DAY IS TO BE OBSERVED

Exercises to be Held Wednesday Morning Under Auspices of Maj. Beck Post.

Program of the Day—Stores Asked to Close and Citizens to Participate.

Red Lake Falls will observe Memorial Day, Wednesday May 30, in a manner befitting the tribute which all patriotic citizens pay to the memory of our country's defenders, dead and living. Taps are being sounded with ever increasing frequency for the members of the Grand Army of the Republic and here in Red Lake Falls there remain but six of the gallant boys in blue who participated in the titantic struggle known the world over as the Civil war.

A meeting was held at the city hall Monday evening under call of Mayor J. A. Duffy who was chosen chairman. Dr. Lemieux was made secretary. The program of the day as outlined includes a parade at 9:30 in the morning of the Red Lake Falls band, Maj. Beck Post. G. A. R., civic societies and school children. The march will be from the Lafayette school to the city hall, where the following exercises will be held under the auspices of the Post:

There will be no organized decoration of the graves but the afternoon will be devoted to individual work at the several cemeteries.

Mayor Duffy has preferred a request of the business men that they close their stores from 9 o'clock to 1 and it will generally be done. All lodges, associations, athletic and ball teams are invited to join in the parade thus showing due respect for the patriot dead and loyality to the principles for which they fought.

Proclamation.

May 30 has been set apart and is known as Memorial Day. At such time it is the universal custom thruout this broad land of ours to lay aside the cares of business and devote the day to doing honor to our country's defenders, those who fell in battle those who have died and those who still live. The ranks of veteran heroes are thining day by day as the grim reaper comes to claim his own. A few years yet and none will be left to tell the story of the dark days of rebellion and our children's children shall know of it only thru history. In the declining years, the aged and battle scarred hero should more and more be comforted with the simple honors we may yet do him in life.

Now, therefore, I, J. A. Duffy, mayor of Red Lake Falls, do earnestly and sincerely request that all business be suspended on that day; that business houses be closed from 9 a. m. to 1 p. m. and that our citizens join with Maj. Beck Post. G. A. R. in paying tribute to the honored dead in thought and deed that those living may know a grateful country will never forget. J. A. Duffy, Mayor.

COUNTY AUDITORS AWARD CONTRACT

Standard Drainage Company of Windom Will Construct Judicial Ditch No. 4.

Contract for County Ditch No. 25 Will Be Let by Commissioners on June 11.

County Auditor James E. Ford of Red Lake county, County Auditor N. A. Hoffard of Polk county and Engineer George A. Ralph got together at Crookston last Friday and awarded a contract for the construction of Judicial ditch number 4 to the Standard Drainage company of Windom, Minnesota.

There were five bidders with the amount of their bids as follows: Standard Drainage Co., $.12 a yard; R. C. Elzy, $.1387; T. Morinville, $.1475; E. A. Moran, $.1489; D. Linnihan, $.1549. The Standard Drainage company's bid being the lowest the contract was awarded them.

The ditch lies in the eastern part of Polk county and the southeastern part of Red Lake county and calls for an excavation of 255,000 yards. The total cost of the work approximates $36,610. Work will not be commenced until spring next year but it is estimated that four months will be sufficient time to complete it. The company, getting the contract is planning to dig the ditch with a dredger and will have all its machinery on the ground prepared for active operations as soon as the weather will permit.

DITCH NO. 25

The construction of county ditch No. 25 having been ordered by the board of county commissioners, County Auditor Ford will receive bids for the work up to June 11, at which time the bids in will be opened and a contract awarded. There will be about 55,000 yards in the construction work.

Advice To Pitchers.

The first requisite for a pitcher is a lobster-red sweater to conceal the pitching arm between innings. After purchasing a sweater the pitcher should take a course in the best method of twisting himself into a pretzel, with one foot waving a gentle salute to the batsman. He should spin his arms above his head like the sweep of an old fashioned windmill, permitting the ball to escape from his custody at the exact moment the batsman is lost in doubt whether a surgeon will be called upon to distangle his legs and arms and straigten out his vertebrae.

Never confide in the batsman the character of ball you intend to deliver. Never hurl the ball over the grand-stand when men are on bases. Always have good control. Use speed on your fast balls. Never give a base on balls, the games that have been lost through the excessive generosity of some pitchers would win a pennant in Crookston, maybe. A pretty safe plan to follow is to strike out the heavy batters and permit the fielders to take care of the weak ones.—Ex.

INTER-SCHOLASTIC MEET SATURDAY

Six Northern Minnesota High Schools Will Contest at Thief River Falls.

Special Train Will Carry Supporters of Red Lake Falls Purple and Gold.

Greek will meet Greek at the first annual meet of the Red River Valley Inter-Scholastic Athletic Association to be held at Thief River Falls next Saturday and every preparation is being made to produce an event that will stimulate many future meets.

Red Lake Falls, Warren, East Grand Forks, Fertile, Crookston and Thief River Falls Highs will be the contestants at this time and each has been doing the most careful training in the hope of carrying off the honors.

An effort is being made to get a special train from this city to carry the large number of supporters of the purple and gold of Red Lake Falls who have signified their intention of going. Such a train would leave here before the regular train in the morning and return after the events of the day are over.

On account of the fact that East Grand Forks. and Fertile delegations will have to pass through Crookston in order to reach their destination a special train will be run from that city Saturday morning in order to reach the grounds of contention in time to carry out all of the events and have some "fun" besides. The two places that will join Crookston are being communicated with about the details of the excursion at the present time. From the present indications there will be about 50 or 75 from there who will uphold the cerise of the locals. The train will probably leave that city Saturday morning about seven o'clock.

The Red Lake Falls Highs track team will consist of Walter Buse, Ralph Healy, Albert LaFreniere, Harry Garceau and Roy Blake, captain. There may be one or two others who will be decided upon before Saturday.

MAY BE CALLED OFF.

Developments this morning indicate that the meet may be called off.

East Grand Forks has pulled out owing to Thief River refusing to guarantee expenses. If they persist in refusal the meet will be called off for this week and held some other place.

It is also stated this morning that a special train cannot be arranged for from Red Lake Ealls and those who wish to go will take the regular train.

The whole affair is up in the air and there may be no telling what the outcome will be until tomorrow or even Saturday morning.

"SOONER" LOSES LAND.

Larson's Settlement, Although First, Is Found Unlawful.

The register and receiver of the Cass Lake United States land office have made an important decision in the case of Peter M. Larson vs. C. J. Hansey, which is a prior settlement contest, the lands in question being a part of the ceded Chippewa reservation.

The contest was started to establish the prior rights of actual settlement and entry. The decision made by the local land officials states that Larson, the contestee, went upon the land for settlement five seconds prior to the time set for filing, and that the defendant, Hansey, made his entry at one minute past 9 o'clock on the day of entry. The secretary of the interior, in issuing orders to govern the opening of the land, declared that any one going on the lands for the purpose of establishing settlement prior to the hour set for the filing at the land office would be considered and dealt with as trespassers, and preference would be given the prior legal applicant, notwithstanding the unlawful settlement.

In the decision the register and receiver say:

"The premature entrance of the alleged settler upon the land can avail nothing. In view of the fact that Hansey's entry was made not later than one minute after 9 a. m., and especially in view of the fact that if Larson, as directed by said order, had remained outside of the boundaries of the lands which were opened on said day, it would have been a physical impossibility for him to have posted his notice and commenced the digging of his well at the point selected by him prior to the time of the completion of Hansey's entry. Preference should be given Hansey as the prior legal application, as is proved in the portion of the order quoted."

This decision is far-reaching and will have the effect of establishing a precedent for several other contests that were started on other entries made at that time.

DR. LEACH IS PRESIDENT.

Minnesota Homeopaths Choose St. Paul Man for Office.

Dr. R. B. Leach of St. Paul was elected president of the Minnesota Homeopathic association at the annual meeting held in Minneapolis. Other officers elected were:

First Vice President — Dr. A. E. Booth, Minneapolis.

Second Vice President — Dr. A. G. Moffatt, Howard Lake.

Secretary — Dr. Norman B. Smith, Minneapolis.

Treasurer—Dr. Margaret Koch, Minneapolis.

Censors — Doctors T. W. Ashley, River Falls; S. G. Cobb, Merriam Park; H. H. Leavitt, Minneapolis.

Executive Committee—Doctors H. M. Lufkin, B. H. Ogden and W. S. Buggs, St. Paul; O. K. Richardson and R. D. Matchan, Minneapolis; A. T. Hammond, Winnebago City; J. H. Beatty, St. Cloud, and A. B. Cole, Fergus Falls.

Dr. R. B. Leach, the new president, made one of the most emphatic addresses of the institute when he scored the medical force sent out by the government to fight yellow fever in the South last summer. Dr. Leach was there and gained national fame by opposing and criticising the government's physicians. The address was illustrated with drawings of mosquitoes on a large plan.

MAY FACE GRAND JURY.

Town Clerk and Supervisors' Cases May Be Brought Under Probe.

M. M. Meyers, town clerk of the township of Hillman, near Little Falls, and I. W. Drivers and A. O. Mohler, members of the board of supervisors of the same town, may be obliged to face the grand jury at its next meeting to answer to a charge of misusing the public funds intrusted to their care as officers of the township.

These three, together with C. F. Taylor, another member of the board, were arrested and brought to Little Falls two weeks ago on a complaint sworn to by William Geier, which charged them with misusing the road funds. Their preliminary examination was held on Thursday of last week. Taylor pleaded guilty to the charge, and as it appeared that so far as he was concerned there was no premeditation, he was let off with a nominal fine of $1. The other defentants refused to say anything about the charges against them, and after vainly endeavoring to extort answers from them, the county attorney moved to dismiss the case. He now will bring the matter before the grand jury for its investigation, he says.

COWCATCHER CATCHES HEN.

Engineer Takes Bird Home to Start Flock.

When a Great Northern ore train pulled into Hibbing recently the engineer found a fat Plymouth Rock hen wedged in between the bars of the cowcatcher, very much frightened but unhurt. The fowl had been struck by the train at Leighton, fifteen miles south, and had made the swift trip without injury. The engineer captured the squawking biddy and she will form the nucleus of a flock.

RESUME OF THE NEWS

CZAR SEEKS TO AVOID RUPTURE

IMPERIAL REPLY TO THE DOUMA WILL BE TEMPERATE AND DELIBERATE.

TALK OF WITTE FOR DICTATOR

FORMER PREMIER PLANS COUP D'ETAT GIVING HIM SUPREME POWER.

St. Petersburg, May 19. — Public opinion is greatly excited as to how the emperor and the government will meet the definite attitude of the lower house of parliament.

Many Constitutional Democrats are not yet convinced that the government will seek a compromise. They see indications that the bureaucracy is preparing for a desperate fight.

The Rech, their organ, still considers it possible that an attempt may be made to disperse parliament and also prints a rumor that Count Witte is trying to bring about a coup d'etat which would result in his appointment as dictator by the emperor.

Finishes First Great Work.

Sitting until long after 2 o'clock this morning, the lower house of the national parliament set its seal upon its first great work, the adoption of the address in reply to the speech from the throne setting forth the aims and aspirations of Russia's millions.

Despite attacks both from the right and from the left, the leaders of the Constitutional Democrats held their followers together to the last, and the address was adopted substantially in the form in which it was proposed by the committee.

Will Refuse Some Points.

St. Petersburg, May 20.—The issue of the first encounter between the monarch and the representatives of the people hangs in the balance. Though the representative chamber of parliament and the council of the empire adopted addresses in reply to the speech from the throne, no answer has been given to either and none is expected before Monday. President Mouromtseff, who had hoped to obtain an audience of Emperor Nicholas for the presentation of the address of the lower house, received instead an invitation to a gala birthday luncheon at the Peterhof today, a function to which no other high functionaries have been bidden.

Czar Will Be Temperate.

There is no intimation on the court side that this invitation is connected with the request for an audience. The parliamentary leaders, on the other hand, consider that the failure to include the other deputies who were instructed to accompany President Mouromtseff, renders it impossible for the the president to discuss the address even informally.

The Associated Press is informed that the imperial reply, which will be delivered through a speech by Premier Goremykin, probably at the first session of the house after President Mouromtseff has been received, will, as already predicted, be temperate and deliberate, seeking but on the other hand not concealing the emperor's view that parliament in many respects has attempted to infringe the imperial prerogative. On these points, the response will be a calm refusal.

To Avoid Rupture,

Relative to the eagerly expected amnesty the Associated Press learns that the cabinet has not yet adopted any recommendation, deciding that it is merely a matter for the emperor's personal prerogative.

DONATIONS OF MINE STOCK.

Interstate Commission Hears Addition l Testimony on Subject.

Pittsburg, May 20. — Alexander Beckman, the anarchist who attempted to assasinate Henry C. Frick, and who has been in prison for fourteen years for the crime, was released from the Allegheny county workhouse, where he served his last year, at 8:20 o'clock yesterday morning. Beckman was met at the door of the workhouse by a score of detectives representing the cities of Pittsburg and Allegheny, while a number of private detectives supposed to represent H. C. Frick were on hand.

Beckman was told by Detective William Ellmore of the Pittsburg force that the sooner he got out of the city the better it would be for him. Beckman replied with a bitter smile that he could not get away too quickly to suit himself, and that he would leave as soon as he settled up a few affairs. That business took him until 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, when he boarded a Pittsburg, Fort Wayne & Chicago train for Chicago.

"Muggsy" McGraw Arrested.

Pittsburg, May 19. — John J. McGraw, manager of the New York National league baseball team, was arrested here last night charged by Edward Brady with assault upon his thirteen-year-old son, Neill Brady.

No Sawed-Off Officers.

Washington, May 19.—Five feet and five inches is the medium height for commissioned officers entering the army from civil life fixed by a general order published yesterday by Gen. Bell, chief of staff.

HOT BATTLE WITH LOOTERS

SOLDIERS AT SAN FRANCISCO FOIL DARING ATTEMPT OF ROBBERS.

San Francisco, May 19.—A daring attempt to loot the United States subtreasury, located on Commercial and Kearney streets, was foiled last night by soldiers from Company G of the Eleventh infantry. The soldiers were detailed to guard Uncle Sam's treasure box, and they claim that their fire was returned by the men who were attempting to loot the safes in the building.

Six men were detailed to guard the treasury last night, three men being located on either side of the place.

Guards Give Chase.

At 11:30 o'clock the men stationed on the Commercial street side say they noticed a man attempting to reach the entrance to the building. He was ordered to halt, but, instead, started to run, whereupon a guard fired at him. The bullet did not take effect and two of the guards gave chase, leaving their one companion behind. Almost immediately the soldiers on the Clay street side began firing and the one guard on Commercial street side says he saw four men run to the windows of the upper story of the treasury building. Guard Hammon was on Commercial street and he says he immediately opened fire and the forms in the windows replied with shots from their revolvers.

Thirty Shots Exchanged.

Fully thirty shots were exchanged in the fray, some of the bullets striking the wall of the building on the north side of Commercial street. The men were seen later to come down stairs, but were not again heard of. Attracted by the noise of the battle, Detective Sergeant Taylor headed a detail of police and commenced a search for the would-be looters. He was aided in the work by the national guards who were stationed at Portsmouth Square. The soldiers and police carried lanterns and stopped every person whom they met in the district but all were able to give a satisfactory account of themselves.

MAN WHO SHOT FRICK FREE.

Met t Prison G te by Score of Detectives Who Urge Deparure.

Philadelphia, May 20.—After hearing much additional testimony concerning donations of coal mining stock to officials and employes of the Pennsylvania railroad, the interstate commerce commission yesterday adjourned until next Wednesday, when it will proceed with its inquiry into alleged discriminations by the railroads in the distribution of cars.

Frank H. Wigton, president of the Morrisdale Coal company, yesterday corrected his statement of Thursday that his company had received rebates from the Pennsylvania railroad within a few months of the retirement of General Traffic Manager Joyce in 1903. Mr. Wigton said that upon investigation he found that his company had received no rebates after 1900.

F. M. Gross, Western manager of the Keystone Coal and Coke company, told of men in the motive power department of the Pennsylvania railroad who owned stock in the various coal companies.

Edward Pitcairn, trainmaster on the Pittsburg division, admitted having accepted stock in coal companies, and R. B. Freeman, another trainmaster, said he received Christmas presents of money from coal companies.

BAD TOOTH ALMOST FATAL.

Leads to Blood Poisoning and Then to Lockjaw.

Dublin, May 20. — Michael Davitt, who is now improving, had a narrow escape from death as the result of a complication of blood poisoning and a mild form of lockjaw. The trouble commenced with a bad tooth. The inflammation extended to the cheek, necessitating an operation. Blood poisoning, accompanied by a form of lockjaw, followed, the patient's jaw having to be forced to admit nourishment. For forty-eight hours his life was despaired of, when another operation was decided upon, and this time it is believed it was successfully performed. Mr. Davitt had not realized his danger until John Dillon happened to call on him and found his condition serious.

FOR FEDERAL RAILROAD ACT.

Senator Newlands Will Report Joint Commission Bill.

Washington, May 20. — Senator Newlands has been authorized by the members of the interstate commerce commission to report his bill for the creation of a joint commission consisting of members of the senate and house of representatives to frame a report as to the practicability and advisability of a national incorporation act for railroads engaged in interstate and foreign commerce.

SENATE PASSES THE RATE BILL

FORAKER, MORGAN AND PETTUS ONLY SENATORS VOTING IN NEGATIVE.

MEMORABLE FIGHT IS ENDED

FIFTY-EIGHT SPEECHES MADE DURING SEVENTY DAYS' DELIBERATION.

Washington, May 19. — After seventy days of almost continuous deliberation the senate yesterday at 4:53 p. m. passed the railroad rate bill by the practically unanimous vote of 71 to 3. The three negative votes were cast by Senators Foraker (Rep., Ohio) and Morgan and Pettus (Dem., Ala.). There was a somewhat larger attendance of senators than usual, but the attendance in the galleries was by no means abnormal, and there was no manifestation of any kind when the result was announced. There was, however, an almost general sigh of relief among senators.

Fifty-Eight Speeches Made.

The bill has received more attention from the senate and from the country at large than any measure that has been before congress since the repeal of the purchasing clause of the Sherman act, in 1893.

It was reported to the senate Feb 26 and was made the unfinished business March 12. From that date to May 4 the bill was under general discussion without limitation on the duration of speeches, fifty-eight of which were delivered.

Purpose of the Bill.

The principal purpose of the railroad rate bill is to permit the interstate commerce commission to fix rates. The provision conferring this authority is found in the fourth section of the bill which amends section 15 of the interstate commerce law so as to accomplish this result. The section directs the commission to investigate complaints of unjust and unreasonable charges on the part of the common carriers in the transportation of persons or property or of regulations or of practices affecting such charges.

To Fix a Just Rate.

It also authorizes an inquiry as to whether the rates or practices are "unjustly discriminatory or unduly preferential or prejudicial or otherwise in violation of the act," and in case any of these conditions are found to exist, the commission is empowered to determine and prescribe what will be the just and reasonable maximum rate and what regulation or practice is just, reasonable and fair. Further authority is given the commission to enforce its orders and they are to go into effect within thirty days and continue in force for two years unless suspended, modified or set aside by the commission or by a court of competent jurisdiction.

Subject to Court Review.

Other powers conferred by this section are: To apportion joint fares, establish through rates and maximum joint rates and prescribe their division and to determine the compensation to be paid to shippers doing service for carriers.

The bill was amended by the senate so as to give the United States circuit courts jurisdiction to entertain suits brought to annul or change the orders of the commission and to prevail against the granting of interlocutory decrees without hearings and making appeals from such orders direct to the supreme court.

Filibuster in House.

Reminiscent of the stressful days of the Forty-seventh congress were the scenes in the house yesterday when the Democrats, under the leadership of Mr. Williams of Mississippi, began the first real filibuster in a number of years, their object being to defeat the bill paying to the estate of Samuel Lee of South Carolina $10,482 for allowances made by reason of the election of Lee, a negro, to a seat in the Forty-seventh congress.

This bill has been reported favorably at nine congresses. Mr. Williams resorted to every known parliamentary tactic to encompass the defeat of the measure. There were numberless roll calls and still more divisions demanded and taken before the bill was finally passed.

Big Factory Destroyed.

Owosso, Mich., May 20.—The fivestory brick furniture factory of the Estey Manufacturing company, known among the company's buildings as Factory A, was destroyed by fire last night. The Lake Ice company's ice houses are also in ruins. The loss on the furniture factory is estimated at $100,000.

Soldiers Killed No One.

Washington, May 18.—Gen. Greely has reported to the war department from San Francisco that the reported killing of a large number of people by the army during the San Francisco fire is incorrect. Investigations fail to disclose a single instance of killing by regular soldiers.

Charlotte, N. C., May 18.—The plant of the South Atlantic Waste company was partially destroyed by fire last night. The loss will reach $250,000.

MANY VILLIAGES ARE WIPED OUT BY FOREST FIRES

ENORMOUS TRACT OF LAND IN MICHIGAN AND WISCONSIN LAID WASTE.

LOSS OF LIFE MAY BE LARGE

HUNDREDS OF HOMESTEADERS ARE FORCED TO FLEE FOR THEIR LIVES.

FLAMES ARE STILL SPREADING

HEAVY GALE DRIVES DESTROYING ELEMENT ON, ENDANGERING OTHER TOWNS.

Milwaukee, Wis., May 20.—The Sentinel, summarizing dispatches received from all parts of the upper peninsula swept by flames, says:

Forest fires have swept a district of Upper Michigan about fifty miles square, ranging from a few miles north of Menominee at the south edge, to within a few miles of Marquette on the Lake Superior shore, and from Escanaba and the lake on the east nearly to Iron River on the west. All of this country is not affected, but the flames, starting in various portions of the affected territory, have spread in all directions.

Escanaba Threatened.

Escanaba and Iron Mountain on the east and south sides of the fire have been threatened by the flames, but it is not thought that they will suffer. Cedar River and Ford River will probably escape, but Bagley and Wallace are almost certain to be wiped out. Cornell was destroyed.

The loss of life will probably not be heavy as the country affected is sparsely settled.

Flames Driven by Heavy Gale.

Escanaba, Mich., May 19.—Driven by a heavy gale of wind one of the most destructive forest fires in the history of this district yesterday afternoon laid waste a tract of land fifty miles square and at a late hour last night was still spreading. It is definitely known that the following cities and villages have been completely wiped out: Quinnesec, population 500; Shaffer, 600; Ralphs, 400; Salvoic, 200; Cornell, 500; Woodlawn, 200, and Talbot, 400.

Hundreds Are Homeless.

At North and several other points on the line of the Escanaba & Lake Superior railway at 6 o'clock last night, when all communication was cut off, the fire had reached the outskirts of the village and no hope of saving any of the property was offered. Hundreds of people are homeless and are being brought into Escanaba as fast as trains can be sent to the burned district. In addition to the list of saw mills and other buildings, millions of feet of cut lumber have been burned and tracts of standing timber badly damaged. The loss of the I. Stephenson Company of Wells from burned timber alone it is believed will approximate several hundred thousand dollars.

Loss of Life Is Feared.

As far as can be learned no lives have been lost, although families of several homesteaders living in burned districts are missing and it is feared they may have been burned to death. Refugees arriving in the city tell terrible tales of their experience in escaping from the sweeping flames.

One man declared that the flames were advancing in the vicinity of Corwell at the rate of twenty miles an hour when residents of that place were taken out on a relief train.

Homesteaders Flee for Refuge.

Homesteaders carrying packs of a few personal effects, who also had been driven from their homes, were found by train crews at all points along the right of way and were picked up and brought into this city or left at stations not threatened by fire. It is known that two camps of the I. Stephenson company have been completely wiped out and the safety of large crews of men at work in the heart of the heavily wooded country and with no railway facilities offered is feared for. The crews [illegible] together with the [illegible] horses [illegible] tance of twelve miles and [illegible] ported safe at Princeton [illegible].

Railway Bridges Burned.

[illegible] freight traffic [illegible] Escanaba & [illegible] roads [illegible] afternoon and the entire attention of the train crews given to relief trains sent out to move residents of burned towns to places of safety.

Light Up Whole Country.

Owing to the fact that the rails have been warped by the terrific heat in many places, making it necessary to lay new rails, the progress of the trains was slow and some of the crews have not yet been heard from.

A perfect pall of smoke hung over the city late yesterday afternoon and late last night the entire surrounding country was lighted up by flames which are moving in this direction, but it is believed their progress will be stopped before this city is threatened.

WISCONSIN ALSO SUFFERS.

Two Villages Wiped Out and Many May Have Met Death.

Marinette, Wis., May 20.—The best information obtainable at this hour is that the forest fire which is sweeping the country north of here has reached Iron county, north of Dickinson. This makes four counties which are suffering from fire. The area is 200 square miles.

The country swept by the flames varies from pine timber land to barrens. Part is iron mining country and the district includes tracts of hardwood which have never been touched by the woodsman's ax. In the barrens settlers have taken up their residence and it is for these that the greatest anxiety is felt.

Two Villages Wiped Out.

Information received at Marinette is that the village of Shaffer, on the Metropolitan branch of the North-Western railway in Dickinson county, was wiped out. No word could be received as to the loss of life there, if any.

The village of Saunders, in Iron county, a lumber town directly north of Florence, has also been swept by the flames. Here, as at Shaffer, many may have met death. The town consists of a few residences, four saloons, a couple of hotels and a big sawmill.

$50,000 Worth of Lumber Burned.

Wausau, Wis., May 20.—Fire of unknown origin broke out in the lumber yards of Phillips & Menzner at Marathon City yesterday. Over 3,000,000 feet of lumber, valued at $50,000, have been consumed. Wausau sent an engine to help subdue the fire, which is threatening the mill and the town. The woods north of the town are burning fiercely. The loss is partly covered by insurance.

SEEK OUT KIN OF OFFICERS.

Wisconsin Insurance Investigators Look for Plums.

Milwaukee, May 20.—The principal feature of the Northwestern Mutual Life examination yesterday afternoon was the listing of relatives of officers of the company who are now in the employ of the company. It developed that the president, Henry L. Palmer, has a son, a son-in-law and the husband of a niece in the employ of the company. All are receiving salaries from $3,000 to $6,000 per year. Vice President Markham has only one son in the employ of the company at a salary of $2,500 per year. Second Vice President Skinner has a brother-in-law, but the latter was employed by the company before Mr. Skinner entered its employ. Some ten other clerks of the company are relatives of officers either by blood or marriage and receive nominal salaries.

SALOONMEN TURN TABLES.

Have Pastor Spy Arrested for Sunday Work.

Appleton, Wis., May 20.—Rev. A. H. Zechiel, a representative of the Wisconsin Anti-Saloon league, charged with purchasing beer on Sundays, was arrested yesterday on a warrant sworn out by saloonkeepers, charging violation of the Sunday law in that he worked on the Sabbath. The beer was bought, it is said, to obtain evidence against saloon men who kept open on Sunday. They, in turn, say Zechiel violated the law, which reads "only works of mercy and necessity can be carried on on Sundays."

FORTY MEN ARE POISONED.

Samples of Wrecking Crew's Food Is Sent to St. Paul.

Duluth, May 20. — Forty-odd men employed in wrecking operations on the stranded steamer Crescent City nine miles from Duluth on the north shore of Lake Superior, have been made sick by something they have eaten. The symptoms are those of ptomaine poisoning. Two or three of the men are seriously sick. Harris Bennett, local state food inspector, has taken samples at the ship and has sent them to the state health department in St. Paul for analysis.

FORMER PREMIER PLANS COUP D'ETAT GIVING HIM SUPREME POWER.

REPLY TO CZAR'S IS READY

NATIONAL PARLIAMENT SETS ITS SEAL UPON ITS FIRST GREAT WORK.

St. Petersburg, May 19. — Public opinion is greatly excited as to how the emperor and the government will meet the definite attitude of the lower house of parliament.

Many Constitutional Democrats are not yet convinced that the government will seek a compromise. They see indications that the bureaucracy is preparing for a desperate fight.

The Rech, their organ, still considers it possible that an attempt may be made to disperse parliament and also prints a rumor that Count Witte is trying to bring about a coup d'etat which would result in his appointment as dictator by the emperor.

Finishes First Great Work.

Sitting until long after 2 o'clock this morning, the lower house of the national parliament set its seal upon its first great work, the adoption of the address in reply to the speech from the throne setting forth the aims and aspirations of Russia's millions. Despite attacks both from the right and from the left, the leaders of the Constitutional Democrats held their followers together to the last, and the address was adopted substantially in the form in which it was proposed by the committee.

Radicals Not Satisfied.

The amendments adopted Wednesday and Thursday affect important details but do not change the general tenor of the document, which, extreme as it may be in the eyes of the autocracy, falls far short of the expectations of the radicals. Time after time during the long three days of debate the extremists, with their undying hatred of the whole ancient order, launched their fiery attacks against the "mildness" of the various paragraphs only to break against the firmness of the restraint of the chiefs of the party.

Ventured No Delay.

When the discussion had been finished, the deputies, with the exhortations of the country to speedy action ringing in their ears, ventured no further delay, and, though they had been already in session fourteen hours, took a recess until 2 o'clock this morning for reading and adoption of the final draft of the address instead of postponing this formality until to-day.

Council Wakes Up.

As if running a race to see which should be the first to present to Emperor Nicholas a demand for amnesty, the council of the empire also was in session well into the early morning hours, discussing its address in reply to the speech from the throne. This document, which is far simpler and more conservative than that of the lower house, proposes an amnesty which does not include those coupled with political offenses, murder or violation of property rights. In other words, political assassins or participants in agrarian excesses.

BRUTALITY AVENGED.

Another of Russian Girl's Tormentors Is Shot Dead.

Tambov, Russia, May 19.—Zhdanoff, a police officer who participated in the brutal maltreatment of Maria Spiridonova, was shot and killed on the streets here yesterday by an unknown person. The avengers of the young revolutionist recently meted out the same fate at Borissoglebsk to Abramoff, the Cossack officer who boasted of his cruelty to her while she was in prison.

AMBASSADOR DENIES.

Mr. Meyer Says He Did Not Criticise Russian Parliament.

St. Petersburg, May 19.—The Slovo yesterday printed what purported to be a statement of Ambassador Meyer criticising the action of parliament and the opening ceremony at the winter palace. The ambassador authorized the Associated Press to deny in the most emphatic manner that he indulged in any criticism whatever. He says the alleged statement was made out of whole cloth.

Houpt Reappointed.

Washington, May 19. — The president yesterday sent the following nomination to the senate: District attorney, district of Minnesota, Chas. C. Houpt.

Three Fatally Hurt.

Wheeling, W. Va., May 19.—Fourteen men were hurt, three fatally, in the National Tube company's works at Benwood late yesterday afternoon. The men were working on a scaffold twenty-five feet high which collapsed.

Saved From the Gallows.

Trenton, N. J., May 19.—The court of pardons yesterday commuted the sentence of Mrs. Anna Valentine to life imprisonment. Mrs. Valentine was under sentence of death for the murder of Rosa Salvo.

COMPANIES DO GOOD BUSINESS

Insurance Commissioner Issues Preliminary Report for 1905.

A preliminary report of the condition of the life insurance companies doing business in Minnesota has been made public by Insurance Commissioner T. D. O'Brien. The report shows an increase in the assets and business of the companies during the year, although in the Minnesota business they have not written as many policies as they did the previous year.

Forty-eight level premium life companies doing business in the state show an increase in ledger assets from $2,351,729,816 on Dec. 31, 1904, to $2,569,561,311 on Dec. 31, 1905, or an increase of $217,831,495. The increase during 1904 was $[illegible]. The total admitted assets have increased from $2,476,716,686 to $2,673,469,480. The total liabilities, including the reserve, increased during the year from $2,328,642,675 to $2,434,118,419. The net surplus, including capital, decreased from $242,074,011 to $239,350,[illegible]951.

The report on Minnesota business shows 43,082 policies written in the state during 1905, against 48,200 in 1904. The amount written in 1905 was $32,005,859, against $33,439,414 in 1904. The number of policies in force in the state on Dec. 31 last was [illegible], against [illegible] a year previous 152,014. The amount in force in the state last year was $197,551,918, against $187,673,038 a year before. The losses incurred during 1905 were $2,074,133, and in 1904 were $1,777,922. The premiums received in the state last year were $7,065,403, and in 1904 were $6,810,929.

The report shows that during the year the actual mortality losses were 81 per cent of the expected losses, or $103,383,194 actual and $127,080,080 expected. In 1904 the actual mortality loss was 83 per cent of the expected, the actual loss being $100,314,516. Full reserved, surrendered and lapsed policies amounted to $63,054,984 and the actual values paid $47,306,773, or 75 per cent. In 1904 the full reserved, surrendered and lapsed policies amounted to $54,330,272, and the actual values paid 73 per cent of that amount. The annuities expected during 1905 were $4,284,168, and the actual payment $4,474,164, or 104 per cent of the expected. In 1904 the expected annuities were $4,055,307, and the actual payment 109 per cent of that. The loading expense portion of the premium in 1905 was $133,320,974, and the actual expense paid $127,402,902, or 96 per cent of the expected. In 1904 the loading expense portion was $125,680,952, and the actual expenses paid $123,661,627, or 98 per cent.

The fraternal insurance companies had a better increase than the old-line companies. Their total income during the year increased from $52,220,550 to $66,857,138. The amount paid to members increased from $41,811,355 to $50,583,403; the expenses paid increased from $6,056,923 to $7,485,878; the total admitted assets increased from $86,855,298 to $49,170,770. The number of certificates issued during the year were 618,557, and during 1904 were 601,387. The number in force at the end of the year 1905 were 3,826,856, and at the close of 1904 were 3,879,598. The amount in force at the end of the year was $5,331,734,029, and a year before was $4,735,413,568.

The report on Minnesota business of fraternal companies shows 13,185 certificates issued in 1905, and 28,819 in 1904. The amount issued during the year was $35,659,125, and the year before, $29,516,005. The number of certificates in force increased from 183,881 to 194,508, and the amount in force from $251,744,169 to $271,817,167. The premiums received during the year increased from $2,145,360 to $2,453,399, and the losses from $1,635,651 in 1904 to $1,687,544 in 1905.

OUT FROM JAWS OF DEATH.

Laces on Brakeman's Shoes Break Just in Time.

With his foot firmly caught in a frog in the Swan River yards near Grand Rapids, Joseph Dovine, a brakeman, saw an engine bearing down upon him.

"I'm a goner, boys," he shouted to his companions as he made a last desperate effort to wrench his foot loose.

The engine was shunting a string of cars backward and the engineer did not see the man on the track. His last violent struggle, however, tore the laces from his shoe and he was enabled to slip his foot out just as the first of the cars struck the place where he had been held as in a vice. Beyond a sprained ankle he suffered no injury. Railroad men say it was one of the narrowest escapes ever seen in that vicinity.

EAGLE ATTACKS CHILD.

Mother Finally Kills Ravenous Bird After It Assails Cow, Dog and Child.

A hungry young eagle frantically attacked a cow, two children and a dog at Nashwauk and was only defeated after a desperate battle with the mother of the children.

Mrs. Thomas Goodhue and her two small children went into a meadow to look for the cows. As they approached the woman discovered that one of the cows was engaged in a battle with an eagle. The bird would alight on the animal's back and, inserting its talons, would claw the poor creature unmercifully, tearing bits of flesh and hide from its back.

CARELESSNESS MAY KILL TWO.

Disasters Following Handling of Guns by Boys.

Helena, Mont., May 19.—Four-year-old Frank Sitz was accidentally killed at his home four miles from Malta by Walter Hyatt, a playmate. The latter was carelessly handling a loaded shotgun, which went off, the entire load entering the Sitz boy's head, causing instant death.

Carelessness on the part of a young son of William Beckwith and another boy named Gilbert, son of a mining man living near Pony, in handling a 22-caliber rifle may cause Mr. Beckwith's death. The bullet passed through his intestines. Little hope is held out for his recovery.

JURY CONDEMNS JUSTICE.

Coroner's Inquest Results in Murder Charge.

Helena, Mont., May 19.—The coroner's jury that investigated the killing of William C. Eade, a saloonkeeper at Sand Coulee by Justice of the Peace Taylor, returned a verdict that the shot that killed Eade was fired "with murderous intent." Under this verdict Taylor is held in the county jail at Great Falls without bail. Regardless of the unqualified verdict based upon evidence tending to show that Taylor was the aggressor, his friends contend that he acted in self-defense and feel confident that he will be acquitted.

TOT SLAIN; BROTHER MISSING.

Child Is Found Dead With a Hole in Its Head.

Webster, S. D., May 19.—Either an accident or a tragedy has been enacted in a barn on the farm of Ed Anderson between this place and Waubay. A two-year-old son of Anderson was found dead with a small hole in his head, and his brother, twelve years of age, is missing. It is not yet known whether the boy was killed with a pitchfork or a rifle bullet. Anderson and his neighbors are now scouring the country in search of the missing boy.

BLOWS UP HOUSE.

Boy Who Puts Powder in Stove to See Explosion Is Hurt.

Sioux Falls, S. D., May 19.—The desire to see what would happen if he placed three or four pounds of gunpowder in a stove resulted in the serious injuring of Leonard, the six-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Lynch, prominent residents of Charles Mix county, and wrecked the Lynch dwelling. In addition, a baby brother of the boy, who was sitting on the floor near the stove, had a miraculous escape from instant death.

BOY SEEMS A KLEPTOMANIAC.

Released on One Theft, He Is Charged With Another.

Sioux City, Iowa, May 19.—Four hours after his release from the juvenile court, where he had been arraigned for selling two bicycles for 25 cents, Clare Bunch, a nine-year-old boy, was arrested for stealing a gold watch and selling it to a shoestring street merchant for 50 cents. It is believed that the boy is a kleptomaniac.

BOLTS STRIKE AT ECHO.

Three Horses Killed and Woman Hurt in Storm.

Echo, Minn., May 19. — Heavy storms have visited this section during the past week and were accompanied by thunder and lightning. Three horses belonging to Carl Meyer were killed without setting fire to the barn. Mrs. Arthur Curtis received a bad electric shock from wires running into the house from which the telephone had been disconnected.

Wabasha Man Drowned.

Durand, Wis., May 19.—John Degnan, bridge carpenter for the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway, while working on the railroad bridge across the Chippewa river at Red Cedar, fell from the bridge into the river and was drowned. The water is about eighteen feet deep and very swift. When he came up he tried to swim ashore. He swam about three blocks and was taken with cramps. His home was at Wabasha, Minn.

Valentine Estate Settled.

Fergus Falls, Minn., May 19.—The final decree in the estate of the late Ezra G. Valentine was filed in the register of deeds' office here yesterday. The estate consists of personal property valued at $106,511.17, of which $51,368 is in cash, and real estate in Otter Tail, Wilkin and Ramsey counties. His heirs are his son, James H. Valentine, and his daughter, Blanche M. Valentine.

Lightning Destroys Elevator.

Cando, N. D., May 19.—The St. Anthony and Dakota elevator at Considine, N. D., and eight empty cars were completely destroyed by a fire caused by lightning. The loss on the elevator is estimated at $15,000.

Corbett Is Moderator.

Des Moines, Iowa, May 19.—After a spirited contest Rev. Dr. Hunter Corbett, missionary to China for many years, was elected moderator of the Presbyterian general assembly late yesterday afternoon.

Killed by Horse.

Marshalltown, Iowa, May 19.—Fred Smith of Haverd, the twenty-year-old son of G. J. Smith of that place, died last night as the result of being kicked in the abdomen by a horse. His parents are prominent people.

Congress.

Resume of the Week's Proceedings.

Monday.

Washington, May 15.—The session of the senate yesterday passed without an exciting incident and without the adoption of a single amendment to the railroad rate bill notwithstanding that measure was under consideration practically all the time from the hour of convening, 12 o'clock, until adjournment at 5:15 p. m. The most characteristic feature of the day was the rejection of amendments.

Among the provisions adversely disposed of were several intended to fix the liability of railroad companies for injury to employes.

The house had under consideration yesterday bills relating to the government of the District of Columbia.

Tuesday.

Washington, May 16.—With the exception of an anti-pass amendment the senate yesterday completed its consideration of the railroad rate bill as in committee of the whole, and as soon as that provision shall be disposed of will take it up in the senate. The general expectation is that the pass question will be disposed of early to-day and the general hope is that the bill may be passed before the close of to-day's session.

During the day Senator Tillman made a further explanation concerning his negotiations with the president and had Former Senator Chandler's memorandum read. The president's letter to Senator Allison was also read at the instance of the Iowa senator. The session opened with a personal statement by Mr. Tillman concerning his relations with Mr. Aldrich.

The house by a decisive vote reaffirmed its faith in the navy department, defeating an amendment of Mr. Tawney, chairman of the appropriations committee, to limit the repairs on a ship to 10 per cent of the cost.

Wednesday.

Washington, May 17.—The recent efforts of the president and the Democratic senatorial leaders to reach an agreement on the rate bill received further notice in the senate yesterday from Senators Bailey and Tillman. The matter was referred to by the Texas senator in the course of a personal explanation called out by an article in the Chicago Tribune charging Mr. Bailey with failure to find common ground, and by Mr. Tillman in a speech in support of Mr. Bailey and in presenting a further statement from Former Senator Chandler.

In his address Mr. Bailey denounced the article in question as a "lie" and the author and inspirer of it as "liars."

There also was a sharp colloquy between Senators Daniel and Tillman over an amendment to the anti-pass provision.

The consideration of the rate bill in committee of the whole was concluded and the measure was then reported to the senate, where there will be opportunity to review and alter all the amendments heretofore made.

The naval appropriation bill, carrying nearly a hundred million dollars, was completed yesterday in the house after one of the busiest days of the present congress.

Thursday.

Washington, May 18.—The senate yesterday received another installment of Senator Bailey's version of the effort to secure an understanding between the Democratic senators and the president on the railroad rate bill. In presenting it he included the memorandum of Former Senator Chandler to the president, on which the charges of bad faith against Mr. Bailey have been predicted. The Texas senator again arraigned his critics in sharp language.

With the exception of Mr. Bailey's digression the day was devoted to a review of the amendments made in committee of the whole, and covered somewhat more than half of the measure. There was a prospect of concluding the reading until the section granting to the interstate commerce commission power to fix rates was reached and the question of the constitutionality of that provision was raised. The attack was made on the clause giving to the commission discretion in prescribing rates. The question was still under discussion when the senate adjourned.

There was again considerable debate over the pipe line, rebate and anti-pass amendments and also of the amendments prohibiting common carriers from transporting articles produced by themselves. All these and other less important provisions were modified.

After two weeks' debate the house yesterday passed the naval appropriation bill carrying $99,764,000.

Storm Sinks Torpedo Boat.

Port Said, Egypt, May 20.—The British torpedo boat No. 50 sank during a storm off this port during the night. Seven of the crew were drowned.

Passenger Train Wrecked.

Topeka, Kan., May 18.—A Rock Island passenger train was wrecked last night two miles west of Topeka. The train ran head-on into a switch engine. Several persons were injured, including three passengers, not seriously.

Will End Coal Strike.

Kansas City, May 18.—It is probable that the coal strike in the Southwest will end in a few days as the result of a conference here yesterday between coal operators and United Mine Workers.

His violent struggle, however, tore the laces from his shoe and he was enabled to slip his foot out just as the first of the cars struck the place where he had been held as in a vise. Beyond a strained ankle he suffered no injury. Railroad men say it was one of the narrowest escapes ever seen in that vicinity.

EAGLE ATTACKS CHILD.

Mother Finally Kills Ravenous Bird After It Assails Cow, Dog and Child.

A hungry young eagle frantically attacked a cow, two children and a dog at Nashwauk, and was only defeated after a desperate battle with the mother of the children.

Mrs. Thomas Goodhue and her two small children went into a meadow to look for the cows. As they approached the woman discovered that one of the cows was engaged in a battle with an eagle. The bird would alight on the animal's back and, inserting its talons, would claw the poor creature unmercifully, tearing bits of flesh and hide from its back.

"HE HAS MADE GOOD."

THE St. Paul Daily News, an independent newspaper with Republican leanings, is fair and honest enough to do justice to Governor Johnson. The following editorial recently appeared in its columns:

"Wisely, as it seems to an unprejudiced observer, the Democrats will make no hurry to hold their state convention.

"It violates no conference to say that John A. Johnson will be their candidate for governor. Neither does it require deep astuteness to observe that they will have no hearty expectation of electing the rest of their ticket.

"Now it is a way in Minnesota to give a man who has done well in his place a second term. The custom is so fairly established that in common speech people say he is entitled to it, if he has done well. He isn't called upon to prove that he ought to be elected; it is for the other gentleman to show that somebody else has a better right.

"That Johnson has made a good governor, an admirable governor, the whole state knows. His appointments were marvelously good. Not one was weak or ill-considered.

"In his personal duties too, Johnson has made a good governor. He has diligently attended the meetings of the various boards of which he is a member and has made their proceedings his own. He has not shut his eyes and signed whatever was laid before him, but has mastered the contents of every paper.

"In all things brought before him, strict adherence to the law has been the rule, not to put himself above it, nor to put it beneath him, but to follow the law. No timber trespass cases have been settled according to the notions of good fellowship or by guessing what the culprit would stand for, but by the rule of the law. And the trespassers have settled on that basis, to the great financial advantage of the state.

"Beyond the duties laid upon him, Johnson's influence has permeated every branch of the state's administration. Where there was laxity and hit-or-miss calculation as to what would do, the governing question now obtains, "What does the law say?"

"The state owes more to Johnson than it knows; but the state does know that Johnson has made a good governor, an admirable governor. And unless signs fail the state cheerfully accord him the second term with which it has been pleased to reward good and faithful service."

Have you pains in the back, inflammation of any kind, rhematism, fainting spells, indigestion or constipation, Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea makes you well, keeps you well. 35 cents.—A. L. Reichert.

Trying to live peacefully in Russia is deadly.

What a howling bunch of liars the United States senate is anyhow.

As the Duluth convention draws nearer the wise ones seem more and more at sea as to the probable outcome.

SENATOR BURTON of Kansas must serve his term in the pen. Supreme courts seem to do the right thing once in a while.

THE young astrologer, who predicted dire disaster between May 15 and 21 to several of the larger cities, evidently got mingled in his dates.

EVERY paper you pick up has from one to a dozen announcements of candidacy for office until you might think all the world was office-seeking mad.

A DAILY salutation: "Who will be governor?" Answer: "You tell."—Anoka Union.

Certainly; John A. Johnson. Ask us something that will take at least an instant's thought.

THE whole country heaved a sigh of relief when it was announced that the rate bill had passed the senate; not because it was much nearer a law but because they were wearied unto death of the continuous gabble.

THE railroad rate bill has passed the senate but it has a long hard road to travel before its gets the house concurrence with the senate amendments and a decision of the supreme court that it is constitutional.

GENERAL STOESSEL, who commanded Port Arthur, and Admiral Nebogatoff, who commanded a squadron at the battle in the sea of Japan, have been condemmed to die by the Russian military court. But life with the average Russian is no particular cause of felicitation anyhow.

IT IS increasingly hard to tell the difference between a Democrat and Republican in national politics.—Crookston Times.

Many years ago some one said the difference was expressed in one letter: "The Republicans were bent on retaining and distributing the public offices, and the Democrats were bent on regaining and distributing the public offices.

$8.50 PUNCTURE-PROOF TIRES ONLY $4.80 PER PAIR

Regular Price $8.50 per pair. To Introduce We Will Sell You a Sample Pair for Only $4.80

NAILS, TACKS OR GLASS WON'T LET OUT THE AIR

(CASH WITH ORDER $4.55)

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES.

Result of 15 years experience in tire making. No danger from THORNS, CACTUS, PINS, NAILS, TACKS or GLASS. Serious punctures, like intentional knife cuts, can be vulcanized like any other tire.

Two Hundred Thousand pairs now in actual use. Over Seventy-five Thousand pairs sold last year.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. That "Holding Back" sensation commonly felt when riding on asphalt or soft roads is overcome by the patent "Basket Weave" tread which prevents all air from being squeezed out between the tire and the road thus overcoming all suction. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C.O.D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. We will also send one nickel plated brass hand pump and two Sampson metal puncture closers on full paid orders (these metal puncture closers to be used in case of intentional knife cuts or heavy gashes). Tires to be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination.

We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. Ask your Postmaster, Banker, Express or Freight Agent or the Editor of this paper about us. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will [illegible]asier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or s[illegible]y price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will [illegible]r order. We want you to send us a small trial order at once, hence this remarkable ti[illegible]

We have all lost friends and acquaintances from appendicitis. So closely has the surgeon's knife become identified with this disease that people have been led to believe that there is no cure without operation. Such was the case until Dr. Conrad Adler of Berlin, Germany, perfected a treatment for the prevention and cure of appendicitis. We have secured the agency for Dr. Adler's Treatment for this city. Ask for a free copy of Dr. Adler's illustrated book telling how to cure and prevent appendicitis.—W. A. Schrieter.

SKIN DISEASES
FIERY ACIDS IN THE BLOOD

All skin diseases are due to the same cause—an excess of acid in the blood caused by faulty assimilation of food and poor bowel action; this fiery acrid matter is forced to the surface through the pores and glands. Pustules are formed, discharging a sticky fluid which dries and makes a crust, causing intense itching. When the crusts or scabs are scratched off the skin is left raw and bleeding. Sometimes skin diseases are in the dry form, and bran-like scales come on the flesh, or the skin becomes hard and dry, often cracking, and the painful itching causes acute suffering. It does not matter how the trouble is manifested, the cause is the same—an excess of acid in the blood. Salves, powders, cooling washes, etc., while they relieve the itching and give the sufferer temporary comfort, cannot cure the trouble because they do not reach the acid laden blood. The best treatment for all skin diseases is S. S. S., a remedy that is purely vegetable and one which acts directly on the blood with a cleansing, healing effect. S. S. S. neutralizes the acids, and purifies the blood so that the skin instead of being blistered and burned by the fiery fluids, is nourished by a supply of cooling, healthy blood. Special book on Skin Diseases and any medical advice desired will be furnished without charge.

Dear Sirs—My body broke out with a rash or eruption which in spite of all efforts to cure continued to get worse. The itching, especially at night, was simply terrible. I had tried many highly recommended preparations without benefit, and hearing of S. S. S. determined to give it a fair trial, and was inexpressibly delighted when a few bottles cured me entirely.

Father Theillon of Gentilly was a visitor in the city today. He says that the Gentilly cheese factory is at present in full swing and is turning out a large quantity of cheese. 6000 pounds of milk are brought to the factory every day on the average at present and one of the most successful seasons in the history of the concern is anticipated. Rev. Thellion says that every farmer in that vicinity is working every hour of daylight at present and altho the crop which is put in now will be rather late still in six weeks there will be no appreciable difference, according to the Reverend gentleman what is sowed now and what was put in 2 or 3 weeks ago.—Crookston Journal.

Agents and ticket agents of the Great Northern railway company are to be uniformed. The new order has been sent out and applies to general agents at points where there is but one agent, and to the ticket agent at the points where there are ticket and freight agents. The uniform will consist of a single breasted sack coat, a single-breasted vest, without collar, trousers of the prevailing style, of blue cloth similar to that used in the uniforms of train men. The ticket agent will also wear a silk cap, with gold letters announcing his title and the only difference in case there is no ticket agent will be in the lettering on the cap, the word agent being used, The caps will be trimmed with gold cord and gold letters and the uniforms will be decorated with brass buttons. The new rule does not apply to ticket clerks or to freight agents.

CHAPTER XXI.

A Rough Voyage.

An exclamation of [illegible] burst from Jacinta when the sudden plunge of the flatboat gave indubitable evidence that the rope had broken.

"We are afloat! We are afloat!"

"And rushing it," said Medworth. "Are you all right, Jack?" For so large was the boat, and so dark the night, that Arthur did not doubt that his friend was somewhere on board. But as no answer came to him out of the darkness, his heart stood still with horror.

"Jack," he shouted, "are you on the boat?"

Loud as he shouted, no answer came to his straining ears but the mocking howl of the storm.

"Tempest is lost!" he exclaimed. "My heavens! What shall we do?"

"What can we do, senor?" tearfully asked Dona Maria. "It is enough to drive one's senses from one. Is it not terrific! Nothing can save us in this awful storm."

And, in truth, there was foundation enough for her terror.

In the blackness of the night and in the rush and swirl of the water the great, clumsy flatboat turned and twisted, groaned and creaked, now lunging forward as if going over a cataract, now swinging viciously against a bit of high bank or a tree standing deep in the water, but always bounding off again to continue its fearful way. At times it would not progress, but would whirl round and round in the grasp of a furious eddy; then, like a wild beast released from its cage, it would plunge on. It was never two minutes the same, never for a moment under the control of aught save that overwhelming mass of water and the Omnipotent hand that controls even the torrents and the floods.

At the tremendous rate at which they were being carried along they swept past mile after mile of flooded llanos, and their troubled minds did not know or could not guess were they were.

But the stanch old boat did not fail them. It seemed every minute as if it must go to pieces.

When the long, dreadful hours of the night had passed, and the scarcely less dark morning had come, the valley of the Orinoco was undergoing the fourth day of that terrible storm. So hard was the downpour that it was impossible for them to see or even to hazard a guess where they were.

But the torrent knew its business, and carried them on and on out through the broadening mouth of the Coroni unto the turbulent bosom of the great Orinoco itself. Here the boat was tossed by stronger and more vengeful waves, and was tossed and tumbled as if it had been a plaything, and the three passengers, now weary and disheartened, thought that every moment would be the last.

Hour after hour these unfortunates endured this horror, hoping almost against hope, and so great was their misery that though they still hoped, they almost prayed for death rather than a continuance of it.

Hunger now added itself to their discomforts, and to [illegible] it seemed as if death could be but a sweet relief.

All around them now there was nothing but boiling, raging water.

Far, far out on the Orinoco the tumultuous current had carried them and they were two miles out from either bank. And as they journeyed swiftly down with the turbulent waters toward the waiting and devouring Atlantic the wind that was coming from the south kept sending them nearer and nearer the north shore, so that for every mile they came nearer to the delta they drew at least one-twentieth of a mile toward the northern forest-covered shore.

Had it not been for this friendly wind, they must assuredly have been swept out to sea.

But the hand of God was clearly in the storm, and the fate that awaited them was not the lingering death from starvation in the solitudes of the mighty ocean.

When the night of the fourth day of the storm had come, they had traveled not only two hundred miles down the Orinoco, but they had crossed the great river from south to north, and it was Jacinta's quick eyes that saw looming up in the gathering blackness of night the shadow of a mountain.

"Look!" she cried. "The Island of the Clouds! We are saved!"

"Saved!" echoed Medworth. "By an island? I hope so, but I doubt it. We may touch the land, but in this torrent the boat can never pause long enough for us to leave it."

"Do you know where you are?" screamed Jacinta. "We have left the Coroni hundreds of miles behind. This is the Island of the Clouds. I know it well, for no other land in the whole valley is so high. And we cannot fail to stop, for at its base is the great Devil's Whirlpool, that catches everything that floats within its grasp and hurls it upon the side of the mountain. The Island of the Clouds is a thousand feet high, and there we shall be safe from the rising flood. Listen! Even now above the roar of the storm do you hear another voice?"

Medworth listened intently. A loud roaring came to his ears, seemingly from the very base of the darkly outlined mountain before them.

"I hear it," he said.

"It is the whirlpool," said Jacinta. "We will land on the Island of the Clouds, alive or dead, as the spirit of the whirlpool wills."

"Safe," murmured Dona Maria. "Thank God, we are safe!"

That night the wind died down, the rain ceased and the angry waters of the Orinoco, the Coroni, the Apure, the Caura and the Arauca, that had brought desolation to the land, began to grow calm and then to subside; and when, after a sleepless night, morning came to our castaways, it was with bright skies and balmy winds; but the Orinoco was a hundred feet above its highest level, and running with a terrible swiftness past the island upon which they had been thrown.

CHAPTER XXII.

The Island of the Clouds.

"The first thing to be done," said Medworth, when the bright skies of the morning brought revived hopes and sustaining courage to the hearts of himself and his two companions, "is to examine this mountain and see just what the dangers are, and what our chances are of keeping life in our bodies, for there is no doubt we are destined to remain here many days."

"You are a brave young American," replied the wife of Salvarez, "and we will do whatever you think is best. It was by your courage and shrewdness that we escaped from drowning in the caverns, and also from the royalists. We are willing to leave everything to you."

"Yes, everything," added Jacinta, looking unutterable things at him.

"What do you know of this island?" asked Medworth, speaking calmly and avoiding Jacinta's eyes.

"Very little," replied Dona Maria. "The Island of the Clouds is very little understood by the people. We have heard many strange things concerning it, horrible stories of mystery and death; but I never knew of any person who has been here, so I do not know the truth. That it is a strange place, you have already learned by our experience in the whirlpool. Last night, when my soul was sick with horror, and all things looked black for us, I remembered all the evil tales I had heard about the island, and shuddered at the thought of landing on it; but we have passed the night safely, and the bright sunlight of this morning has driven away most of my fears. And what is there in the forests or mountains of Venezuela that a true daughter of the Republic should fear? With your strong arm to defend us and your cool head to guide, I feel safe indeed, and when the flood subsides we can, no doubt, manage to reach the mainland and get to a village. Indeed, I only wish I were as sure of the general's safety as I am of my own."

Medworth, who knew nothing of the forests of Venezuela except what he had read, the reports of travelers in the Orinoco valley, a small proportion of which could be looked upon as true, hoped that Dona Maria's confidence was not misplaced; yet he could not help feeling a shade of doubt, for he had read of panthers and boa constrictors, either of which would prove a formidable enemy.

"Before we do much exploring," he said, "we need something to eat. I am nearly famished, and you, ladies, must be greatly exhausted by your long fast."

"But there should be other things to eat here than animal flesh," said Jacinta. "Cannot we find bananas, plantains, or other vegetables or fruits?"

"Good," said Medworth. "I never thought of that. I will look."

He left them and started off to look for something to eat, agreeing not to get beyond easy call.

"I never knew that bananas grew on mountains," he said to himself.

But then he reflected that the mountain, being surrounded by the warm waters of the Orinoco, had probably as warm a climate near the water level as the valleys inland, and without paying much attention to the general topography of the island, he trudged on, looking for bananas.

Fortunately, before he had wandered far from his companions, he found three banana trees, one twenty, one fifteen and another small one, ten feet in height. The two larger and older trees were laden with the delicious yellow fruit. Arthur took his knife from his pocket, and with some little difficulty cut a stock containing about forty large and luscious bananas.

With these he hurried back to his companions.

"I have been fortunate indeed," he said. "See, here are some bananas and enough more where they came from to [illegible] us [illegible] we [illegible] to remain here that long."

When they had finished their welcome morning repast, Medworth said:

"It is now necessary for me to make an exploration of the island. The slope we are on now is rather steep, but where the banana trees grow seems to be the beginning of a plateau, and I believe we shall find a more agreeable spot thereupon which to pitch our camp."

"Do you think we shall find shelter here?" asked Dona Maria.

"No," replied Medworth, smiling. "I saw no indications that there are any [illegible] except ourselves. We shall not find shelter, but we can make one. We need a place in which to sleep so as to be protected from rain or prowling beasts."

"True enough," said Jacinta, laughing. "We have been so long without sleep that I have forgotten I ever slept."

"Glorious youth," murmured her mother. "I wish I could so easily forget my sleep. I am nearly dead for it."

"Away, then," said Medworth, starting to go. "Away I go to find a place where Dona Maria may take a nap."

"Do be careful," said Jacinta, tenderly. "Do not go into danger. Remember that we need you."

"I do not think there is any danger," replied Arthur. "By the way, can you use a revolver?"

"Jacinta can shoot," said Dona Maria. "She owns a beautiful silver-mounted rifle that hangs in her room in the castle, with which she shoots deer and alligators."

"I wish it was here instead of in her room in the castle," replied Medworth. "But since it is not, we must do the best we can with what we have. I will leave my revolver with you to use in protecting yourselves from any chance intruders."

"No, no!" exclaimed Jacinta. "We at least know that nothing threatens us now, while you are going where you may need this to save your life."

"Nevertheless, you must keep it," he said. "I will also leave the water-proof pouch of cartridges with you. I shall be gone some time. My wet clothes are beginning to feel uncomfortable, and I am going to dry them. If you are wise, you will do the same."

As Medworth was starting off, Jacinta sprang to his side, and taking his hands in hers, looked up into his face with her eyes beaming with passionate love.

"Do be careful," she said. "Do not go into danger."

"I will be careful. Do not fear for me," he said, smiling down at her, and, grateful for her tender solicitude, he gave her hands a gentle pressure, as she drew them away.

He strode off, leaving her with a blush and happy smile on her face and rapidly beating heart.

"My love!" she murmured, as she watched his stalwart, retreating form. "Come back to me safely! Come back!"

(To be continued.)

MILES NOT ALL THE SAME

They Differ in Length in Various Countries and by Land and Sea.

English-speaking countries have four different miles—the ordinary mile of 5,280 feet and the geographical or nautical mile of 6,085, making a difference of about one-seventh between the two; then there is the Scotch mile of 5,928 feet, and the Irish mile of 6,720 feet; four various miles, every one of which is still in use. Then almost every country has its own standard mile. The Romans have their mil passnum, 1,000 paces, which must have been about 3,000 feet in length, unless we ascribe to Caesar's legionaries great stepping capacity. The German mile of today is 24,318 feet in length, more than four and a half times as long as our mile. The Dutch, the Danes and the Prussians enjoy a mile that is 18,440 feet long, three and one-half times the length of ours; and the Swiss get more exercise in walking their mile than we get in walking five miles, for their mile is 9,153 yards long, while our is only 1,760 yards. The Italian mile is only a few feet longer than ours, the Roman mile is shorter, while the Tuscan and the Turkish miles are 150 yards longer. The Swedish mile is 7,341 yards long and the Vienna post mile is 8,796 yards in length. So here is a list of twelve different miles, and besides this there are other measures of distance, not counting the French kilometer, which is rather less than two-thirds of a mile. The Brazilians have a milia that is one and one-fourth times as long as our mile; the Neapolitan miglio is about the same length; the Japanese ri, or mile, is two and one-half times ours; the Russian verst is five-eighths as long as our mile, while the Persian standard is a fesakh, four and a half miles long, which is said to be equal to the parasang, so familiar to the readers of Xenophon's Anabasis. The distance indicated by the league also varies in different countries.—Ledger Monthly.

Always Ready.

The Ameer of Afghanistan is said to have made the following statement: "I am always ready as a soldier on the march to a battle, in such a manner that I could start without any delay in case of emergency. The pockets of my coats and trousers are always filled with loaded revolvers and one or two loaves of bread for one day's food; this bread is changed every day. Several guns and swords are always lying by the side of my bed or the chair on which I am seated within reach of my hand, and saddled horses are always kept ready in front of my office, not only for myself, but for all my courtiers and personal attendants, at the door of my durbar room. I have also ordered that a considerable number of gold coins should be sewn into the saddles of my horses when required for a journey, and on both [illegible] I think it is necessary in such a warlike country that the sovereign, and especially a sovereign who is a soldier himself, should always be as prepared for emergencies as a soldier on the field of battle. Though my country is perhaps more peaceful and [illegible] now than many other countries, still one can never be too cautious and too well prepared."—Family Herald.

TOO MUCH FOR HIM.

The proprietor of a tan yard built a stand on one of the main streets of a Virginia town for the purpose of selling leather and buying new hides.

When he had completed the building he considered for a long time what sort of sign to put up to attract attention to the new establishment. Finally a happy thought struck him. He bored an augur hole through the door post and stuck a calf's tail into it with the tufted end outside.

After awhile he saw a solemn-faced man standing near the door looking at the sign, his eyes in a round, meditative stare behind his spectacles. The tanner watched him a minute, then stepped out and addressed him.

"Good morning, sir," he said.

"Morning!" said the other, without taking his eyes off the sign.

"Want to buy leather?" asked the tanner.

"No."

"Got any hides to sell?"

"No."

"Are you a farmer?"

"No."

"Merchant?"

"No."

"Lawyer?"

"No."

"Doctor?"

"No."

"What are you, then?"

"I'm a philosopher. I've been standing here for an hour trying to figure out how that calf got through that augur hole."

THE POINT OF THE PROVERB.

An old proverb advises the shoemaker to stick to his last. It means that a man always succeeds best at the business he knows. To the farmer it means, stick to your plow; to the blacksmith, stick to your forge; to the painter, stick to your brush. When we make experiments out of our line they are likely to prove expensive failures.

It is amusing, however, to remark how every one of us secretly thinks he could do some other fellow's work better than the other fellow himself. The painter imagines he can make paint better than the paint manufacturer; the farmer thinks he can do a job of painting better, or at least cheaper than the painter, and so on.

A farm hand in one of Octave Thanet's stories tells the Walking Delegate of the Painter's Union, "Anybody can slather paint," and the old-line painter tells the paint salesman, "None of your ready made mixtures for me; I reckon I ought to know how to mix paint."

The farm hand is wrong and the painter is wrong: "Shoemaker, stick to your last." The "fancy farmer" can farm, of course, but it is an expensive amusement. If it strikes him as pleasant to grow strawberries at fifty cents apiece, or to produce eggs that cost him five dollars a dozen, it is a form of amusement, to be sure, if he can afford it, but it's not farming. If the farmer likes to slosh around with a paint brush and can afford the time and the expense of having a practical painter do the job right pretty soon afterward, it's a harmless form of amusement. If the painter's customers can afford to stand for paint that comes off in half the time it should, they have a perfect right to indulge his harmless vanity about his skill in paint making. But in none of these cases does the shoemaker stick to his last.

There is just one class of men in the world that knows how to make paint properly and have the facilities for doing it right; and that is, the paint manufacturers—the makers of the standard brands of ready prepared paints. The painter mixes paints; the paint manufacturer grinds them together. In a good ready-prepared paint every article of one kind of pigment is forced to join hands with a particle of another kind and every bit of solid matter is forced, as it were, to open its mouth and drink in its share of linseed oil. That is the only way good paint can be made and if the painter knew how to do it he has nothing at hand to do it with. A paint pot and a paddle are a poor substitute for power mixers, buhr mills and roller mills.

The man who owns a building and neglects to paint it as often as it needs paint is only a degree more short-sighted than the one who tries to do his own painting or allows the painter to mix his paint for him.

P. G.

Lively Australian Weeklies.

The little weeklies of the towns of Australia are livelier and more abusive of each other than the "Kickers" and "Iconoclasts" of American frontier towns. The editor of these rival journals must possess a peculiar qualification—the ability to "slang" the opposition paper and all connected with it. Township folks look to the rival editors to dissipate the local dullness and provide a weekly feast of fun and billingsgate, and the proprietors of the papers insist on having editors capable of satisfying popular expectations.

Not for Him.

Representative Beidler of Ohio tells this story of his efforts to sell a trunk to one of his dairy hands: "You are going away," said Beidler. "Let me sell you this trunk."

"What for?" asked the employe.

"To put your clothes in, of course."

"An' go naked? Why, I'd be arrested in a minute."

The Mark of Success.

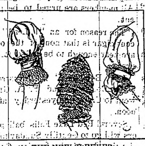
All ye who's make your mark in life
To this advice should hark—
Seek first, if you would win the strife,
To make a [illegible] mark.

SOME NEW SLEEVES.

Now Sleeves and the Last Year's Blouse Will Do Well for This Season.

It is more or less a lost art to buy enough with each gown for a new pair of sleeves. A dressmaker told the other day of this being the habit of one of the best dressed of her customers, not only with her gowns but with blouses. "And," she remarked, "besides always being well dressed she spends less money on her clothes for one who goes as much as she does than anyone I know."

This is economy in a nutshell, especially in blouses, as they are more elaborate than anything else, and it is the beautiful work on the front of the waist that is worth saving, equally so where you have paid the price for it in money or labor. There is little change this year in the blouses themselves, but a change in sleeves is necessary unless the waist was in the extreme of fashion last year.



THE NEW SLEEVES.

The little white ruffled sleeve first seen last year made in lingerie is now utilized in silk gauze and chiffons under spangled or sequined black net dresses. These are made up over white, being first mounted on white taffeta and interlined with white silk mull or chiffon. One extremely pretty gown mounted in this way had the white sleeves made entirely of ruffles, and there was a deep girdle wrinkled around the waist to match. The waist was of the black lace, draped surplice fashion. A beautiful black tulle gown worn by Princess Henry of Pless lately had sleeves and a flounce at the hem of lovely cream lace. Her gown was trimmed with paillettes that flashed steel in some lights and silver and jet in others. The edges, overlapping both the flounce and sleeves, were heavily fringed with the passementerie.

AT A SUMMER WEDDING.

Symbolic Decorations on the Breakfast Table and Chief Points of Decoration in the Rooms.

Wedding rings were symbolized in the centerpiece at a recent breakfast. They were two-inch wide, interlaced hoops, thickly sewn with flowers and mounted on a standard. To keep them as true to their originals as possible, they were as golden as genesta and acacia blooms could make them. The standard was hidden under ferns and vines. With this, on every cover, were laid "wedding roses." These were a conceit of the bride's fancy, and were merely two bride roses, whose long stems were slipped through a little ring of gold wire for half their length.

Outside the dining-room one of the strategic points of the decoration is the staircase balustrade, for it is the first conspicuous object to meet the eyes of entering guests. For this reason and because it is most easily adorned, it should be made as attractive and festive as lies in the decorator's power, by winding the rods tightly and the rail more heavily with green.

If there is a mirror in the hall, its frame will give opportunity for hanging more green and a bow of tulle can be caught in at the top, surmounting all. Usually there is a shelf at the lower edge of the mirror, and this can be bedded or banked with flowers.

An archway between rooms, if grilled, should surely have the latter covered with shrubbery. California privet and laurel are both satisfactory for filling large spaces like this, if one cannot afford the necessary quantities of more delicate and expensive green. Bringing the shrubbery down the sides of the arch, some stiff showy flowers, such as azaleas, rhododendrons, peonies, or even roses, can be intermingled.

Bazar Novelty.

A clever young woman who was asked to take charge of the pin cushion table at a recent bazar demonstrated her executive abilities. A week or so previous to the bazar date she sent cards for a cushion competition at her home and a prize was announced for the most original and unique fashion. Her friends entered into the scheme with enthusiasm and the result was a collection of cushions, made or purchased, by the donors that suggested a menagerie, circus and market, not to mention a toy shop. Lingerie hat cushions in large doll size were especially noticeable, and the vegetable collection even included cucumbers of the variety beloved for pickling.

Empire [illegible]

The empire coats and skirts are being adopted pretty generally. At first they looked rather odd, but one is becoming accustomed to them. The empire coat with its long lines, sweeping away from its little short waist, is delightfully [illegible] in its appearance. The [illegible] colors [illegible] turquoise blue and a pretty shade of Josephine violet. The [illegible] cut quite princess at the belt, coming up high to meet the short-waisted blouse and the sweeping empire coat.

HE WENT ON CRUTCHES

All Medi[illegible] Failed Until Dr. Williams' [illegible]

"Some years ago," says Mr. W. H. Clark, a printer living at [illegible] Buchanan street, [illegible] a bad attack of [illegible] could not seem to get [illegible] it. All sorts of medicines failed to do me any good and my trouble [illegible]. My feet were so [illegible] could not wear shoes and [illegible] crutches. The pain was terrible.

"One day I was [illegible] the type of an article for the paper telling what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills had done for a man afflicted as I was and I was so impressed with it that I determined to give the medicine a trial. For a year my rheumatism had been growing worse, but after taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I began to improve. The pain and swelling all disappeared and I can truthfully say that I haven't felt better in the past twenty years than I do right now. I could name, off hand, a half dozen people who have used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills at my suggestion and who have received good results from them."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are guaranteed to be safe and harmless to the most delicate constitution. They contain no morphine, opiate, narcotic, nor anything to cause a drug habit. They do not act on the bowels but they actually make new blood and strengthen the nerves.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure rheumatism because they make rich, red blood and no man or woman can have healthy blood and rheumatism at the same time. They have also cured many cases of anaemia, neuralgia, sciatica, partial paralysis, locomotor ataxia and other diseases that have not yielded to ordinary treatment.

All druggists sell Dr. Williams' Pink Pills or they will be sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

For a Gardeners' Home.

John M. Hunter of New York, president of the National Gardeners' association, composed of landscape and decorative gardeners of the country, is touring California with the object of finding a location for a national gardeners' home, which is to be established in that state. He expresses the opinion that the Golden Gate Park, San Francisco, is the most beautiful in this country.

TRY THIS ON YOUR PUMPS.

Bunion Plaster Will Prevent That Unpleasant Slipping.

A smart, up-to-date young woman asked the drug clerk for a box of bunion plasters. It caused one to look with curiosity at her feet. They were straight and slim in the smartest of ties.

"That is a new trick," the drug clerk explained when she had taken her unembarrassed way to the street. "A ready-made tie or one of those new low pumps is likely to slip up and down at the heel, or bind the ankle, so that it chafes either way. Some lady genius stuck a bunion plaster in the back of her shoe and the trouble was all over."

Slums Always in East.

"A city's slums," said a globe trotter, "are always in its eastern quarter. I wonder why?

"Take New York. Its east side is its slum side. So it is with London. The east end is the slum end.

"Of Philadelphia, Chicago, San Francisco, Canton and Madrid the same thing holds good, as I know from personal experience.

"The only possible ground I can give for a city's slums being invariably in its eastern quarter is that this quarter is the one that is exposed to the harsh and unpleasant rigors of the east wind."

BREAD DYSPEPSIA.

The Digesting Element Left Out.

Bread dyspepsia is common. It affects the bowels, because white bread is nearly all starch, and starch is digested in the intestines, not in the stomach proper.

Up under the shell of the wheat berry nature has provided a curious deposit which is turned into diastase when it is subjected to the saliva and to the pancreatic juices in the human intestines.

This diastase is absolutely necessary to digest starch and turn it into grape sugar, which is the next form; but that part of the wheat berry makes dark flour, and the modern miller cannot readily sell dark flour, so nature's valuable digester is thrown out and the human system must handle the starch as best it can, without the help that nature intended.

Small wonder that appendicitis, peritonitis, constipation and all sorts of trouble exist when we go so contrary to nature's law. The food experts that perfected Grape-Nuts Food, knowing these facts, made use in their experiments of the entire wheat and barley, including all the parts, and subjected them to moisture and long continued warmth, which allows time and the proper conditions for developing the diastase outside of the human body.

In this way the starchy part is transformed into grape sugar in a perfectly natural manner, without the use of chemicals or any outside ingredients. The little sparkling crystals of grape sugar can be seen on the pieces of Grape-Nuts. This food therefore is naturally pre-digested and its use in place of bread will quickly correct the troubles that have been brought about by the too free use of starch in food, and that is very common in the human race to-day.

The effect of eating Grape-Nuts ten days or two weeks and the discontinuance of ordinary white bread is very marked. The user will gain rapidly in strength and physical and mental health.

Mrs. Mittie Huffaker, R. R. No. 3, Columbia, Tenn., writes:

"I was afflicted with dyspepsia for several years and at last was confined to my bed, unable to sit up.

"We tried several different doctors without relief.

"I had given up all hope of any relief and was almost dead when my husband bought me a bottle of Peruna.

"At first I could not notice any benefit, but after taking several bottles I was cured sound and well.

"It is to Peruna I owe my life today.

"I cheerfully recommend it to all sufferers."

Revised Formula.

"For a number of years requests have come to me from a multitude of grateful friends urging that Peruna be given a slight laxative quality. I have been experimenting with a laxative addition for quite a length of time, and now feel gratified to announce to the friends of Peruna that I have incorporated such a quality in the medicine which, in my opinion, can only enhance its well-known beneficial character.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

TITLED WAITERS IN THE WEST.

Chicago Swarms With Them of Many Nationalities.

The exiled nobleman as a waiter appears to possess advantages beyond his title and his manners.

"They make much better waiters than the ordinary applicants for those posts," said the manager of a Fifth avenue restaurant, "because they know what a gentleman wants and how he wants it. They are usually quicker and quieter than the ordinary waiter. None that I ever knew rose to any importance, because they only stick to the work long enough to accumulate a little capital. Then they go West. Many of them go straight through to Chicago when they arrive here. It's further off and they are less likely to meet their countrymen. Chicago swarms with titled waiters of nearly every nationality."

TALES OF ADVENTURE

THROUGH THE RAPIDS.

Two young women, canoeing in the upper Gatineau, Canada, encountered a situation of extreme danger for which they were entirely unprepared. In the Cosmopolitan one of them tells the story:

We were two in the canoe, and we had passed the rapids on our way up the week before, but did not recognize them now that we approached them from the opposite direction. Then we had "portaged" round them, carrying the canoe on our shoulders, over trunks of fallen trees and through the matted branches of the brushwood.

We were going at a ten-mile-an-hour gait before I realized our position and that the time to land had passed. There was no turning back against a ten-mile current, no making for either side, where the broken ripples on the surface showed jagged rocks only a few inches below. Down the middle of the channel lay our only course.

Quickly I changed places with my companion, crawling cautiously over the camping outfit stowed in the bottom, while she crept as carefully backward. In rapids the bowsman guides the canoe, and I was the more experienced.

With all our strength in our paddles, we lifted the light bark canoe over the water, and just as the farthest rock grated our side we swung into the channel and boiled down between the boulders, the current sweeping us on at a rate of fully fifteen miles an hour.

But as we swung, my maple paddle snapped. It had caught in a fissure of the rock where I had jabbed it to keep from striking.

In impotent despair I looked round at my companion. Until the present trip she had never been in a canoe, and her only knowledge in the management of one had been gained by my coaching and by less than two weeks of practice. But plainly the river and the forest were now in her veins, and the craft of the paddle had come by inspiration. The hesitation of the city-born was dispelled, and with skillful stroke, scarce noting my discomfiture, with eyes fixed on the winding channel ahead of us, she steered safe through the boiling waters of the second pitch. With a whirl of spray at the finish, we brought up in the eddy below, gasping from our effort, yet thrilling with the joy of it.

There were three inches of water in the canoe when we reached the foot of the rapids, which had come in over the sides as we bowled through the last big pitch.

FACE TO FACE WITH A PANTHER

A sportsman out after partridges stopped for a drink from a woodland spring, and then decided to have a rest. In "Hunting Without a Gun" the author gives the story:

The soothing sound of the tricklin water was lulling me to drowsiness, when suddenly I heard the sharp clatter of a pebble and the sound of quick lapping of water.

Springing to a sitting posture, I saw an enormous panther not more than fifty feet from me. My movement had evidently first disclosed me to him, and for a moment he regarded me with a surprise as great as my own. Then his mouth opened and closed as if shaping an unvoiced cry, and he crouched down, still regarding me intently.

I caught up my gun without taking my eyes from him, and cocked both barrels. They were loaded with No. 6 shot—insignificant missiles against so formidable a beast—but they might blind him, I thought, if I could shoot straight and quick enough when he sprang.

So we remained for what seemed an interminable time. I was terribly afraid, and wondered if the panther would hold me at bay until nightfall put me at his mercy.

A partridge came hurling by me from beyond the position of my unpleasant vis-a-vis. Then another and another in startled flight. A hare scurried by, and a panting woodchuck shuffled past me. I was wondering the cause of this alarm of woodfolk when the riddle was solved by a strong smell of smoke drifting into my face with the freshening breeze. The woods were on fire.

Almost at the same moment the panther realized the common danger. He rose to his feet, looked behind him, then, with a sidelong look at me, began to move slowly away, but had hardly disappeared from sight when I heard him retreating with rapid leaps.

I lost no time in following his example, and made the best speed I could make, and in half an hour was safe in the midst of cleared fields.

DEATH OF A MAN EATER.

On the morning of Thursday three Chinese woodcutters left their kongsi home, situated at the ninth mile, Ayer Hitam road, thirteen and a half miles from Kajang, and went into the jungle to work.

At 8 a. m., at a point about one and a half miles from the road, a tiger sprang out behind them, and one of them hit him on the head with a backward stroke of a parang, laying bare the bone of the skull, as afterward appeared. The tiger did not at that time seize any of the men, who went on their usual working places. About 11.30 a. m. one of them who was sawing alone in a small clearing, a mile further in, was killed by the tiger and his body carried away. The tracks showed that the tiger had systematically hunted up his man along the jungle path.

The next day a search party from Kajang went out, the body was found and Mr. Hay set a spring gun, the report of which was heard at the kongsi house soon after midnight. In the morning the spot was visited again, blood was seen and the signs of a tremendous leap made by the tiger. A few yards away he was found dead with a wound in his flank. He was brought to Kajang the same night, and on being measured was found to be 8 feet 8 inches in length. In the process of skinning two cuts were found on one of the hind legs, and it seems possible that they were the cuts which a woodcutter stated he had inflicted on a tiger with an axe a month or two ago.—Malay Mail.

PLUCKY OFFICER.

Charles Gibson, a Creek Indian, writing for the Eufaula Journal, gives this account of how Grant Johnson, the well-known deputy marshal, just resigned, captured the notorious desperado, John Tiger:

"Johnson has arrested some of the most desperate men of the Territory; for instance, John Tigar who had just left three dead men and a wounded boy on the streets of Eufaula. Johnson rode into Eufaula as Tiger went out of town whirling his Colt's .45 revolver over his head, defying any man to stand before him. As soon as Johnson knew what had happened he started in pursuit under the protest of bystanders, who told him that he should have a large posse, as he had to deal with one of the worst men in the Territory. Johnson said he did not have time to gather up any help, but dashed out on the trail of Tiger, who was then in hiding behind a tree. Tiger took two fair shots at Johnson. Tiger's body being protected by the tree. As Tiger reached around the tree for the third shot, Johnson shot him through the arm and shocked him. Johnson alighted and had the handcuffs on Tiger before he got over the shock."

6000 MILES IN A TRANCE.

A curious case of lapse of memory has just been revealed here on the arrival from the northern district of New South Wales of an American, whose last remembrance was of Los Angeles, Cal. The American's story is vouched for by two Sydney doctors, who have investigated the circumstances. The mysterious traveler, whose name I am requested to withhold, left Parahoe, in California, a few days before last Easter, intending to join his wife and family at Los Angeles. He remembers arriving there, but has no recollection of what happened afterward.

He awoke to find himself under a tree in the Australian bush, and was immensely astonished at seeing around him many unknown forms of vegetation. He noticed that his hands were hard and rough, though he had never consciously done a day's hard work. A bullock-driver passed him shortly after his awakening, and he at once inquired the way to Los Angeles. The man stared in astonishment, and answered that Hill End was the nearest township.

The man without a memory thereupon asked the date, and was told it was late in October, and that he was in New South Wales. He worked his way to Sydney, a distance of some hundreds of miles, and is now trying to obtain employment here to get the money to return to his family. He is in total ignorance as to their whereabouts and as to his own doings during the six months between April and October.—Sydney Correspondence of London Mail.

BY BALLOON OVER PYRENEES.

Details reaching France last night concerning Senor Duro's magnificent aerial voyage over the Pyrenees are of great interest for those associated with aeronautics. It appears that the trip was in the nature of a tour de force of seizing occasion by the forelock. It had not been proposed to do anything for a day or two, but a steady wind from the north setting in over Pau during Monday afternoon, Senor Duro had his airship rapidly inflated, and as dusk was setting in committed himself alone to the winds of the night. He cleared the Pyrenees over the Pic du Midi d'Ossau at a height of 9000 feet, traversing a furious hurricane of wind and snow that for a time placed him in some peril. He had to keep himself at this height most of the night, by reason of the Spanish mountain chains. He obtained elfin glimpses of cities so widely separated as Saragossa, Madrid and Toledo as he sped along through the dark midair, and about 4 a. m. on Tuesday the aeronaut found that he had traversed Spain in the night from north to south. He was then over Linares, in Granada, confronted by the great peak of the Sierra Nevada, nearly 11,000 feet high, with the Mediterranean behind it and Morocco. Rather than face this prospect the Senor came down at Gaudix, after traversing 452 miles in ten and a half hours—a fine express speed.—London Globe.

Last Advice From His Wife.

Well! we will leave it in the hands of providence. But if they do—mind, my dear, and disagree with them.'"

A LAND OF OPPORTUNITIES.

Inducements Held Out by Western Canada Are Powerful.

A recent number of the Winnipeg (Manitoba) Free Press contains an excellent article on the prospects in Western Canada, a portion of which we are pleased to reproduce.

The agents of the Canadian Government, located at different centers in the States, will be pleased to give any further information as to rates, and how to reach these lands.

"Just now there is a keener interest than ever before on the part of the outside world, in regard to the claims of the Canadian West as a field of settlement. At no previous time has there been such a rush of immigration, and the amount of information distributed broadcast is unprecedentedly great.

"In the majority of the States of the Union and in Great Britain the opportunities for home-making and achieving of even a modest competence are at the best limited. Moreover, according to the social and industrial conditions prevalent in those communities, the future holds out no promise of better things. It is not strange, then, that energetic young men should turn their eyes to Canada's great wheat belt, where every man can pursue fortune without the hindrance of any discouraging handicap.

"The inducements held out by Western Canada are powerful and made manifest by the great movement now in progress. That the prospects are considerably more than reasonably certain is borne out by the history of the country and its residents. The promise of gain is powerful, but when added to it there is the prospect of a corresponding social and civic elevation, it should prove irresistible to young men of a particularly desirable class for any new country.

"The Canadian West is alive with opportunities for the young man who aims at becoming more than a mere atom in the civil and national fabric. Some of the eager young fellows who arrive on the prairies daily are destined to become more than merely prosperous farmers. In the near future great municipal and provincial development will be in the hands of the people. The stepping stone to both financial prosperity and civil prominence is, and will be, the farm. For every professional opening there are hundreds of agricultural openings. The Canadian prairies are teeming with opportunities for the honest and industrious of all classes, but they are specially inviting to the ambitious young man who seeks a field for the energy and ability which he feels inherent within him. The familiar cry of 'Back to the soil!' is more than a vain sounding phrase when applied to Western Canada."

CORDIAL INVITATION

ADDRESSED TO WORKING GIRLS

Miss Barrows Tells How Mrs. Pinkham's Advice Helps Working Girls.

Girls who work are particularly susceptible to female disorders, especially those who are obliged to stand on their feet from morning until night in stores or factories.

Day in and day out the girl toils, and she is often the bread-winner of the family. Whether she is sick or well, whether it rains or shines, she must get to her place of employment, perform the duties exacted of her—smile and be agreeable.

Among this class the symptoms of female diseases are early manifest by weak and aching backs, pain in the lower limbs and lower part of the stomach. In consequence of frequent wetting of the feet, periods become painful and irregular, and frequently there are faint and dizzy spells, with loss of appetite, until life is a burden. All these symptoms point to a derangement of the female organism which can be easily and promptly cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Miss Abby F. Barrows, Nelsonville, Athens Co., Ohio, tells what this great medicine did for her. She writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I feel it my duty to tell you the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier have done for me. Before I took them I was very nervous, had dull headaches, pains in back, and periods were irregular, I had been to several doctors, and they did me no good.

"Your medicine has made me well and strong. I can do most any kind of work without complaint, and my periods are all right.

"I am in better health than I ever was, and I know it is all due to your remedies. I recommend your advice and medicine to all who suffer."

It is to such girls that Mrs. Pinkham holds out a helping hand and extends a cordial invitation to correspond with her. She is daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham and for twenty-five years has been advising sick women free of charge. Her long record of success in treating woman's ills makes her letters of advice of untold value to every ailing working girl. Address, Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

For the Children

To succeed these days you must have plenty of grit, courage, strength. How is it with the children? Are they thin, pale, delicate? Do not forget Ayer's Sarsaparilla. You know it makes the blood pure and rich, and builds up the general health in every way.

The children cannot possibly have good health unless the bowels are in proper condition. Correct any constipation by giving small laxative doses of Ayer's Pills. All vegetable, sugar-coated.

That character is the sum total of our performances.

That if a man kills time should he be called a tempocide.

That it is said a knowing man can size up the love of a woman from her sighs.

That someone says a thick tongue is often responsible for a lot of thin ideas.

That they do say the girl behind the glove counter knows how to handle kids.

That it was a horrid bachelor who said no woman has strength enough to hold her tongue.

That not many women would refuse a man because he was dissipated if his fortune wasn't.

That the hardest man to defeat in an argument is he who knows the least about the subject.

That a firm belief in our ability to perform an act is the shadow of its coming accomplishment.

That Adam and Eve may not have been aristocrats but they certainly belonged to the very first families.

That the best line for a girl to take when she goes fishing is a beau-line, if she expects to make a good catch.

That the United States senate should be a warning to any man who thinks a woman's club a subject of jest.

That all United States senators ought to learn to play the violin—it would give their chins a much needed rest.

That it is easy for a person to be satisfied with what he has; it is what he hasn't that makes him dissatisfied.

IN PIONEER DAYS

Mch. 22, 1883.

Mr. Kaufer has closed the headquarters hotel with a view to engage in another line of business.

A petition has been circulated among our business men this week to raise funds to help the Indians complete the road between this place and Red Lake.

Mr. Ellicott has located his law office for the present in C. Kretzschma'rs office, where he will do a general land, law, loan, collection and insurance business. See his card in this issue.

Mr. Wm. Smith, of Le Sueur, father of Jos. Smith, has arrived with his family and will at once embark in the real estate business. He is accompanied by Geo. Crist, who will locate here and help to boom our lively "little village."

Mch. 29, 1883.

Mr. McKenzie, of the St. Hilaire Spectator, was in town last Friday and made us a pleasant call.

Red Lake Falls is supplying St. Hilaire with lumber. Come often gentlemen, between our two steam saw mills and Prentice & McClatchie's large stock we can keep you supplied.

Apl. 5, 1883.

Mrs. C. Kretzschmar is rapidly recovering from the accident that laid her up.

Fr. Champagne has sold the house south of the Catholic Church, on Main street, lately occupied by Mr. Dow, to A. Bisallion for $1200.00 spot cash.

The demand for dwellings and rooms, will from present indications soon be enormous. The building of a number of small residences will prove a profitable investment if done promptly.

Apl. 12, 1883.

Mr. C. C. Jackson, from White Earth, son-in-law of Dr. Allen, now located there, is looking over Red Lake Falls with his friend Mr. Wilder, and will in all probability decide to locate here. Our town has scores of openings, and our citizens are glad to see active men take hold.

Apl. 26, 1883

The French Canadian Catholics of this vicinity are talking of organizing a local branch of the society of St. John the Baptist. Their numbers are sufficient to make it very successful.

Apl. 29, 1883.

The ice in Red Lake River started out on Friday, the first break commencing at about 9 a. m. By eleven o'clock the river was clear, and the bridge entirely safe.

May 3, 1883.

Mr. Ed. Hamry arrived from Sparta Wis., on Saturday, and now the Detling, Hayes & Hamry addition is certain to have its boom. The three ought to make a full team.

DIED—April 27, Mrs. Anna Leger, in the 29th year of her age. Mrs. Leger was the first woman to locate in Red Lake Falls, and her loss will be regretted by a wide circle of acquaitances. She leaves a husband and seven children.

At 10 a. m. April 25, of consumption, Daniel Bottineau at the age of 38 years. He came to Red Lake Falls from Minneapolis in 1877, residing here from that time until his death, and leaves a wife and three young children. His father, Pierre Bottineau, who has been absent in Minneapolis, arrived the day of his death, but too late to see him alive.

May 10, 1883.

Mr. Hennemuth's house on Bridge street is all enclosed, and carpenters are pushing their part of the work.

Mr. Henning's house, just north of S. B. Curtis' shop on 5th street, has been neatly plastered and will soon be occupied by Mr. Schneider. He will run a restauant on the ground floor, and doubtless do a good business.

May 17, 1883.

M. Bray & Son have leased the old Headquarters hotel on Main street and are now running it.

Mr. McNerthney of Buffalo Co. Wis., a brother-in-law of J. M. Boyle, will arrive this week with his family and move on the farm lately owned by Ole Larson, east of Hunt's on the north side of town.

J. P. Harren a week ago Tuesday had quarters in Sloggy's building, and no prepartions made for any change. By Saturday however, he had not only built a bran new shop, south of Kahler's saloon, but had moven in! Nothing slow about that.

JUNIOR BANQUET.

On Thursday evening at Paul's hotel the Juniors will give their annual banquet to the graduating class to which the high school faculty and the alumni of '05 are also bidden. The invitation is a clever conceit crouched in poetic language. It is as follows:

When you see the rising moon
On the Seventh night of June,
Come ye guests, partake the feast
Of luscious fruits and viands rare
And dainties far beyond compare;
That's served on beds of violets blue
And fresh-blown tulips washed in dew;
Midst music such as Orpheus played,
Who rocks and trees enchanted made
With strains of heavenly melody.
Bring sport that wrinkled care derides
And laughter holding both his sides.
Many delights are promised ye
Come, join the mirth and jollity.

ALUMNI BANQUET

The high school alumni held a meeting last evening and decided to entertain the seniors at a sunrise breakfast in the woods Saturday morning June 9. The feast will be prepared against the hour of six o'clock.

Creamery at Deer Park.

A. W. Smith, of Fosston, has shipped a complete creamery outfit up the Red Lake river. The creamery is to be built in the town of Deer Park, Red Lake county, and is owned by a number of farmers up in that vicinity. It is expected to have it complete and in running order by the first of June. The farmers up in that section own a large number of cows and the new creamery will have plenty of cream from the start, which insures that it will be a success. When it is taken into consideration that Deer Park has been settled but a short time, the farmers there are showing great progress.

TO SEE WHAT A DOLLAR IS WORTH

How Many Debts Will a Dollar Pay When Spent With the Home Merchant.

The Jim-Paul-Courier Dollar Worth Double Its Face Value to the Spender.

Just to see how many debts a dollar will pay, when spent with the home merchant, the COURIER has started one on its journey with tags attached to write your name on when it comes into your possession.

If this dollar should be spent with a catalogue house or out of town merchant it would probably never return to circulation in Red Lake Falls.

To keep it in circulation a premium is put upon it. Berthon & Armstrong, clothiers, will receive it for double its face value, or $2, whenever it is presented at their store in payment for goods purchased to the amount of $10. At the COURIER office it is also good for $2 in payment of subscription to date and one year in advance. If the holder of the dollar is paid to-date, the dollar will pay two years in advance.

The dollar gets its name "Jim-Paul-Courier Dollar" from the fact it is worth $2 at Berthon & Armstrong's and the COURIER.

This is not an exclusive advertising scheme. Any merchant in the city is at liberty to place any premium upon it he may see fit. It is intended as an object lesson in patronizing the home merchant. Keep it in circulation.

When the dollar comes into your possession write your name and the date on the first vacant line on attached card. Then spend the dollar but be sure not to spend it with any one who trades out of town or is liable to "salt it down." Keep it circulating.

The dollar has not been defaced and is worth its face value anywhere on earth.

Keep it in circulation.

FIELD MEET POSTPONED

Bad Weather Interferes With All Out of Door Sports.

Jupiter P. has been exceedingly busy during the entire season in preventing various forms of out of door sport, doing his worst for last Saturday when the Inter-Scholastic meet was to be held at Thief River Falls. The day itself was cold and dark and several days of rain previous had left the grounds unfit for any kind of sport so the meet was postponed until this week when it was hoped the schools could get together. Altho Mr. Chamberlain, president of the association, has done his utmost, it has been found impossible to hold it this week on account of state examinations. So there will be no meet this year.

The indefinite postponement is a matter of great regret as this is the first year they have had an association or planned for a meet. But with the association and enthusiasm engendered, next year will probably see a very successful event.

MEMORIAL DAY DULY OBSERVED

Red Lake Falls Pays a Fitting Tribute to the Living and Dead of G. A. R.

Splendid Program Given at the Opera House Where Citizens Join in Ceremonies.

With lowering skies and intermittent rains as tho the clouds would weep themselves away while all nature joined in tearful reverence in the tribute to the dead, the Memorial Day services were solemnly carried out in Red Lake Falls and all her citizens united in the universal custom of cheers for the living and sorrow for those forever gone.

With flags half-masted thruout the city and all business suspended, the parade formed at the Lafayette school house and marched the principal streets. It was formed of the city police preceding the Red Lake Falls band which did escort duty for Maj. Beck Post, G. A. R. Following the old soldiers was the fire department, newly uniformed, and then the children of the public schools with Supt. Chamberlain and the teachers corps.

Arrived at the opera house, which was crowded to its capacity, the program was opened by the chairman, Dr. N. M. Watson, in an especially appropriate, tho brief, address. Rev. Conrad Nauman gave the opening prayer. Then there was the call to order by the members of the G. A. R. and Commander Buse, followed by a selection from the band. While "Tenting Tonight" was being sung by the choir invisible a unique and inspiring effect was produced by the raising of a curtain disclosing a tenting scene with the old soldiers grouped about the campfire in front of their tent, with arms stacked and the stars and stripes, they had fought so valiantly to save, spreading its silken folds as a guarantee of the peace that is and may ever more be as prayed for by the man of God.

Thomas Germo delivered an excellent address filled with patriotic fire and apt allusion to the services of the Grand Army of the Republic in the dark days of rebellion, calling upon all citizens to honor the flag they had given us unsullied. Miss Ida Linnihan in sweet voice read an ode to Decoration Day and Joseph Toupin gave Lincoln's farewell address at Gettysburg. F. A. Grady then addressed the school children in an effort that filled the hearts of his older listeners with the patriotic devotion to country that he trid so well to instill in the younger minds. The band played a selection of patriotic airs, the audience sang "America" and the Rev. Mr. Nauman pronounced the Benediction.

WYLIE ELEVATOR CASE

Hearing Had In This City Monday—No Decision Yet.

A hearing was held in this city Monday before Judge Watts in the action of the Wylie Farmers & Mercantile Co. against the Great Northern Railway. It is a suit to compel the railroad company to grant the plaintiffs a site at Wyl e for an elevator.

The railroad company has refused permission to build on its right of way at Wylie and during last year had compelled the removal of the three elevators that existed there, on the excuse that it was going to abandon its tracks. In a hearing before the Railroad and Warehouse commission the road was ordered to continue its train service.

At the hearing Monday W. E. Rowe of Crookston appeared for the Farmers company and J. C. Wilkinson for the Railway. Lillian Belair was a witness in authentication of the records and Fred Gother and Nick Eckstein were examined on behalf of plaintiff. The defense did not offer any testimony. The matter was submitted on argument and taken under consideration by the court.

It is intimated, tho not authentically so, that the action must fail at this time because of the indefiniteness of the petition upon which the action is based. Judge Watts promises to hand down a decision in a few days.

"Resume of the Forseen."

Just to relieve the minds of our Red Lake Falls brothers who have been worrying for fear Thief River's growth had come to an end and who leered knowingly when building operations were spoken of for this year in our town, we give a short resume of the growth of 1906 so far as can be forseen now.—Thief River Press.

HOTELS WERE ROBBED

Midnight Prowlers Go Through Thief River Falls Hotels.

Sneak thieves are reported to have held up and shaken down the guests of the Thief River Falls hotels Sunday night.

To all appearance it was a systematic raid that had been planned for some time. The Soo, West, Northern and Atlantic hotels were the places of invasion during the hours of midnight when churchyards yawn and the saloons are supposed to close. A number of guests at these four caravansaries lost considerable in money and valuables. There is no report that any trace has been found of the thieves who seem to have made good their escape.

Artificial Eyes in 500 B. C.

As early as 500 B. C. artificial eyes were made by the priests of Rome and Egypt. The priests at that time practiced as physicians and surgeons, using more prayer and less medicine than is used in the medical profession today. The historians in their study of the ancient world find things to show that the ancients were very wise in a crude way. In this age we have the discoveries of ancient as well as modern times to help us to perfect new things. One of the great modern discoveries is golden grain belt beer. Try it and see. NEW GUNS FOR STATE BATTERY.

National Guard to Get $50,000 Worth of Equipment.

New Equipment worth $50,000 has been secured for one of the two Minnesota national guard batteries by Adjt. Gen. F. B. Wood from the department at Washington. Whether Battery A at St. Paul or Battery B at Minneapolis will get the new guns will depend upon which makes the best showing on inspection. In either case both will benefit, as the one that gets the new equipment will turn over most of its present equipment to the other battery. Gen. Wood tried to secure a new battery for each of them, but he could not secure only one, with the promise that the other would be given in a few months.

The battery will consist of four new three-inch guns, with all the necessary equipment. Each of the batteries now has two "three-two" guns. Whichever battery goes without the new guns will then get all four of the present "three-twos." The new three-inch guns are decidedly superior to the old ones.

The war department is equipping many of the batteries in the national guard with new guns. It was found that the militia was short of field artillery, and action is on foot to better the service. All batteries that show themselves capable of handling the new equipment are to be equipped as fast as possible.

SAND SAVED BY NEIGHBORS.

Elevator Company Had Its Buyer Arrested.

M. T. Sand, a wheat buyer of Fergus Falls, was found to be $1,351 short in his accounts recently, and the elevator company by which he was employed preferred a criminal charge against him.

The justice before whom the complaint was filed came to the conclusion that Mr. Sand's difficulty was not due to anything bordering on embezzlement, but was the result of his failure to take a sufficient amount from the farmers in shortage, or to leaks from cars or errors in weighing.

Neighbors felt the same way, and a popular subscription was started and sufficient money raised in the course of a few days to satisfy the elevator company. The money has been turned over and the case dismissed.

There is much criticism of the present law, as failure to dock sufficiently or errors in weighing may subject any elevator agent to charges of shortage and consequent imprisonment.

Form Independent District.

By a vote of 252 to 30 the citizens of Jordan decided to change the form of the school district in which is situated the Jordan high school from a common school district to an independent district. The members of the first board of education under the new plan are C. H. Hasey, F. H. Jurgens, Math Hennes, G. O. Orr, S. L. Caswell and George B. Strait. The school will graduate six this year.

Desperate Maniac Dies.

Frank Vandyke, who murdered his cellmate, Erick Lindberg, in the Duluth jail Dec. 12, 1904, died at the insane hospital at Fergus Falls last week. Vandyke and Lindberg were both in jail for trifling offenses. They had arisen in the morning and Lindberg was stooping over to tie his shoe when Vandyke seized a heavy iron bucket and struck him a terrific blow on the back of the head, crushing the skull. There were serious doubts as to his mental responsibility, and he was finally committed to the hospital.

RESUME OF THE NEWS

Fresh——Reliable——Brief

Notes From Washington.

The senate passed the urgent deficiency bill, providing money for the opening of Indian reservations in the Northwest.

The president has formally accepted the resignation of Horace A .Taylor, assistant secretary of the treasury, to take effect June 30. He will soon leave for a tour of the world.

MADRID GREETS FUTURE QUEEN

ARRIVAL OF PRINCESS ENA IS MARKED BY GREAT DEMONSTRATION.

ROYAL BRIDE MAKES A HIT

CROWDS TENDER MAGNIFICENT OVATION TO ALFONSO'S SWEETHEART.

Madrid, May 27.—The arrival of the future queen of Spain at the Pardo palace last evening was the signal for a magnificent ovation testifying Spain's welcome to her new sovereign. At 6:30 o'clock the royal train reached the outskirts of the palace park. Here a special station had been prepared, consisting of a majestic floral arch, beneath which was suspended a huge crown of red roses and yellow jonquils.

It was dusk as King Alfonso and Princess Ena entered the floral station.

Greeted by Queen Mother.

Awaiting them there were the queen mother, the infantas Isabella, Eulalie and Maria Theresa, Prince Ferdinand, the members of the government and the officials of Madrid. The queen mother embraced her son and his prospective bride. The party then passed between lines of halberdiers bearing pikes, and, entering carriages, took up the route to the palace.

Ladies of the Madrid nobility occupied boxes along the route, from which they strewed the path of the royal party with flowers. As the party passed Princess Ena acknowledged the act with a wave of her handkerchief.

Tumultuous Cheering.

Enormous crowds of people of Madrid had assembled outside the palace gates, the government giving the most free rein to popular curiosity. The passage of the royal party was greeted with tumultuous cheering and cries of "Long live the queen," "Long live the king," and "Long live Spain."

After entering the palace King Alfonso directed that the public be admitted to the grounds. The crowds surged up the avenues, forming a dense throng immediately in front of the portico. The king appeared on the upper balcony holding Princess Ena by the hand.

Pleased With Ena.

The crowd stood with bared heads, too greatly impressed to cheer, but a deep wave of emotion swept over the throng. Princess Ena, with a radiant smile, gave a characteristic English wave of her hand. King Alfonso and the princess appeared on the balcony three times and saluted the people. All Madrid resounds with praise of Princess Ena's charms.

KING'S SON FIGHTS DUEL.

Offspring of Milan of Servia Wounded in Three Places.

Vienna, May 27.—A son of the late King Milan of Servia fought a duel with another student late yesterday at Klausenburg in Trannsylvania. He was wounded in three places. His guardian, Count Zichy, has gone to Klausenburg to inquire as to his condition. On the assassination of King Alexander of Servia in 1903, without heirs, the legitimate male line of the Obrenovitch dynasty became extinct. Queen Natalie, the widow of King Milan and mother of King Alexander, is the only representative of the family, but Milan is known to have left other children, and the son just wounded in a duel may possibly be a future claimant for the throne of Servia.

MISS MILLER IS ORDAINED.

Becomes Regular Minister in Congregational Church.

Fargo, N. D., May 27.—Miss Frances E. Miller was ordained a minister at the First Congregational church last evening, the ordination sermon being preached by Dr. Dudley. After the services there was a reception in honor of Miss Miller, given by the ladies of the church and of Fargo college. Miss Miller graduated from Fargo college in the class of '02. Recently she has been associated with Evangelist William Sunday in the holding of revival meetings.

Nashville, Tenn., May 27.—The federal grand jury which has been investigating the alleged fertilizer trust, yesterday rendered indictments against about eighty persons.

Young Woman Hangs Herself.

West Bend, Wis., May 27.—After a visit to the Northern hospital for insane at Oshkosh, Mary Walsh, a prominent young woman, hanged herself yesterday. Her brother is confined in the asylum, and she was seized with melancholia after seeing him there.

Sailor Killed at Baseball.

Norfolk, Va., May 27.—Jesse Robertson, a United States sailor, died at the naval hospital here yesterday from a fractured skull received while playing baseball.

NEBRASKA HIT BY CYCLONE

CONSIDERABLE DAMAGE DONE—TWO PERSONS RECEIVE INJURIES.

Oakland, Neb., May 27.—A cyclone passed over the west side of Oakland at 3 o'clock yesterday. The cloud formed at the Logan creek, going north. At the new town of Uehling, eight miles south, doors were blown from the elevator and the roof was blown from a car, striking Carl Johnson, aged fourteen years, slightly injuring him. Oscar Johnson, who was driving in a lumber wagon, received a slight scalp wound, his horses became separated and his wagon was found half a mile away. At John Peterson's, four miles north of Oakland, the kitchen was blown away and the main part of the house moved from its foundation. At Alf Walberg's, three miles south, the barns and corn cribs were destroyed. In Oakland trees were badly twisted and coal sheds of the Farmers' Grain and Live Stock company were blown onto the railroad tracks. Large hailstones broke a few windows.

Tornado in Iowa.

Sioux City, Iowa, May 27.—A tornado struck Whiting, Iowa, thirty miles south of here at 6 o'clock last evening and demolished a residence and barn. The occupants of the house saw the storm approaching and took refuge in the cellar. No other damage was done.

Killed by a Tornado.

Waxahachie, Tex., May 27.—The residence of J. D. Duke, a farmer living eight miles east of here, was struck by a tornado yesterday and demolished. An infant nine days old was killed and other members of the family hurt.

IS BRUTALLY MURDERED.

Minneapolis Man Is Kicked and Beaten to Death.

Minneapolis, May 27. — Frank A. Grain was kicked and beaten to death about 2 o'clock yesterday morning in a resort at 217 Eleventh avenue south kept by a woman known as Amelia Mayers. Al McEwan, who admits having committed the assault upon Grain, is locked up at the South side station, and Julius Hoffner, husband of the Mayer woman, who was McEwan's companion, and who is accused of having inspired McEwan to his act of brutality, is under arrest at the central station. James Jarvis, piano player at the house where the trouble occurred, and all of the occupants of the place are held by the police as witnesses.

Although not divorced from Hoffner, the Mayer woman had not been living with him for some time, and it was understood that Grain had supplanted the husband in the woman's affections. This, it is believed by the police, was the cause of the trouble yesterday morning. McEwan freely admits that it was he who assaulted Grain, and says that Hoffner induced him to do it.

INSURANCE MEN FACE SUIT.

Restoration of Northwestern National Funds Demanded.

Minneapolis, May 27.—That $50,000 was illegally paid out of the funds of the Northwestern National Life Insurance company to influence legislation in 1901 and $30,000 more in the session of 1903 is one of the allegations made in a complaint filed in the Hennepin county district court yesterday by James Robertson in a civil suit against the former officers of the insurance company. The purpose of this suit is to compel a restoration of the funds of the company involved in the alleged illegal acts of the former officers who are now under indictment on criminal charges. The complain is directed against William F. Bechtel, Dr. Jacob F. Force, Fred J. Sackett, Wallace Campbell, A. F. Timme, H. B. Willis, George Heywood and the Northwestern National Life Insurance company.

EARTH QUAKES IN HILLS.

Cyclone Also Occurs and Sweeps Over Large Area.

Lead, S. D., May 27.—Reports have been received here regarding a serious stom which swept over Sundance and vicinity. In the town of Sundance itself a distinct earthquake shock was felt by many of the inhabitants, but no damage resulted. In the outlying country a severe cyclone swept over a large district, completely destroying one farm house and a barn of a neighboring ranch. The storm came up in the vicinity of Bear lake and made its way northwest.

Kills Wife and Self.

Rock Island, Ill., May 27.—Gustave Englin yesterday, after a futile attempt to effect a reconciliation with his wife, broke into her home and shot her dead. He also fired at his twelve-year-old daughter and missed. Englin then put a bullet through his own heart.

Killed by Blast.

Glenwood, Wis., May 27. — While blasting rock in the stone quarry of Pat Deneen at Cranetown, a little settlement south of here, William Campbell was instantly killed by a flying rock. He had prepared a charge of dynamite and lighted the fuse and stepped back, but did not get far enough away and was hit by a piece of rock when the charge exploded. He was about eighty years old and had lived near this city for the past twenty years.

CZAR TO OFFER SOME REFORMS

ABOLISHMENT OF PETTY ADMINISTRATIVE DESPOTS IS INCLUDED.

RUSHING ON TO REVOLUTION

ACTIVITY IS INCREASING AND CONFLICTS ARE OF DAILY OCCURRENCE.

St. Petersburg, May 27. — Premier Goremykin at 3 o'clock this afternoon will read before the lower house of parliament the government's response to the address in reply to the speech from the throne, and announce the government's policy.

The purpose of M. Goremykin's trip to Peterhof yesterday, the Associated Press learns, was to read to Emperor Nicholas the final draft of the cabinet's declaration of policy and was not connected in any wise with the rumored shift in the ministry, which, however, is possible at no distant day. The emperor at the last moment advised a few changes in the declaration. These caused a hurried meeting of the cabinet at which alterations were drafted and inserted.

Will Be Largely Negative.

The Conservative-Liberal newspaper Strana (country), which claims to have inside information, says the recommendation will be largely negative, but there will be a positive proposal for reform in local administdation, including the abolishment of the hated "zemsky nachalniks" or petty administrative despots, whose tyranny is one of the main grievances of the peasantry, and the placing of gendarmes and rural police under the control of the judiciary instead of the administrative branch. With regard to amnesty, the cabinet will declare for a continuation of the wholesale release as fast as possible, but will insist that a general amnesty is inexpedient.

General Strike Likely.

A dispatch to the Associated Press from Moscow says that denial of full amnesty probably will be followed by a general strike. Similar news has been received from other industrial centers.

The plan advocated by the majority of the Constitutional Democrats is that, if the premier's speech is found unsatisfactory, a vote of lack of confidence in the ministry will be passed, thus forcing upon the government the issue of supplanting the cabinet with one more in harmony with the party and the lower house. If this course is followed, unless the emperor is prepared to yield immediately, it is sure to hasten a conflict.

Rushing on to Revolution.

In spite of the moderate counsel of the leaders, the Constitutional Democrats are being pressed on by the denunciations of the radical elements toward an open rupture. Revolutionary activity is increasing throughout the country and there is evidence that revolutionary emissaries are traveling through the country stirring up hatred against the nobles and landlords and encouraging the peasants to strike for the ostensible purpose of forcing parliament to hasten the distribution of lands.

Daily Conflicts Reported.

On the other hand, the agents of reaction are adopting the same tactics in favor of a dispersal of parliament, and a return to autocracy. As a result of this propaganda, threatening letters have been received by many members of parliament and dispatches from the interior report daily conflicts between the followers of the two extreme parties.

SHOOTS LOVER; KILLS SELF.

Because She Would Leave Him, Man Wounds Handsome Companion.

New York, May 27—Because she had threatened to leave him and had shown him a photograph of her new lover, John Kindrovics yesterday shot and wounded Cecilia McGarry, a handsome woman, in their apartments in West Forty-fourth street. When the police broke into his apartment, Kindrovics killed himself by a shot in the brain. Miss McGarry will recover.

HELP FOR FIRE SUFFERERS.

Over $2,000 Raised in the Vicinity of Marquette.

Marquette, Mich., May 27. — The fund for forest fire sufferers in this vicinity now amounts to over $2,000, of which the county board has appropriated $1,500. A great quantity of clothing and furniture has been contributed by the general public and those burned out will be looked after.

Wu Goes Into Retirement.

New York, May 27.—A dispatch from Pekin to the Times says:

"Wu Ting-fang left Pekin to-day. He goes into retirement, and after visiting the tombs of his ancestors, will reside at Shanghai. Wu retires discouraged by the outlook for reform."

Cornell Beats Harvard.

Boston, May 27.—Cornell won her second annual boat race with Harvard yesterday afternoon by about three lengths. Harvard made a much better showing than in last year's race.

HIRED TO KILL OFF COMPETITORS

OIL TRUST EMPLOYE WAS ORDERED TO USE EVERY MEANS, FAIR OR FOUL.

FOUND GUILTY OF REBATING

BROKER AND CLERK CONVICTED —BURLINGTON OFFICIAL DISCHARGED.

Cleveland, Ohio, May 27.—A total of nineteen witnesses were called by Interstate Commerce Commissioners Prouty and Clements in the Standard Oil inquiry here yesterday. Testimony bordering on the sensational was obtained from several witnesses. That of George L. Lane of Mansfield, Ohio, a former employe of the Standard Oil company, was regarded as particularly important. According to his evidence, Lane was for about fourteen months in 1901 and 1902 employed by the Standard Oil company for the particular purpose of driving all independent oil peddlers in a dozen or more of the principal cities and towns of Northern Ohio out of business.

Use Fair Means or Foul.

He said he was employed by C. M. Lyons of the Cleveland office of the Standard Oil company to go to certain designated places and use every means, fair or foul, to force the independents to quit.

"My instructions," he said, "were to kill them and I was told that if I could not do the job somebody else would be sent to take my place. I worked in Youngstown and surrounding small towns. In all of the towns, with the exception of Youngstown, the independent peddlers were forced to abandon their business. In Youngstown a man named William H. Vahey was encountered, and, despite everything we could do, he held his trade. We gave oil away by the barrel and tank load, but it did no good. Vahey's customers threw it away."

Gigantic Telegraph System.

Miss Elizabeth Protzman, a stenographer and bookkeeper in the Dayton, Ohio, office of the Standard Oil company, testified that information concerning the oil shipment of rivals was brought into the office by draymen.

John O'Brien, general superintendent of the Lima division of the Buckeye Pipe Line company, a Standard concern, was asked particularly about the Standard's telegraph system. The inquiries succeeded in establishing the general fact that the Standard has an immense telegraph system of its own extending to nearly every part of the country. The company has its own wires, leased or otherwise, operators, offices, regulations, blanks and other stationery, and sometimes sends messages for persons not connected with the company.

Ruined by Trust Methods.

D. E. Byles, secretary and treasurer of the Independent Refining company, offered testimony concerning railroad rate discrimination against his company, and that in order to hurt their business in Indiana the Standard agents circulated reports that the Oil City company was in reality a Standard concern.

Frank J. Heimerich of Bellevue, Ohio, told how his independent oil business was all but ruined by the methods of the Standard.

GUILTY OF CONSPIRACY.

Freight Broker and Clerk Convicted, But Railroad Official Is Discharged.

Kansas City, May 27. — George L. Thomas, a freight broker, and L. B. Taggart, a clerk working for Thomas, in the United States district court here late yesterday were found guilty of the charge of conspiracy illegally to give rebates to shippers. The jury considered the case only thirty minutes before arriving at a verdict. Attorneys for the defendants will file a motion for a new trial and the motion will be argued to-day. The court will not pronounce sentence against Thomas and Taggart until the motion for a new trial is disposed of.

George H. Crosby, general freight traffic manager for the Burlington railway, on trial on the same charge, was discharged, the court sustaining a demurrer alleging that no evidence had been presented to connect Crosby with a conspiracy.

Sensational Testimony.

Philadelphia, May 26—Several interesting developments marked the closing session of the interstate commerce commission's investigation into the alleged discrimination by railroads in the distribution of cars in the bituminous coal field. The commission adjourned yesterday to meet at a time and place to be decided upon later.

Testimony of a sensational nature was given yesterday by F. Albert von Boyneburg, general manager of the Reakert Bros. company, coal operators. He stated that within the last two and a half years his company's car supply had been so inadequate that the business had been practically ruined. He declared that other companies had been favored in the distribution of cars, and said he had no doubt that discrimination was practiced against his company because it had failed to make gifts of stock to the railroad officials. He gave it as his opinion that President A. J. Cassatt was responsible for the discrimination.

SEND BILL TO CONFERENCE

HOUSE DISAGREES TO SENATE AMENDMENTS TO THE RATE BILL.

Washington, May 26. — The house was turbulent during the consideration of the rule sending the rate bill to conference, the fear of many members being that the rule which disagreed to the senate amendments en bloc might have an influence on the conferees and give them an opportunity if they so desired, to vote out the express company amendment, the amendment relating to pipe lines, and the sleeping car amendment.

With the assurance that the wishes of the house would be considered on all the amendments, the rule was adopted.

The senate passed the agricultural appropriation bill, carrying an appropriation of $7,800,000, and without a word of debate or an objection from any source added to it as an amendment the bill providing for an inspection of fresh meats intended for domestic consumption.

The provision is along the general lines of the law for the inspection of meats intended to be shipped abroad, and the work is delegated to the bureau of animal industry.

WILL OPEN BADGER LAND.

Railroad Deal Is Consummated by Milwaukee Company.

Superior, Wis., May 27—For the purpose of opening up Northern Wisconsin cut-over lands to farmers a Milwaukee land company has closed a deal for purchase of the Minneapolis, St. Paul & Ashland railway. The road has served as a logging line for a number of years. All the timber has been cut, and the road will now be turned into a passenger and freight line between Ashland, Port Wing, Bayfield and Cornucopia. It will open farming lands which are now practically isolated. It is the intention of the company, it is said, to build spurs at various points along the main line.

PRIEST AIDS SUNDAY BALL.

Decides to Arrange Services So Pious Fans May See Games.

Iowa Falls, Iowa, May 27.—Realizing that Sunday baseball has come to stay in his parish, Rev. Father Theodore Waring of Dyersville, faces the situation boldly and announces a change in the hour of his church services so that the fans can attend divine worship and afterward can go to the baseball game. Sunday baseball in Dyersville has become a fixture through long years of practice, so the pastor has agreed with the management of the ball games to hold his services in the afternoon a half hour earlier and the baseball magnates will call the game a half-hour later.

LITTLE GIRL'S HEAD CRUSHED.

Four-Year-Old Fatally Hurt While Watching Her Father Sawing Logs.

Browerville, Minn., May 27.—A peculiar accident occurred at the home of Michael Motzko, two miles from here. Mr. Motzko was sawing some large logs that lay on skids, one end of which was somewhat lower than the other. His little four-year-old daughter was sitting on the log which he was sawing, and when it was cut through it suddenly rolled and the child lost her balance and was caught between the rolling log and another and her head crushed. She lived three hours but did not recover consciousness.

FIBER PLANT IS WIPED OUT.

Big Winona Concern Has $114,000 Fire.

Winona, Minn., May 27.—At an early hour yesterday morning the main buildings of the Union Fiber company in the west part of the city were entirely destroyed by fire. Three men were in the buildings at the time the fire started, but all have been accounted for. Last Sunday the Union Fiber company suffered a loss of about $10,000 caused by the burning of one of the largest warehouses, which, with yesterday's fire practically annihilates the plant. The loss is estimated at $114,000; covered by insurance.

SURVIVES DIVE FROM FLYER.

Man Pitches From Train Window but Is Unhurt.

Harvey, N. D., May 27. — While a west-bound passenger train was speeding along at fifty miles an hour a passenger named Samuel Adams, who was leaning out of the window, lost his balance and pitched head foremost down an embankment into a ditch of water. The train was stopped and backed up, and Adams was found sitting on the edge of the ditch but little injured. Beyond a slight scalp wound he showed no ill effects from his perilous dive, and boarded the train and continued his journey to this place.

INSURANCE MEN FACE SUIT.

Restoration of Northwestern National Funds Demanded.

Minneapolis, May 27.—That $50,000 was illegally paid out of the funds of the Northwestern National Life Insurance company to influence legislation in 1901 and $30,000 more in the session of 1903 is one of the allegations made in a complaint filed in the Hennepin county district court yesterday by James Robertson in a civil suit against the former officers of the insurance company. The purpose of this suit is to compel a restoration of the funds of the company involved in the alleged illegal acts of the former officers who are now under indictment on criminal charges. The complain is directed against William F. Bechtel, Dr. Jacob F. Force, Fred J. Sackett, Wallace Campbell, A. F. Timme, H. B. Willia, George Heywood and the Northwestern National Life Insurance company.

West Bend, Wis., May 27.—After a visit to the Northern hospital for insane at Oshkosh, Mary Walsh, a prominent young woman, hanged herself yesterday. Her brother is confined in the asylum, and she was seized with melancholia after seeing him there.

ELYSIAN FIFTY YEARS OLD.

Le Sueur County Town Will Celebrate Anniversary.

Unusual interest is attached to the meeting of the Lake Elysian Old Settlers' association which will be held at Elysian on June 14. This is due to the fact that the citizens of Elysian are planning to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of their town while the pioneers are with them.

William Lee, who was a member of the party that helped Surveyor Wright drive stakes and lay out the lines of the townsite in June, 1856, says that it was then covered with heavy timber, and that the only building in Elysian was a small log cabin near the site of the present Catholic church. The village of Okaman was platted the following year and another town, which was christened Empire, was established in Iosco township. This was before the organization of the village of Janesville, and the people of that place were compelled to hold their town meetings at Empire, of which not a vestige now remains.

The grist mill at Okaman was erected in May, 1857, and Mr. Lee recalls that there was ice floating in Lake Elysian on the first day of that month. After the Okaman mill was built that village prospered, and for twenty years was a flourishing little place and promised to out-distance Elysian. When the St. Louis road was built through to Mankato the settlement at Elysian revived and continued to spread out, while not a building is left to mark the spot where the thriving and promising town of Okaman once stood.

As the semi-centennial occurs in the same month in which the old settlers' meeting is held each year, a more pretentious program than usual will be prepared.

MANKATO NORMAL TURNS OUT 88

Seventy-Five of These Already Elected to Good Positions.

On Wednesday evening, June 6, eighty-eight young teachers will receive their diplomas from the state normal school at Mankato. Seventy-five of them have already been elected to teach in the public schools of the state. Others to graduate in the summer will bring the total up to 140.

The exercises of commencement week will begin Friday evening, June 1, with the senior class supper. The following Sunday evening the annual sermon will be preached by Rev. Clement G. Clark of Minneapolis in the Presbyterian church. The faculty reception to the alumni and graduating class will take place Tuesday evening, June 5, in the library. The senior chapel service will be held on Wednesday, June 6, at 9 a. m., and the graduating exercises that evening at normal hall. Gov. Johnson will make the address, and Eli Torrance of Minneapolis, a member of the state normal board, will present the diplomas to the graduates.

COWS FROM ST. PETER.

State Board of Control May Call for Supply.

The state board of control has not yet purchased any milch cows to take the place of those slaughtered, which were found to be infected, at the Fergus Falls asylum.

The inmates of the asylum consume seven hundred quarts of milk a day and the supply of the lacteal fluid must now be curtailed as the management of the asylum depend on the farmers in the vicinity for their supply.

The butchering of 76 of the 84 cows at the asylum came as a sensation to the persons connected with the Fergus Falls asylum as the barns were kept in a sanitary condition, and the officials are now trying to find out how the cows became infected.

O. B. Gould of the board of control stated that cows would probably be supplied from the St. Peter hospital.

ABDUCTION IS CHARGED.

Father and Son Must Answer for Serious Offense.

Both Edward Sager and his son, Frank, of Fairmont, hase been indicted by the Martin county grand jury, charged with having abducted Mary Anderson, the fifteen-year-old daughter of Lewis Anderson, for the purpose of having her marry Frank Sager, seventeen years of age. The story of the case will be remembered, as the young couple eloped to La Crosse, Wis., where they were refused a marriage license. Crossing the river to Winona they were more successful, and were married on the last day of January. The parents of the bride accused the old Sager of having had an important part in planning the elopement.

TAFT TO WAIT UNTIL DEC. 1.

Says No Decision Is Reached in Judgeship.

Washington, May 26. — Secretary Taft yesterday authorized the statement that no conclusion has been reached regarding his prospective appointment to the supreme court of the United States. The subject has gone over until Dec. 1, when congress will meet for its second session and when the successor of Justice Brown will be named.

Earthquake In Cleveland.

Cleveland, May 25.—An earthquake shock lasting forty-eight seconds was recorded here yesterday upon the seismograph at St. Ignatius college. The initial movement came from the east and the return shock from the west.

NEW ROUTE IS READY.

Dewey Lake Line to International Falls Is 77 Miles Long.

The survey of the Great Northern's new line into International Falls has been completed. It took Engineer Eddy and his crew just a month to complete the line from Dewey Lake to International Falls, which is fast time considering the heavily timbered country through which the line will pass. The distance by the line established is seventy-seven miles and Mr. Eddy says that it is an extraordinarily favorable country for railroad building, as there are no bad cuts or fills and few swamps.

From Sturgeon Lake to International Falls the line was run ten degrees west of north and there were so few deviations that it practically is an air line. Though the present survey is only preliminary to establish a base line from which to work, on account of similarity of the adjacent country, the engineers did not believe the permanent route would vary much from the base line. The route established would take the line into International Falls down Second avenue, but it is not yet known where the depot and terminals will be situated.

The climax of six months' negotiations between the Koochiching company and the Duluth, Rainy Lake & Winnipeg railroad has settled all doubt as to where that road will cross the river, and there is no longer any doubt that International Falls will not get the road, but that a rival town will be established at Pither's Point. The Cook interests, which control the new road, have maintained from the start that they would, if unable to come to terms with the Koochiching company, cross the river at Pither's Point, and would build saw mills there and establish a rival city. They have exercised options held on property at that point, and have acquired a quantity of valuable land on which to build their terminals and for townsite purposes.

OFFICE TO TERMINATE.

No More Use for Surveyor General of Logs and Lumber.

Notice of the discontinuance of the office of the United States surveyor general of logs and lumber has been received by Gov. Johnson. The order will not go into effect until June 30, 1907. The notice is given at this early time so as to allow the legislature, when it meets next winter, to make arrangements for taking over by the state of the records of the office. Eli S. Warner now holds the office.

The letter to Gov. Johnson explained that because of the early completion of surveying work by the government in Minnesota the further continuance of the office is unnecessary. According to the statute, when the office of United States surveyor general of logs and lumber is discontinued, the records and archives shall be turned over to the secretary of state. They shall not be turned over, however, until the state has provided by law for their reception and safe keeping as public records.

GUARD WILL NOT GO.

Adjt. Gen. Wood Rules Against Maneuvers at Fort Riley.

The Minnesota national guard will not participate in the military maneuvers at Fort Riley, Kan., this year. F. B. Wood, adjutant general, has been invited to send a portion of the state guard, but he has decided that it will not be feasible. Very few of the members of the guard are so situated that their business duties would permit them being away more than ten days. If ten days were given for the trip the greater part of this would be consumed in going and coming, so that there would be but little time to spend at the camp.

This is the first time the military maneuvers have been held at a place so close to Minnesota. But Gen. Wood believes that conditions are not ripe yet for Minnesota to send a regiment or a battalion.

SUIT FOR TIMBER.

State Board Orders Action Against Minneapolis Firm.

The state timber board has authorized the commencement of a suit against Bonness & Howe, Minneapolis lumbermen, for the alleged cutting of 400,000 feet of lumber from state lands in Hubbard county. The timber is said to have been cut during the winters of 1902, 1903 and 1904. If treble damages are collected, as the state will make an effort to do, it will cost the company about $10,000.

Cruisers have been surveying the stumpage, and when they made their report the board immediately ordered the attorney general to bring the suits.

PAYING OLD BONDS.

The state funding commission, composed of the governor, the auditor and the treasurer, decided to pay $50,000 of the old refundment bonds of 1891. This will leave $700,000 of these bonds still in force.

This much remains of the railroad bonds issued by the state in 1858, amounting to $5,000,000. Part of these bonds were refunded in 1881 and again in 1891. The money is paid out of the funding tax fund.

Want Bible in Schools.

Wheeling, W. Va., May 26. — The International Order of King's Daughters yesterday urged that the legislatures of each state be petitioned to pass bills making the reading of the Bible in schools compulsory.

Just Finding It Out?

THE American people are paying pretty dear for the tariff and we are just finding it out.—Anoka Union (Rep.)

If it is the editorial "we" Granny Pease makes use of it it is one thing, if he means the American people it is an entirely different thing. Republicans of his stripe have blindly worshiped the god of protection for many years refusing to see or to learn that it was an iniquitous imposition upon which trusts fattened but cunningly exploited as protection to the laboring man. Have Pease and his kind so soon forgotten the cry of the "full dinner" which was the catch-word of high tariff? Have they forgotten that for as long as the Republicans have been howling for high tariff, the Democrates have been warning the people of the ultimate result? It is probably true the republicans are "just finding it out" but the lateness of the day is the saddest kind of a commentary on their intelligence. Republicans of the McCleary stripe probably never will find it out.

EVEN in advance one almost pities McCleary for the things Gutterson and Eddy would do to him.

McCLEARY is still standing pat. Some day a man with as much as a pair of deuces will call him and beat him a mile. It is one of the rules of the game that the man who is caught bluffing, loses.

AMONG the mentionees for county office in this county is Fred Richards of Red Lake Falls who, it is reported, will seek the Democratic nomination for superintendent of schools. He is a bright young man and would be a credit to the position.

THIS is the way the Crookston Times stutters when it thinks of the Rockefeller millions.

"Thirty thousand barrels of gasoline belonging to the Standard Oil company blew up the other day, but the other day, but the company is not company is not unduly worried."

THE saturnine-faced ascetic, who goes about this narrow world with a face on him longer than a coupon ticket to San Francisco and imagines he is worshiping God according to the dictates of his own conscience, is mistaken in the diagnosis of his disease; he hasn't got religon, he's got dyspepsia.

THE Thief River Falls Press and News are the worst lot of news pirates in all Minnesota journalism. But at that they are but a lap ahead of the Crookston papers. It is really funny at times to see the Crookston papers swipe a column or so of news from the Red Lake Falls papers, and the only sgin of credit is a Red Lake Falls date line.

THE Thief River Press last week credits a slam at that city to the COURIER, which it wasn't guilty of. We don't care anything about that however except as it offers an oppurtunity, we have long been looking for, to say to both the Press and News that if they will credit the COURIER with one half the stuff they swipe from it, they will have all they can do to keep their readers from believing they are edited in Red Lake Falls.

Is it not a pretty good sign that Jacobson would be a strong candidate when the Democratic press of the state, nearly without exception, try to discourage his nomination.—Benson Review.

The Jacobson organs are hard up for argument. We have not noticed an attack upon Jocobsen in a Democratic newspaper, with possibly a single exception. The Democratic press seems to be satisfied with the strength of their candidate and the merit of their cause, and do not find it necessary or politic to resort to criticism of any of the candidates for the Republican nomination.

LOCAL NEWS

Miss Martha Alstadt returned to her home Tuesday after closing a term of school in the northern part of the county.

Among those going to Gentilly Sunday to witness the ball game were Ray Dautremont, Carl Krueger, Omer Huot, H. Blaisdell and Arthur Guillmette.

Neighborhood troubles in the Beausoliel and Doyea families had an airing in Judge Swanson's court Saturday and Monday resulting in two arrests and one conviction. On Saturayd Mrs. Virginia Doyea had Dolphis Beausoliel arrested on a charge of assault. At the conclusion of the hearing Beausoliel was discharged. On Monday Beausoliel had John Doyea arrested charging him with threats to kill. The testimony showed Doyea had armed himself with a revolver and had gone about saying he would shoot Beausoliel. Doyea was found guilty and required to furnish $200 bonds to keep the peace. In default of the bonds, he is serving 90 days in jail. County Attorney Germo and C. E. Boughton were the attorneys engaged.

$8.50 PUNCTURE-PROOF TIRES ONLY $4.80 PER PAIR

Regular Price $8.50 per pair. To Introduce We Will Sell You a Sample Pair for Only $4.80 NAILS, TACKS OR GLASS WON'T LET OUT THE AIR (CASH WITH ORDER $4.55)

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES.

HEDGETHORN PUNCTURE PROOF SELF HEALING RECORD TIRE CO CHICAGO U.S.A.

Result of 15 years experience in tire making. No danger from THORNS, CACTUS, PINS, NAILS, TACKS or GLASS. Serious punctures, like intentional knife cuts, can be vulcanized like any other tire.

Two Hundred Thousand pairs now in actual use. Over Seventy-five Thousand pairs sold last year.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. That "Holding Back" sensation commonly felt when riding on asphalt or soft roads is overcome by the patent "Basket Weave" tread which prevents all air from being squeezed out between the tire and the road thus overcoming all suction. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C.O.D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. We will also send one nickel plated brass hand pump and two Sampson metal puncture closers on full paid orders (these metal puncture closers to be used in case of intentional knife cuts or heavy gashes). Tires to be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination.

We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. Ask your Postmaster, Banker, Express or Freight Agent or the Editor of this paper about us. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a small trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

COASTER-BRAKES, built-up-wheels, saddles, pedals, parts and repairs, and everything in the bicycle line are sold by us at half the usual prices charged by dealers and repair men. Write for our big SUNDRY catalogue.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Hannay have issued invitations for the marriage of Miss Helen Hannay and George Benjamen Grace, which will take place Wednesday, June 6, at 5 p. m. at the bride's home on Water street. The prominence of the two young people in the social circle of the village will make the wedding by far the most important social function of the season. Mr. and Mrs. Grace will be at home at Mt. Vernon, Washington, after October 1st.

The Ladies Aid of the M. E. church will meet with Mrs. Antoine Thursday afternoon, May 31.

R. H. Aimer returned from an extended trip to Canada, Sunday.

Dr. and Mrs. Grace and daughter, Nan of Davenport, Iowa, are expected Thursday to attend the Grace-Hannay wedding.

Hans Hanson has been appointed stable boss at the saw mill and has moved into the residence near the mill.

Mrs. G. L. Austin leaves Friday for a two weeks' visit at Fergus Falls.

A large crowd gathered around the dam Saturday afternoon and saw the wanagan go over.

OLD SORES OFTEN LEAD TO CANCER

Whenever a sore or ulcer does not heal and shows signs of becoming chronic, it should arouse suspicion, because many of these places lead to Cancer. It may appear as an ordinary sore at first, and is given treatment as such, with some simple salve, wash or plaster, with the hope that the place will heal, but the real seat of the trouble is in the blood and cannot be reached by external remedies, and soon the sore will return. After awhile the deadly poison begins to eat into the surrounding flesh and the ulcer spreads rapidly, becoming more offensive and alarming until at last the sufferer finds he is afflicted with Cancer. Cancerous ulcers often start from a boil, wart, mole or pimple, which has been bruised or roughly handled, showing that the taint is in the blood, perhaps inherited. Another cause for non-healing ulcers and sores is the remains of some constitutional disease or the effects of a long spell of sickness. S. S. S. goes down to the very root of the trouble and cures so thoroughly that there is never any sign of the trouble in after years. As soon as the system gets under the influence of S. S. S. the place begins to improve, the discharge gradually grows less, the inflammation leaves, the flesh resumes its healthy color, and soon the sore is well, because every vestige of the cause has been removed from the blood. Book on sores and ulcers and medical advice without charge. THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., ATLANTA, GA.

I was suffering greatly from a cancerous ulcer on my left breast, which had begun to eat, and at times would discharge very offensive matter. I knew the trouble was hereditary as an only sister, my mother and two of her sisters died of Cancer. I am fully satisfied I would have gone the same way but for S. S. S., which cured me.
